

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Pardon.*

[27 Edw. III. c. 2; 13 Rich. II. st. 2, c. 1; 5 Wil. c. 13; 12 & 13 Wil. c. 2; 20 Geo. II. c. 52; 30 Geo. III. c. 47; 37 Geo. III. c. 140; 58 Geo. III. c. 29; 6 Geo. IV. c. 25; 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 13; 9 Geo. IV. c. 32.]

A PARDON is a work of mercy, whereby the king, either before the attain- What.
 der, sentence, or conviction, or after, forgiveth any crime, offence, punishment, execution, right, title, debt, or duty, temporal or ecclesiastical. 3 Inst.
 233.

The power of pardoning offences is inseparably incident to, and is the ^{Granted by king.}
 most amiable prerogative of, the crown; and this high prerogative the King is entrusted with upon a special confidence that he will spare those only whose case (could it have been foreseen) the law itself may be presumed willing to have been excepted out of its general rules; which the wisdom of man cannot possibly make so perfect as to suit every particular case. 1 Show.

lieutenant-governor of any place to which convicts are transported, to remit the term of transportation.

General pardon. Pardons are either general or special: general, are by act of Parliament; of which, if they are without exceptions, the court must take notice ex officio: but if there are exceptions therein, the party must aver that he is none of the persons excepted. 3 Inst. 233. Hale's Sum. 252.

By the 20 Geo. II. c. 52, for the king's general pardon, all persons are pardoned and discharged from certain crimes committed prior to June 15, 1647; with certain exemptions in the said act mentioned.

And the like for the most part hath been enacted by former statutes of general pardon; together, also, with the exceptions of several persons by name.

Special pardon. Special pardons are either of course, as to persons convicted of manslaughter, or se defendendo, and by divers statutes to those who shall discover their accomplices in several felonies; or of grace, which are by the king's charter, of which the court cannot take notice ex officio, but they must be pleaded. 3 Inst. 233.

What pardon-able. As to what offences are pardonable in general, see 1 Chit. C. L. 672.

Offence before committed. The king cannot pardon an offence before it be committed; and such pardon is void. 2 Haw. c. 37, s. 28.

Nuisances. And in some cases, even where the king is sole party, some things there are which he cannot pardon: as, for example, for all common nuisances, as for not repairing bridges or highways, the suit (for avoiding multiplicity of suits) is given to the king only for redress and reformation thereof; but the king cannot pardon or discharge either the nuisance, or the suit for the same; because such pardon would take away the only means of compelling a redress of it. But it hath been holden by some, that a pardon of such offence will save the party from any fine for the time precedent to the pardon. 3 Inst. 237. 2 Haw. c. 37, s. 33.

Fines. And surely, a fine being a mulct to the king, and not a forfeiture to the party grieved, may be by the king remitted.

Impeachment. By the act of settlement, 12 & 13 Wil. III. c. 2, no pardon, under the great seal of England, shall be pleadable to an impeachment by the Commons in Parliament. But it seems, after the impeachment solemnly heard and determined, the royal grace is not farther restrained or abridged; for that to pardon delinquents convicted on impeachment is as ancient as the constitution. 4 Blac. Com. 400, n. 2.

But in the case of an impeachment, after the Lords have delivered their sentence of guilty, the Commons can pardon the party by declining to demand judgment against him; for no judgment can be pronounced by the Lords till it be demanded by the Commons. 4 Blac. Com. 400, n. 2.

Recognisances. Thus also, if one be bound by recognisance to the king to keep the peace against another by name, and generally all other lieges of the king, in this case, before the peace be broken, the king cannot pardon or release the recognisance, although it may be made only to him, because it is for the benefit and safety of his subjects. 1 Inst. 238.

Information quitam. Likewise, after an action popular is brought as well for the king as for the informer, according to any statute, the king can but discharge his own part, and cannot discharge the informer's part; because by bringing the action the informer hath an interest therein: but before the action brought, the king may discharge the whole, (unless it be provided to the contrary by the act,) because the informer cannot bring an action or information originally for his part only, but must pursue the statute. And if the action be given to the party grieved, the king cannot discharge the same. 3 Inst. 231.

By non-payment of money on 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29. By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 69, it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for the king's majesty to extend his royal mercy to any person imprisoned by virtue of this act (relating to larceny, &c.) ante, Vol. III. Larceny, although he shall be imprisoned for non-payment of money to some party other than the crown.

Suit in the spiritual court. It seems to have been always agreed that the king's pardon will discharge any suit in the spiritual court, ex officio. Also, it seems to be settled at this day, that it will discharge any suit in such court at the instance of the party, for the reformation of manners, or welfare of the soul, as for defamation, or laying violent hands on a clerk, and such like; for such suits are in truth the suits of the king, though prosecuted by the party. Also, it seems to be agreed that, if the time to which such pardon hath relation be prior to the award of costs to the party, it shall discharge them. And it seems to be the general tenor of the books, that though it be subsequent to the award of the costs, yet if it be prior to the taxation of them, it shall discharge them; because nothing appears in certain to be due for costs before they are taxed. 1 Haw. c. 37, s. 41.

Suit in spiritual court.

But it seems agreed that a pardon shall not discharge a suit in the spiritual court any more than in the temporal, for a matter of interest or property in the plaintiff; as for tithes, legacies, matrimonial contracts, and such like. Id. s. 42.

If the king release to a man all debts, this shall not discharge his co-debtor; but otherwise it is in case of a subject, for in that case the release to one discharges both. 3 Inst. 239.

Co-debtors.

A pardon could not formerly be pleaded, unless it were by act of Parliament or under the great seal; and the king's warrant under the sign-manual was not pleadable, as was held in the case of R. v. Beaton, 1 Bl. Rep. 479; Lord Warwick's case, 13 How. State Trials, 1015; Rex v. Gully, 1 Leach, 98.

King's sign-manual to pardon not requisite.

But now by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 13, it is declared and enacted, "That where the king's majesty shall be pleased to extend his royal mercy to any offender convicted of any felony, punishable with death or otherwise, and by warrant under his royal sign-manual, countersigned by one of his principal secretaries of state, shall grant to such offender either a free or a conditional pardon; the discharge of such offender out of custody in the case of a free pardon, and the performance of the condition in the case of a conditional pardon, shall have the effect of a pardon under the great seal for such offender, as to the felony for which such pardon shall be so granted."

"Provided always, that no free pardon, nor any such discharge in consequence thereof, nor any conditional pardon, nor the performance of the condition thereof in any of the cases aforesaid, shall prevent or mitigate the punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction, for any felony committed after the granting of any such pardon."

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 25, (which is not repealed), is similar to the first part of the above provision, except that the 6 Geo. IV. applies only to cases of felony excluded the benefit of clergy, whereas the above provision extends to all felonies.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 3, after reciting, "It is expedient to prevent all doubts respecting the civil rights of persons convicted of felonies not capital, who have undergone the punishment to which they were adjudged;" enacts, "that where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been or shall be adjudged for the same, the punishment so endured hath and shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal, as to the felony whereof the offender was so convicted. Provided always, that nothing herein contained, nor the enduring of such punishment, shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced, on a subsequent conviction for any other felony."

Every punishment for felony, after endured, shall have effect of a pardon under great seal.

Proviso.

By the 27 Edw. III. c. 2, in every charter of the pardon of felony, the suggestion, and the name of him that maketh the suggestion, shall be comprised; and, if it be found untrue, the charter shall be disallowed.

Pardon to contain the suggestion.

For, wherever it may reasonably be presumed that the king was deceived, the pardon is void. Therefore, any suppression of truth or suggestion of falsehood in a charter of pardon will vitiate the whole. 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 12; 3 Inst. 238.

Pardon to specify the offence, if murder, treason, or rape.

And, by stat. 13 Rich. II. st. 2, c. 1, no charter of pardon shall be allowed for murder, treason, or rape, unless the offence be specified therein.

Lord Coke says, the intention of this act was not that the king should grant a pardon of murder by express name in the charter, but because the whole Parliament conceived that he would never pardon murder by special name. And he says, he hath never seen any pardon of murder by any king of England by express name. 2 Inst. 233, 236.

It was, however, determined in the Court of King's Bench, that the king may pardon on an indictment for murder, as well as a subject may discharge an appeal. 1 Salk. 499.

Person pardoned may be bound to good behaviour.

By stat. 5 Wil. III. c. 13, when a pardon is pleaded by any one for felony, the justices may at their discretion remand him to prison till he enter into recognisance, with two sureties, for his good behaviour, for any time not exceeding seven years.

Pardon doth not restore lands or goods forfeited.

It seems to be a settled rule that no pardon by the King, without express words of restitution, shall divest either from the King or subject an interest either in lands or goods vested in them by an attainder or conviction precedent; yet it seems agreed, that a pardon prior to a conviction shall prevent any forfeiture either of lands or goods. 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 54.

Doth not restore the corruption of blood.

A pardon after the attainder doth not restore the corruption of blood; for this cannot be restored but by act of Parliament. 3 Inst. 233.

Doth restore the credit.

But, as to issue born after the pardon, it hath the effect of the restitution of blood. 1 Hale, 358.

It seems to be settled at this day, that the pardon of treason or felony, even after a conviction or attainder, doth so far clear the party from the infamy and all other consequences of his crime, that he may not only have an action for a scandal in calling him traitor or felon after the time of the pardon, but may also be a good witness, notwithstanding the attainder or conviction; because the pardon makes him, as it were, a new man, and gives him a new capacity and credit. 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 48. See Vol. II. Evidence.

In perjury.

But it seems to be the better opinion that the pardon of a conviction of perjury doth not so restore the party to his credit as to make him a good witness; because it would be an injury to the people in general to make them subject to such a person's testimony. 1 Vent. 349.

Touching a pardon for perjury, this difference is to be taken, that where a party is convict upon the statute, it is part of the judgment to be disabled; but, at common law, it is only a consequential disability. Therefore, in the latter case, the King may pardon, and that restores the party to his testimony; otherwise in the former, for in that case he must reverse the judgment, or cannot be restored. Rex v. Greepe, 2 Salk. 574.

Fees for pardons to be paid by the Treasury.

By stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 29 (for regulating the payment of fees for pardons under the great seal), it is enacted, "that no fee, gratuity, or other dues, paid or payable for or in respect of any grant of a pardon by his Majesty, his heirs and successors, or for or in respect of any letters patent, charter, warrant, bill, docket, or other instrument appertaining thereto, or the transcript of any such instrument, shall be paid or payable by or on behalf of the person or persons in whose favour or to whom such pardon shall be granted; but that all fees which are now paid and payable for the granting and passing of any such pardon or pardons, shall be paid by the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the same manner and by the same persons as other law expenses on behalf of his Majesty are paid."

Exemption from stamp-duties.

Sect. 2 enacts, that from and after the passing of this act, no such letters patent, charter, warrant, bill, docket, instrument, or transcript, as aforesaid, shall be subject to or liable to be charged with any stamp-duty or duties whatever.

Of pardon to persons sentenced to death by a naval court-martial.

By stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 140, s. 1, if his Majesty shall be pleased to extend his mercy to any offender liable to the punishment of death, by the sentence of a naval court-martial, upon condition of transportation, or of transporting himself beyond seas, or on condition of being imprisoned within any gaol in Great Britain, or on condition of being kept to hard labour in any gaol, or house of correction, or penitentiary house, or on any river, it shall be lawful for any justice of the King's Bench, chief baron or baron of the Exchequer, of the degree of the coif, upon such intention of mercy, as aforesaid, being notified in writing by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, to allow to such offender the benefit of such conditional pardon as shall be expressed in such notification, in the same manner as if a conditional pardon had passed for that purpose under the great seal. And, if the condition be of transportation, or of transporting himself, such justice or baron shall make order as he might in cases under stat. 24 Geo. III. s. 2, c. 56. If the condition be of imprisonment, or being kept to hard labour, the pardon shall be allowed, as aforesaid; and such justice or baron shall order imprisonment or hard labour, according to the notification of pardon from such secretary, as he might do by the 19 Geo. III. c. 74.

37 Geo. 3, c. 140.

By sect. 2, the justice or baron who shall allow such pardon, and make such order under such notification, shall direct the notification and his own order to be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Crown of the Court of King's Bench.

The pardon, &c. to be filed in K. B.

By sect. 4, the said Clerk of the Crown shall, upon the application of any such offender who shall accept his Majesty's pardon, or of any other person applying on his behalf, or on application of any person on the behalf of his majesty, deliver a certificate in writing under his hand, containing an account of the christian name and surname of such offender, of his offence, of the place where the court was held, before whom he was convicted, and of the terms and conditions on which pardon was given him; which certificate shall be sufficient proof of the conviction and sentence of such offender, and also of the terms on which such pardon was granted, in any court, and in any proceeding in which it may be necessary to inquire into the same.

Certificate from clerk of crown to be proof of pardon.

Sect. 9. In case the rector, vicar, or other officiating minister or curate, of any parish or chapelry, shall neglect or refuse to verify and sign such copies of such several register-books, and such declaration, as aforesaid, so that the churchwardens or chapelwardens shall not be able to transmit the same, as required by this act, such churchwardens or chapelwardens shall, within the time required by this act for the transmission thereof, certify such default to the registrar of the diocese within which such parish or chapelry shall be, who shall specially state the same in his report to the bishop of such diocese.

Sect. 10. And, for the obtaining of returns and registers of baptisms and burials in extra-parochial places in England, where there is no church or chapel, it is enacted that, in all cases of the baptism of any child, or the burial of any person, in any extra-parochial place in England, according to the rites of the Established Church, where there is no church or chapel, it shall be lawful for the officiating minister, within one month after such baptism or burial, to deliver to the rector, vicar, or curate, of such parish immediately adjoining to the place in which such baptism or burial shall take place, as the ordinary shall direct, a memorandum of such baptism or burial, signed by such parent of the child baptised, or a memorandum of such burial, signed by the person employed about the same, together with two of the persons attending the same, according as the nature of the case may respectively require; and every such memorandum respectively shall contain all such particulars as are herein-before required; and every such memorandum delivered to the rector, vicar, or curate, of any such adjoining parish or chapelry, shall be entered in the register of his parish, and form a part thereof.

Sect. 12. When and so often as the copies of the said register-books of baptisms, marriages, and burials, as aforesaid, and also the said lists of births, baptisms, marriages, or burials, as aforesaid, shall be transmitted to the office of the said registrars respectively, as aforesaid, pursuant to the directions herein-before contained for that purpose, the said registrars shall respectively cause all the said books and lists to be safely and securely deposited, kept, and preserved, from damage or destruction by fire or otherwise, and to be carefully arranged, for the purpose of being resorted to, as occasion may require; and the said registrars respectively shall also cause correct alphabetical lists to be made, and kept in books suitable to the purpose, of the names of all persons and places mentioned in such books and lists as shall have been transmitted to the said registrars respectively; which alphabetical lists and books, and also the copies of registers and lists so transmitted to the said registrars, as aforesaid, shall be open to public search at all reasonable times, on payment of the usual fees.

Sect. 13. And whereas in many dioceses the places wherein the copies of the parochial registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, as well as the original wills proved within the same respectively, are kept, are insufficient

Sect. 16. Nothing in this act contained shall in any manner diminish or increase the fees heretofore payable or of right due to any minister for the performance of any of the before-mentioned duties, or to any minister or registrar, for giving copies of such registrations, but that all due, legal, and accustomed fees on such occasions, and all powers and remedies for recovery thereof, shall be and remain as though this act had not been made.

Sect. 17. No duplicate or copy of any register of baptism, marriage, or burial, made under the directions and for the purposes of this act, shall be chargeable with any stamp duty thereon; any act now in force to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

Sect. 18. One half of the amount of all fines or penalties to be levied in pursuance of this act, shall go to the person who shall inform or sue for the same; and the remainder of such fines as shall be imposed on any churchwarden or chapelwarden shall go to the poor of the parish or place for which such churchwarden or chapelwarden shall serve; and the remainder of such fines as shall be imposed on any rector, vicar, minister or curate, or registrar, shall be paid and applied to such charitable purposes, in the county within which the parish or place shall be, as shall be directed by the bishop of the diocese.

Sect. 19. The rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of every parish and chapelry in England, whether subject to the ordinary, peculiar, or other jurisdiction, shall transmit to the registrar of the diocese in which the parish or chapelry shall be situated, before the 1st day of June, 1813, a list of all registers which now are in such parish or chapelry respectively, stating the periods at which they respectively commence and terminate, the periods (if any) for which they are deficient, and the places where they are deposited.

Sect. 20. All the provisions in this act shall extend, so far as circumstances will permit, to cathedral and collegiate churches, and chapels of colleges or hospitals, and the burying-grounds belonging thereto; and to the ministers who shall officiate in such cathedral or collegiate churches, and chapels of colleges or hospitals, and burying-grounds respectively, and shall baptize, marry, or bury any person or persons, although such cathedral or collegiate churches or chapels of colleges or hospitals, or the burying-grounds belonging thereto, may not be parochial, or the ministers officiating therein may not be, as such, parochial ministers, and there shall be no churchwarden or churchwardens thereof; and in all such cases, the books hereinbefore directed to be provided, shall be provided at the expense of the body having right to appoint the officiating minister in every such cathedral or collegiate church or chapel of a college or hospital; and copies thereof shall be transmitted to the registrar of the diocese within which such cathedral or collegiate church or chapel of a college or hospital shall be, by the officiating minister of such

And every such officer shall indorse the day of his receipt thereof in presence of the party of whom he received the same, and shall forthwith cause public notice to be given of the time and place of election, and shall proceed to the election within eight days after the receipt of the precept, and give four days' notice at least of the day appointed for the election.

By the 3 Edw. I. c. 5, because elections ought to be free, the king commandeth, upon great forfeiture, that no man, by force of arms, nor by malice or menacing, shall disturb any to make free election.

Elections to be free.

By the declaration of rights, 1 Wil. III. sess. 2, c. 2, it is insisted, that elections of members of Parliament ought to be free; and that freedom of speech, and debates of proceedings in Parliament, ought not to be impeached or questioned in any court or place out of Parliament.

By sect. 2, if the commission shall not within twelve calendar months be superseded, nor the debts so satisfied, then the commissioners are required, immediately after the expiration of twelve calendar months from the issuing of the commission, to certify the same to the speaker, and thereupon the election of such member is to be void, and the speaker is authorized and required, during any recess, forthwith, after receiving such certificate, to cause notice thereof to be inserted in The London Gazette, and then, upon the expiration of fourteen days, to issue his warrant to the clerk of the crown to make out a new writ in the room of such member; but nothing herein shall empower the speaker to issue such warrant, unless such certificate shall have been delivered to him so long before the next meeting of the house for the despatch of business, as that the writ may be issued before that time.

Signed this _____ day of _____, 18 ____ . By us, A. B. }
C. D. } Assessors.

By the 51 Geo. III. c. 99, s. 1, reciting that, by the 43 Geo. III. c. 116, s. 154, purchasers of land-tax charged upon manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, are, by virtue of that act, adjudged, deemed, and taken to be in the actual seisin and possession of yearly rents or sums, as fee-farm rents, equal in amount to the land-tax so purchased by them, to be issuing and payable out of the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, whereon the land-tax so purchased was charged; and that no person is allowed by law to vote for electing any member of Parliament, in respect of any annuity, fee-farm rent, or rent-charge, without the same being first duly registered in manner directed by law; and that doubts had arisen whether any person could vote at an election for a member of Parliament in respect of any land-tax so purchased as aforesaid, without the same or some memorial of the contract or certificate for such purchase being first registered in the same manner as other fee-farm rents, rent-charges, and annuities or memorials of the grant thereof, required to be registered as aforesaid: it is enacted, that in order to entitle any person to vote at an election for a member of Parliament, in respect of land-tax so purchased as aforesaid, it shall not be necessary to have the same or any memorial of the contract or certificate of the purchase thereof registered, as other fee-farm rents and annuities, or a memorial of the grant thereof, are required by law to be registered, before any person can vote for electing a member of Parliament in respect thereof.

ELECTORS.

Registry of the purchase of land tax not necessary to entitle to vote at elections.

Persons may vote although tenant's name is not in the assessment.

And by the 30 Geo. III. c. 35, after reciting that doubts had arisen, whether, if the form in 20 Geo. III. c. 17, be not strictly pursued, the suffrage of the person claiming to vote would be admissible, it is enacted, that nothing in the said act shall prevent any person from voting for any messuages, &c. on account of the tenant actually occupying the same not being inserted in such assessment according to the said form; or although the name of the person claiming to vote, or by or through whom he derives his title, or his predecessor, shall not be inserted in the assessment in the form aforesaid; provided such messuages, &c. have been assessed to the land-tax for six calendar months next before such election, in the name of the tenant actually occupying the same at the time of the assessment being made.

By the 20 Geo. III. c. 17, s. 3, if any person shall hold or occupy any messuages, &c. belonging to different owners, the same shall be separately rated, that the proportion of the land-tax to be paid by each separate owner may be ascertained.

Sect. 3. And they shall make three duplicates of such assessments; and shall (at least fourteen days before delivering the assessments to the commissioners) cause one of them, or a fair copy thereof, to be stuck up upon the door of the church or chapel, or if it be an extra-parochial or other place, where there is no church or chapel, then on the door of the church or chapel next adjoining.

Sect. 3. And the said duplicates shall be delivered to the commissioners, at their meeting for receiving the assessments.

Sect. 3. If the name of any owner entitled to vote shall not appear to be inserted in the assessment, he may, on giving notice in writing to one of the assessors, appeal to the said commissioners, who shall amend the assessment, as they shall see cause; and if any person shall think himself aggrieved by the determination of the commissioners, he may appeal to the next sessions, giving ten days' notice thereof to one of the commissioners who signed the duplicate, and to one of the assessors of the place where the estate lies; and the sessions may award costs to either of the parties, and by their order or warrant levy the same by distress. And if such commissioners, or the justices in sessions, upon any appeal before them respectively, shall find it requisite to insert the names of any persons who shall have been improperly omitted, such persons shall be deemed to be rated as effectually as if their names had been originally inserted.

Sect. 3. The commissioners shall cause one of the duplicates so amended (after having been signed and sealed by the said commissioners, or any three of them) to be returned to the assessors, who shall, within ten days, deliver the same to the chief constable, taking his receipt for the same; and the chief constable shall deliver upon oath such duplicate, without alteration, at the next sessions, in open court, the first day of the sessions, to the clerk of the peace, to be by him filed and kept amongst the records. And, if the assessor shall not deliver such duplicate, so amended, to the chief constable, or if the chief constable shall neglect to deliver the same to the clerk of the peace, or wilfully alter the same, he shall forfeit 5*l*. And, at the Michaelmas sessions yearly, the clerk of the peace shall examine whether all the said duplicates, respectively, have been delivered for that year; and, if it shall appear that any such duplicates have not been received by or delivered to such clerk of the peace by the chief constables, he shall report the same to the court, and the court shall immediately impose the said fine upon the chief constable, and the clerk of the peace shall give him immediate notice thereof; and, if not immediately paid, the justices of such sessions shall, by order of the court, issue a warrant of distress for the recovery thereof, directed to the constable of the place where such chief constable shall dwell. But, if the chief constable shall make oath at such sessions that such duplicate was not delivered to him by the assessor, the said fine shall be imposed upon such assessor or assessors; and the justices shall, by order of the court, issue a warrant of distress for the recovery thereof, directed to the constable of the place, or other such person as they shall think proper, and shall require the chief constable to give notice to such assessor of the said fine being imposed, who shall, within fourteen days, give such notice accordingly; and, if such assessors, or one of them, shall not deliver such duplicate to the clerk of the peace within ten days after such notice, then the warrant of distress shall be put in execution against such assessor accordingly. But, if the assessor shall, within ten days after such notice, produce to the clerk of the peace the chief constable's receipt for such duplicate, then the fine shall be levied on the said chief constable, as aforesaid. Which said fines, when recovered, shall be paid to the treasurer, and applied as part of the county stock.

Sect. 9. Whenever any assessment shall not have been made by the assessors, and returned to the chief constable, and by him to the clerk of the peace, the justices in sessions, or any two justices out of sessions, may order such assessments forthwith to be made and returned in manner aforesaid.

Sect. 13. And all persons may, at any reasonable times, inspect the duplicates in the hands of the clerk of the peace, paying 1s. for each inspection; and the clerk of the peace shall, on demand, deliver copies of the whole or any part thereof (signed by him, purporting the same to be a true copy), being paid at the rate of 6d. for every three hundred words; which said duplicates or copies thereof, signed as aforesaid, and also the duplicate of any assessment in the possession of the commissioners, or in the possession of the receiver-general, or a copy of the said duplicates, signed by such commissioners, and purporting the same to be a true copy, shall be admitted as legal evidence. And, after issuing the writ for the election, the clerk of the peace or his deputy shall attend gratis from day to day, from the hour of nine in the forenoon to three in the afternoon, at the place where the records are usually kept, from the time of delivery of such notice to the day immediately preceding the day of election, for the purpose of inspection and making the copies; and, if he shall fail of his duty in any of the said particulars, he shall forfeit £500, with full costs, to the party grieved, if the action be brought within two months, or otherwise to any person who shall sue within twelve calendar months, and shall also forfeit his office, and be incapacitated for holding the like office for the future.

Sect. 14. Finally, the clerk of the peace shall, on reasonable notice, attend at the election of every knight of the shire, with the original duplicates, at the request of any candidate, paying to him after the rate of two guineas for each day of his attendance, and 1s. 6d. a mile for the costs and charges in his journey from the place of his abode to and from the place of election.

By the 18 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 1, every freeholder, before he is admitted to poll for a knight of the shire, shall, if required by a candidate or any elector, take the following oath (to be administered by the sheriff, under-sheriff, or one of the sworn clerks):—

You shall swear [or, being one of the people called Quakers, "you shall solemnly affirm"] that you are a freeholder in the county of _____, and have a freehold estate, consisting of _____ [specifying the nature of such freehold estate, whether messuage, land, rent, tithe, or what else; and, if such freehold estate consists in messuages, lands, or tithes, then specifying in whose occupation the same are; and if in rent, then specifying the names of the owners or possessors of the lands or tenements, out of which such rent is issuing, or of some or one of them], lying or being at _____, in the county of _____, of the clear yearly value of 40s., over and above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same; and that you have been in the actual possession or receipt of the rents or profits thereof, for your own use, above twelve calendar months, or that the same came to you, within the time aforesaid, by descent, marriage, marriage-settlement, devise, or promotion to a benefice in a church, or by promotion to an office; and that such freehold estate has not been granted or made to you fraudulently, on purpose to qualify you to give your vote; and that the place of your abode is at _____, in _____, and that you are twenty-one years of age, as you believe; and you have not been polled before at this election.

And if he falsifies, he shall suffer as in cases of perjury. See 2 Peckw. 19, 21.

If assessment be not made.

Duplicates may be inspected.

Freeholders' oath.

ELECTORS.

By the 10 Anne, c. 23, s. 5, the sheriff and clerks shall enter, not only the place of his freehold, but also the place of his abode, as he shall declare the same at the time of giving his vote; and shall enter jurat against the name of every such voter who hath taken the oath.

And, by the 19 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2, the aforesaid 18 Geo. II. c. 18, shall extend to cities and towns that are counties of themselves, where persons have a right to vote in respect of a freehold of 40s. a year; but not where they have a right to vote in respect of burgage tenure, or where the right to vote for a freehold doth not require the same to be of 40s. a year.

Annuity and leaseholders.

By the 3 Geo. III. c. 24, s. 1, no persons shall vote for electing a knight of a shire, or member for a city or town, being a county of itself, in respect of any annuity or rent-charge granted before June 1, 1763, unless a certificate upon oath shall have been entered with the clerk of the peace or town-clerk twelve months before the election, as follows:—

I, A. B., of _____, am really and bonâ fide seized of an annuity or rent-charge, for my own use and benefit, of the clear yearly value of 40s., above all rents and charges payable out of the same, wholly issuing out of freehold lands, tenements, or hereditaments, belonging to C. D., of _____, situate, lying, and being, in the parish, township, or place, or in the parishes, townships, or places, of E., in the county of _____, without any trust, agreement, matter, or thing, to the contrary notwithstanding; and I, or the person or persons under whom I claim, was or were seized of the said annuity or rent-charge before the first day of June, 1763.

Sect. 2. And a like certificate shall be entered (mutatis mutandis) where such rent-charge came by descent, marriage, devise, or promotion to a benefice or office.

Memorial of the grant of an annuity to be registered.

Sect. 3. And no person shall vote at such election in respect of any annuity or rent-charge granted after June 1, 1763, unless a memorial of the grant of such annuity or rent-charge shall have been registered with the clerk of the peace or town-clerk twelve calendar months at least before the first day of such election; which memorial shall be written on parchment, and directed to the clerk of the peace or town-clerk, and shall be under the hand and seal of the grantor, and attested by two witnesses, one whereof to be one of the witnesses to the execution of such grant; which witness shall, upon oath before such clerk, prove the sealing and delivery of the grant, and the signing and sealing of the memorial.

Sect. 3. The said memorial shall contain the day and year of the date, and the names, additions, and abodes, of the parties and witnesses, and all the lands and tenements out of which the rent-charge issues, and the place where they lie.

Sect. 3. The grant shall, at the time of entering the memorial, be produced to such clerk of the peace or town-clerk, who shall indorse thereon a certificate, in which shall be mentioned the day and year on which such memorial shall be entered.

Sect. 4. And no person shall vote by reason of an assignment of such annuity or rent-charge without like certificate, entry, and memorial, of such grant and assignment, as in case of an original grant.

Sect. 5. The clerk of the peace or town-clerk to have for the entry of such certificate 1s., and of the memorial 2s.; for search thereof 1s., and for copies at the rate of 6d. for every two hundred words.

Occasional free-men in corporations.

By the 3 Geo. III. c. 15, s. 1, no person, claiming as a freeman to vote at an election for any city, town, port, or borough, shall be admitted to poll, unless he hath been admitted to his freedom twelve calendar months before the first day of the election; and, if he shall presume to vote contrary thereto, he shall forfeit £100, and his vote shall be void.

Sect. 3. And if any person shall antedate such admission, he shall forfeit £500.

Sect. 8. But nothing herein shall extend to the cities of London or Norwich, nor to any person entitled to his freedom by birth, marriage, or servitude, according to the custom of such city, town, port, or borough.

Any person voting as an inhabitant paying

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 100, s. 1, no person shall be admitted to vote at any election for any city or borough, as an inhabitant paying scot and lot, or an inhabitant, householder, housekeeper, and potwaller, legally settled, or resident, or as an inhabitant thereof, unless he shall have been actually and bonâ fide an inhabitant within such city or borough for six calendar months previous to the day of election; and such vote shall be null and void, and he shall forfeit £20, to be recovered in the courts at Westminster within six months; but the same shall not extend to any person who shall acquire the possession of any house in such city or borough by descent, devise, marriage, or marriage-settlement, or promotion to any office or benefice. And this shall relate only to persons who claim to vote as inhabitants, in manner as aforesaid, and shall not extend to any other description of persons who may claim to vote by any other title, or by any other superadded qualification.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 4, no candidate, after the teste of the writ of summons, or after a place becomes vacant in Parliament time, shall, by himself, or by any other ways or means on his behalf, or at his charge, before his election, directly or indirectly give, or promise to give, to any elector any money, meat, drink, provision, present, reward, or entertainment, to or for any such elector in particular, or to any county, city, town, borough, port, or place in general, in order to his being elected, on pain of being incapacitated.

By the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 1 (which is required to be read by the returning officer immediately after reading the writ, and also at Easter sessions yearly for any county or city, and at every election of the chief magistrates in any borough, town corporate, or cinque port), every person, before he is admitted to poll, shall, if required by either of the candidates, or any two electors, take the following oath, to be administered by the returning officer or his deputy:—

I, A. B., do swear [or, being one of the people called Quakers, "I, A. B., do solemnly affirm"] I have not received or had by myself, or any person whatsoever in trust for me, or for my use and benefit, directly or indirectly, any sum or sums of money, office, place, or employment, gift or reward, or any promise or security for any money, office, employment, or gift, in order to give my vote at this election; and that I have not before been polled at this election.

Sect. 7. If any person shall take any money, or other reward, or contract or agree for any money, gift, office, employment, or other reward, to give, or forbear to give, his vote, he shall forfeit £500.

Sect. 8. And if any person offending shall, within twelve months after such election, discover any other person or persons offending against this act, so that the party so discovered be thereupon convicted, such discoverer, not having been before convicted of any offence against this act, shall be indemnified and discharged from all penalties and disabilities which he shall have then incurred by any offence against this act.

Sect. 11 provides, declares, and enacts, that no person shall be made liable to any incapacity, disability, forfeiture, or penalty, by this act laid or imposed, unless prosecution be commenced within two years after such incapacity, disability, forfeiture, or penalty, shall be incurred; or, in case of a prosecution, the same be carried on without wilful delay, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. Collyer has the following note on this statute:—"Wherever a person is bound by law to act without any view to his own private emolument, and another, by a corrupt contract, engages such person, on the condition of the payment or promise of money, or other lucrative consideration, to act in a manner which he shall prescribe, both parties are, by such contract, guilty of bribery. 2 Doug. Law of Elections, n. b. Bribery at elections for members of Parliament was always a crime at common law, and consequently punishable by indictment or information; but, in order to enforce the law, the severe penalties contained in this statute were introduced, the legislature not meaning to take away the common law crime, but to add a penal action, as appears by the words, 'or being otherwise lawfully convicted thereof,' contained in the seventh section. However, the court will not, in ordinary cases, interpose by information at common law, until the two years are expired. R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1339; and see R. v. Haydon, 3 Burr. 1359. The same incapacities ensue, upon a conviction, on a prosecution for bribery Discoverer, though interested, a competent witness.

In an action on this statute for bribery, it is no objection to the competency of a witness for the plaintiff to prove such bribery, that a similar action was pending against the witness himself for bribery at the same election, and that he claimed to be the first discoverer of the bribery of the defendant, and meant to avail himself of it, if necessary, in case of the defendant's conviction. Where the evidence given by such a witness of the defendant's bribery was by means of the defendant's confession of it to the witness, it was holden that the truth of the fact so confessed, as well as the confession of such fact, was material for the consideration of the jury. Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 180. See further, post, 29, as to expenses.

Giving ribands, &c.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 2, 3, passed to prevent the expenses of elections, the practice of giving ribands, or other marks of distinction, by a candidate before his election, either to voters or inhabitants, in England, is made penal in the sum of £10 for every offence.

New oath.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 5, and in all cases where no oath of qualification other than the said oath against bribery, or the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, can now by law be required, every person claiming to give his vote shall (if required as aforesaid), before he is admitted to poll, take the oath following:—

I do swear [or, being a Quaker, "do affirm"] that my name is A. B., and that I am [specifying the addition, profession, or trade, of such person], and that the place of my abode is at , in the county of [and if it is a town, consisting of more streets than one, specifying what street]; and that I have not before polled at this election; and that I verily believe myself to be of the full age of twenty-one years.

See, further, as to expenses, the 49 Geo. IV. c. 118, post, 31.

V. Polling.

Returning officer to be sworn.

By the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 3, before the returning officer shall proceed to the election, he shall, immediately after the reading of the writ, take and subscribe the following oath, to be administered by a justice of the peace or any three electors:—

I, A. B., do solemnly swear, that I have not, directly or indirectly, received any sum or sums of money, office, place, or employment, gratuity or reward, or any bond, bill, or note, or any promise or gratuity whatsoever, either by myself, or any other person to my use or benefit or advantage, for making any return at the present election of Members to serve in Parliament; and that I will return such person or persons as shall, to the best of my judgment, appear to me to have the majority of legal votes.

Which oath shall be entered amongst the records of the sessions.

A poll being demanded,

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 1, every poll which shall be demanded, shall commence on the day upon which the same shall be demanded, or upon the next day at farthest (unless it be Sunday, and then on the day after), and shall be duly and regularly proceeded in from day to day (Sundays excepted), until the same be finished; but so as not to continue more than fifteen days at most, (Sunday excepted,) and if the same shall continue for fifteen days, then to be finally closed before the hour of three in the afternoon of that day.

not to continue more than fifteen days.

Or eight days for cities, &c.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 59, s. 5, the poll may not be kept open more than eight days for cities, towns, &c., except London and Westminster, Sundays excepted, and must close before three o'clock on the eighth day.

Sect. 3 of 25 Geo. III. c. 84. Every returning officer, unless prevented by some unavoidable accident, shall cause the said poll to be kept open for seven hours at the least in each day, between eight in the morning and eight at night.

Sect. 7. Every person employed as a poll-clerk shall, before he begins to take such poll, be sworn by such returning officer, truly and indifferently to take the said poll, and to set down the name of each voter, and his addition, profession, or trade, and the place of his abode, and for whom he shall poll. See 1 Peckw. 506, 507.

And by the 34 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 1, and 42 Geo. III. c. 62, s. 1, after reciting that in many places it may be impracticable to receive the votes of all persons claiming and having a right to vote within the time limited as aforesaid, it is enacted that when a poll shall be demanded, the returning officer shall, at the request in writing of any candidate under his hand, immediately after such request, and before he shall proceed further in taking the poll, appoint two or more persons to administer all the oaths required to be taken by voters, [except that by st. 43 Geo. III. c. 74, the oath or affirmation required by the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, shall be taken by every person before he is admitted to poll in manner as prescribed by the said act, if demanded;] and to certify the names of electors who shall have taken such oaths, or subscribed and made such declaration or affirmation respectively. And every person so appointed, shall immediately, and before he shall act, take the following oath, to be administered by the returning officer, or his deputy:—

POLLING.

Poll to be kept open seven hours a-day.

Poll-clerks to be sworn.

Persons to be appointed to administer the oaths, &c.

I do swear, that I will faithfully and impartially administer the oaths, and take the declarations and affirmations, now required by law to be taken or made by voters at elections for members to serve in Parliament, to and from such persons as shall lawfully apply to me in that behalf, in order to qualify themselves to vote at this election; and that I will, on being thereunto requested, fairly and truly give to every such person, or any of them, who shall take such oaths, or make such declarations or affirmations respectively, or any of them, before me, a certificate thereof; and that I will not give such certificate to any person before he shall have taken such oath or oaths, or make such declaration or declarations, affirmation or affirmations respectively, as shall be mentioned in such certificate, before me and in my presence.

Oaths to be taken by such persons.

And by the 34 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 4, if at any time during the election it shall be found that the number of persons so appointed are insufficient for the purpose, and that the poll is delayed thereby, the returning officer, at the request in writing of any candidate then present, shall appoint more, in like manner as aforesaid.

If a sufficient number have not been appointed.

Sect. 2. Any person claiming to vote may apply to one of the persons so appointed to take the said oaths, or to make and subscribe such declaration or affirmation as aforesaid; and such person shall administer the same accordingly, and shall immediately sign and deliver a certificate thereof, which shall contain the name, addition, and place of abode of the person to whom the same shall be so delivered, and be in the following form:—

Electors to take the oaths, &c. before such persons, who shall give certificates thereof.

A. B. [naming the person taking the oath] of [naming the place of such person's abode, and his addition or occupation,] has taken the oath [or oaths] of [naming the said oath or oaths, so administered] before me, this day of .

And in case of Quakers subscribing the said declaration of fidelity, or taking their affirmation of the effect of the said oath of abjuration, it shall be in the form following: (that is to say)

A. B. [naming the person subscribing or affirming] of [naming the place of such person's abode, and his addition or occupation,] has made and subscribed the declaration of fidelity, and affirmed the effect of the oath of abjuration [or if only one of those acts has been done, then naming such one act only,] before me, this day of .

And such person, on producing such certificate to the returning officer or person taking the poll, shall be permitted to poll in like manner as if such oaths, &c. had been taken before the returning officer.

Production of certificate to entitle to vote.

POLLING.

No person to vote without producing such certificate.

Proper places to be appointed for taking such oaths, &c.

Such places to be provided previous to the election, if required.

Expenses to be defrayed by the candidates.

What votes shall be deemed legal.

Disputed votes.

7 & 8 G. 4, c. 37.

Return to be made.

Sect. 3. If any person shall offer to vote without producing such certificate, and being lawfully required to take the said oaths, and make such declaration as aforesaid, the same shall not be administered to him by the returning officer or person taking the poll, but he shall immediately withdraw, and take the same before one of the persons appointed as aforesaid.

Sect. 5. The returning officer shall provide a proper place for every such person so appointed, to which place the respective electors may have free access without interrupting the poll, and so as the persons so appointed may act separately without interfering with each other; and every such place shall be open and attended by the person appointed to act there, during all the time of the poll; and shall be kept open eight hours at least in every day, between eight in the morning and eight in the evening, until the final close of the poll; and such oaths, &c., shall be administered to as many of the electors, being ready, as conveniently can, not exceeding twelve at one time. And the returning officer shall deliver to each person so appointed a sufficient number of printed forms of the declaration to be made by Quakers, with blanks therein for the names of the persons offering to make and subscribe the same, to be inserted therein; and also a sufficient number of printed certificates in the like form, to be filled up and delivered to each elector so taking the said oaths or affirmation.

Sect. 6. In case any candidate shall, three days at the least before such election, give or cause to be given notice in writing to the returning officer to provide proper places for administering the said oaths, declarations, and affirmations, he shall prepare and provide such proper places, so as to be ready before and against the day of election; and in case there shall not be a sufficient number of fit and convenient places for that purpose at the town or place where such election shall be had, which the returning officer can conveniently and at a reasonable expense procure, then he shall cause such booths or temporary erections to be made in convenient places in that behalf as shall be necessary for the purpose; the expense of which, and of the said printed forms, and also the allowance to be made to the several persons appointed to administer the oaths, &c., as aforesaid (not exceeding one guinea a-day each for every day's attendance) shall be paid by the candidates in equal proportions, to the returning officer, which, if not paid, may be recovered in the courts at Westminster. And see the 7 Geo. IV. c. 55; 9 Geo. IV. c. 59; ante, 19.

And by the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 4, such votes shall be deemed to be legal, which have been so declared by the last determination in the House of Commons; which last determination, concerning any county, city, borough, cinque port, or place, shall be final, to all intents and purposes.

[N. B. Repealed as to any determination of the House of Commons subsequent to the 28 Geo. III. c. 52. See s. 31 of that act.]

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 59, when the poll is closed, and before the proclamation of return is made, if a candidate, agent, or two electors, shall certify to the returning officer that disputed votes have been referred for decision, the proclamation shall be deferred till three of the clock of the third day, unless the votes have been previously decided. But the provisions of this act do not extend to Scotland or Ireland, or to London or Westminster.

By the 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 5, voters are exempted during the election from serving as constables.

VI. Return, and Expenses of Election.

By the 7 Hen. IV. c. 15, after the election, the names of the persons chosen shall be written in an indenture under the seals of the electors, and tacked to the writ.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 1, the returning officer shall, immediately after the final close of the poll, or on the day next after, truly, fairly, and publicly declare the name of the person who hath the majority of votes, and shall forthwith make a return of such person; unless the returning officer, upon a scrutiny being demanded by any candidate or any two electors, shall deem it necessary to grant the same; in which case he shall proceed thereon, but so as that in all cases of a general election every returning officer, having the return of the writ, shall cause a return of a member to be filed in the Crown Office, on or before the day on which such writ is returnable; and every other returning officer, acting under a precept or mandate, shall make a return of a member in obedience to the same, six days at least before the day of the return of the writ, by virtue of which such election has been made: and so that, in case of an election upon a writ issued during a session or prorogation of Parliament, and a scrutiny being granted as aforesaid, then a return of a member shall be made within thirty days after the close of the poll (or sooner, if the same can conveniently be done.)

RETURN AND EXPENSES.

Scrutiny being demanded.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 7, s. 1, 2, if any officer shall return any member contrary to the last determination in the House of Commons, the same shall be adjudged a false return; and the party duly elected may recover double damages with full costs.

Return not to be contrary to the last determination.

Sect. 3. And the like remedy shall be against an officer making a double return. See 1 Pecko. 16.

Double return.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 2, whenever a scrutiny shall be granted as aforesaid, and there shall be more parties than one, the returning officer shall decide alternately on the votes given for the different candidates who shall be parties to such scrutiny, or against whom the same shall be carried on.

How to proceed on a scrutiny.

Sect. 6. And such returning officer may, if he see cause during such scrutiny, administer an oath to any person consenting to take the same, touching the right of any person having voted, or touching any other matter or thing material or necessary towards carrying on such scrutiny.

Witnesses may

Sect. 9 But nothing herein shall extend to alter or affect the election of any member for any place where particular regulations are specially enacted by statute.

Sect. 10. If upon any writ issued no return shall be made on or before the day on which such writ is returnable, or if a writ shall have been issued during any session or prorogation of Parliament, and no return shall be made within fifty-two days after the day on which such writ bears date, or if the return made in either case shall not be a return of a member according to the requisition thereof, but contain special matter only concerning such election; any person having or claiming a right to vote, or claiming a right to be returned, who shall think himself aggrieved, may petition the House of Commons concerning the same; and upon such petition being presented, a day and hour shall be appointed for taking the same into consideration, and notice thereof in writing shall be forthwith given by the speaker to the petitioners, and to the officer by whom such return should have been made, accompanied with an order to attend the house at the time appointed, by themselves, or their counsel, or agents; and a select committee shall be appointed according as is directed by the 10 & 11 Geo. III., who shall proceed therein as by the said acts are directed; and all rules and regulations in either of the said acts contained shall extend to this act.

ber is returned.

Sect. 8. Every person who, in taking any oath herein-before appointed, shall thereby commit wilful perjury, or unlawfully and corruptly procure or suborn any other person to take any such oath, whereby he shall commit such wilful perjury, and shall be thereof convicted, shall incur such penalties as are inflicted by the 5 Eliz. c. 9, and 26 Geo. II. c. 25, s. 8.

Persons committing perjury.

And by the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 6, every such sheriff or returning officer shall deliver copies of the poll to any person desiring the same, paying a reasonable charge for writing thereof.

Copies of the Poll.

Finally, by the 10 Anne, c. 23, s. 5, he shall, within twenty days after the election, deliver over upon oath (to be administered by the two next justices,) (1 Q.) the poll-books to the clerk of the peace, without alteration, to be kept amongst the records of the sessions.

RETURN AND EXPENSES.Petition to the House of Com-

10 Anne, c. 23.

And on petition to the House of Commons, complaining of an undue election, forty-nine members of the House of Commons shall be chosen by ballot, out of whom each party shall alternately strike out one, till they be reduced to the number thirteen; who, together with two more, of whom each party shall nominate one, shall be a select committee for determining such controverted elections. The 10 Geo. III. c. 16; 11 Geo. III. c. 42; both made perpetual by the 14 Geo. III. c. 15; and since amended by the 25 Geo. III. c. 84; 28 Geo. III. c. 52; 32 Geo. III. c. 1; 36 Geo. III. c. 59; 42 Geo. III. c. 84; 47 Geo. III. c. 1; 53 Geo. III. c. 71; 9 Geo. IV. c. 22; and the principal act is now the 9 Geo. IV. c. 22. See 18 Geo. II. c. 18, as to certain expenses, ante, s. 1.

At a general election, A. was returned, after a contest, to serve in Parliament, but died before the next meeting of Parliament; held, that immediately on his death the representation of that place "became vacant," within the meaning of the Treating Act, 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 4; and that if B., being neither a candidate nor the agent of a candidate, canvassed for C., and ordered beer for the voters after such vacancy, this comes within the act, even though it were not proved that C. either knew of the canvass or of the treating; and it was therefore held, that an innkeeper could not recover against B. for beer supplied to those voters by his order. The Treating Act extends to an unsuccessful candidate who did not come to the poll. Ward v. Nanney, 3 C. & P. 399.

A mercer furnished ribands to a person who was a candidate for the representation of a city in Parliament; the ribands were partly used as ribands for voters; the mercer was himself a voter, and received orders for some of the ribands from the candidate himself, in his committee-room, but was not told for what purpose they were wanted. Held, that he was entitled to recover the price of the riband from the candidate, notwithstanding the provisions of the 7 and 8 Wil. III. c. 4. Richardson v. Webster, Bart., 3 C. & P. 128.

Where hustings, erected at the expense of the candidates at a contested election, were damaged by a riotous assembly, and were afterwards repaired at their expense, it was held, that no action could be maintained at the suit of the returning officer against the hundred. Allen v. Ayre, 3 D. & R. 96.

VII. Privilege of Parliament.

Privilege of himself and servants.

By the common law, a member of Parliament shall have the privilege of Parliament, not only for himself and his servants, to be freed from arrest, subpoena, citation, and the like, but also for his horses and goods to be free from distresses: but for treason, felony, and breach of the peace, there can be no privilege. 4 Inst. 24, 25; Fidd. ed. 192.

Westminster.

Rex v. Earl Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631. A writ of habeas corpus having been granted and served upon the said earl, returnable immediately, to bring up the body of his countess, who was sister to Sir William Meredith, (that she might have an opportunity to lay her case before the court, and swear the peace, if she should think proper, thereby to receive the protection of the court against the said earl,) and the earl having neglected to return the said writ, the counsel for Sir William Meredith, on behalf of his sister, intended to have moved for an attachment against the earl for this his disobedience. But some doubts and difficulties having been started by members of both houses concerning the privilege of peerage, and whether the Court of King's Bench could issue an attachment against a peer during the sitting of Parliament, and execute it upon him, only for a contempt to their court, Sir William judged it prudent to petition the House of Lords, for their leave to proceed against the earl, and accordingly (by the hands of the Earl of Westmoreland) delivered a petition, stating the facts. Lord Delaware opposed it; and said it was too summary and hasty a method of determining upon their privileges; and proposed referring the matter to a committee, and summoning Lord Ferrers to answer it in his place: and to obviate the objections which might be made to this method, on account of the delay, he offered some schemes for the immediate safety of the countess. But Lord Mansfield answered him, and spoke in support of the jurisdiction of his court, and the unreasonableness, injustice, and inconvenience of allowing such a privilege in criminal cases and breaches of the peace. The Duke of Argyle spoke to the like effect, and expressed a surprise that there should be any doubt about it; the reason of the thing being so clear and plain. Lastly, the Earl of Hardwicke spoke strongly and particularly in support of the same doctrine, and adduced many instances and precedents in proof of his position; and concluded with proposing that, to put an end to all doubts about it for the future, the lords should come to a resolution; and accordingly they did come to the following resolution or declaration, and ordered it to be entered on their journal, viz. "7th February, 1757, it is ordered and declared that no peer or lord of Parliament hath privilege against being compelled by process of the courts of Westminster Hall to pay obedience to a writ of habeas corpus directed to him."

The Habeas Corpus Act is a remedial law; and the judges of every court are bound to enforce its provisions according to their spirit, in such a manner as most effectually to relieve the subject from illegal imprisonment. Per Lord Alvanley, C. J. 2 Bos. & Pul. 535.

But members of either house are privileged from an attachment for non-payment of money. 7 T. R. 171, 448.

By the 12 & 13 Wil. III. c. 3, and 11 Geo. II. c. 24, any person may bring an action against a peer or member of Parliament, or any of their menial or other servants, immediately after the dissolution or prorogation, until a new Parliament meet, or the same be re-assembled; and from any adjournment of both houses for above fourteen days, until both houses shall meet or re-assemble; and the courts, during such time, may proceed to give judgment and award execution.—But this shall not extend to subject the person to be arrested during the time of privilege; but the plaintiff may prosecute at law by summons and distress infinite, or by original bill and summons, attachment, and distress infinite, until the defendant shall enter a common appearance, or file common bail. And in equity, the plaintiff may proceed by letter or subpoena; and after service thereof may, for want of appearance or answer, or non-performance of an order or decree, or for breach thereof, sequester the real and personal estate of the party, but not arrest his body.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 9, a member of Parliament may be a bankrupt; but by the 52 Geo. III. c. 144, he vacates his seat, unless the commission is superseded within twelve months from its being issued, or the creditors are paid their debts in full within the same period.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 9, traders having privilege of Parliament committing acts of bankruptcy, may be proceeded against as bankrupts.

By sect. 10, any such traders not paying or compounding to the satisfaction of the creditor, and also entering an appearance to the action within one month, commit an act of bankruptcy. See Hunter v. Campbell, 3 B. & A. 273; Jameson v. Campbell, 5 B. & A. 250; Exp. Harcourt, 2 Rose, 204.

By sect. 11, any such trader disobeying the order of any court of equity, or in bankruptcy or lunacy for payment of money, after personal service and peremptory day fixed for payment of the money, an act of bankruptcy.

And by the 10 Geo. III. c. 50, any person may commence and prosecute any action in any court of record or court of equity, or of admiralty, (or, in causes matrimonial and testamentary, in any court having cognisance of such causes,) against any peer or member of the House of Commons, or any of their menial or other servants, or any other person entitled to privilege of Parliament; and no proceedings thereupon shall be delayed under colour of such privilege. But this shall not subject the person of any member of the House of Commons to be arrested or imprisoned on any such suit or proceedings. And to remedy the dilatoriness by process of distingas, the court out of which the writ proceeds may order the issues levied from time to time to be sold, and the money arising thereby to be applied to pay such costs to the plaintiff as the court shall think just, and the surplus to be detained till the defendant shall have appeared, or other purpose of the writ be answered. And obedience may be enforced to any rule of the Court of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, against any person entitled to privilege, by distress infinite, if the person entitled to the benefit of such rule shall choose to proceed in that way.

VIII. How long the Parliament shall continue.

To continue seven years.

By the 1 Geo. I. s. 2, c. 38, the Parliament shall have continuance for seven years, to be accounted from the day on which, by the writ of summons, they shall be appointed to meet; unless sooner dissolved by the king.

Not dissolved by the death of the king.

And by the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 15, and 6 Anne, c. 7, they shall not be dis-solved by the king's death, but shall continue and immediately meet, sit, and act for six months, unless sooner dissolved by the successor. And if there be then no Parliament in being, the last preceding Parliament shall meet, sit, and act as aforesaid.

IX. When an Act of Parliament shall take Date.

Clerk of Parliament to indorse on every act the time it receives the royal assent, which shall be its commencement, where no other is provided.

By the 33 Geo. III. c. 13, after reciting, that in every act of Parliament in which the commencement thereof is not directed to be from a specific time, it doth commence from the first day of the session of Parliament in which such act is passed, which is liable to produce great injustice, it is enacted, that the clerk of the Parliaments shall indorse (in English) on every act of Parliament which shall pass after the 8th of April, 1793, immediately after the title of such act, the day, month, and year, when the same passed and received the royal assent; which indorsement shall be taken to be the date of its commencement, where no other commencement shall be therein provided.

Before this enactment, every statute (unless otherwise expressly provided) related to the first day of the session, when it was passed, contrary to the principle of legislation, that all laws should be made to commence in futuro, and be notified before their commencement. 1 Bla. Com. 46; 2 Bingh. 257. The consequence was, that frequently great injustice was occasioned; see instances, 1 Lev. 91; 4 T. R. 660; and even ignorance of a statute rendering criminal an act not before so, was held to afford no defence to the indictment, although it was ground for a pardon. See Bailey's case, 1 Russ. & R. Cr. C. 1. But the above statute remedies this evil, and in general, in modern acts, it is provided that they shall commence to operate on some future named day. 1 Chit. Col. St. 1031, n.

Where bills for continuing expiring acts shall not pass before the acts expire, such acts shall be continued from their expiration, except as to penalties.

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 106, where any bill shall be introduced into any session of Parliament, for the continuance of any act which would expire in such session, and such act shall have expired before the bill for continuing the same shall have received the royal assent, such continuing act shall be deemed to have effect from the date of the expiration of the act intended to be continued, except it shall be otherwise provided in such continuing act: but nothing herein contained shall extend to affect any person with any punishment, penalty, or forfeiture, by reason of any thing done, or omitted to be done, contrary to the provisions of the act continued, between the expiration of the same, and the date at which the act continuing the same shall receive the royal assent.

X. Improperly Procuring an Election.

ELECTION,
PROCURING.

By the 49 Geo. III. c. 118, after reciting, that the giving or promising to give money, &c. in order to procure the return of any member to serve in Parliament, if not given to or for the use of some person having a right or claiming to have a right to act as returning officer, or to vote at such election, is not bribery within the meaning of the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, it is enacted, "that if any person shall, either by himself, or by any other person for or on his behalf, give or cause to be given, directly or indirectly, or promise or agree to give any sum of money, gift, or reward, to any person, upon any engagement, contract, or agreement, that such person to whom, to whose use, or on whose behalf such gift or promise shall be made, shall, by himself, or by any other person whatsoever at his solicitation or command, procure or endeavour to procure the return of any person to serve in Parliament, every person so having given or promised to give, if not returned himself in Parliament for such county, &c., shall, for every such gift or promise, forfeit 1000*l.*, to be recovered as hereinafter provided, with respect to the sum of 500*l.*; and every such person so returned, and so having given or promised, or knowing of and consenting to such gifts or promises, upon any such engagement, &c., shall be thereby disabled to serve in that Parliament for such county, &c.; and such person shall be deemed to be no member of Parliament, as if never returned or elected a member; and any person who shall receive or accept of, by himself, or by any other in trust for, or to the use or on the behalf of him, any such sum of money, gift, or reward, or any such promise upon any such engagement, &c., shall forfeit to his majesty the value and amount of such sum of money, &c., over the sum of 500*l.*, which said 500*l.* he shall forfeit to any person who shall sue for the same, to be recovered, with costs of suit, by action of debt, &c. in any of his majesty's courts at Westminster, if the offence be in England or Wales, and at Dublin, if committed in Ireland."

Sect. 2. Provides that the act shall not extend to any money paid or agreed to be paid to or by any person for any legal expence bonâ fide incurred at or concerning any election.

By sect. 3. If any person shall by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, give or procure to be given, any office, place, or employment to any person upon any express contract or agreement that such person, to whom or to whose use or on whose behalf such gift or promise shall be made, shall by himself, or by any other person at his solicitation or command, procure or endeavour to procure the return of any person to serve in Parliament for any county, &c. (as in s. 1.) such person so returned, and so having given or procured, or so having promised to give or procure, or knowing of and consenting to such gift or promise upon any such express contract or agreement, shall be disabled and incapacitated, &c. (as in s. 1); and any person who shall receive or accept of, by himself, or by any other person in trust for or to the use or on the behalf of such persons, any such office, &c., upon such express contract or agreement, shall forfeit such office, &c., and be incapacitated for holding the same, and shall forfeit 500*l.*, which said 500*l.* shall be recovered as is herein-before enacted; and any person holding any office under his majesty, who shall give such office, &c., upon any such express contract, &c., that the person to whom, &c., such office, &c., shall have been given, shall so procure, or endeavour to procure, the return of any person to serve in Parliament, shall forfeit 1,000*l.*, to be recovered as is herein-before provided.

By sect. 4, actions upon this statute must be commenced within two years next after the offence committed, excepting where the party absconds.

As to bribery at elections, see ante, 24, 5.

Penalty on persons giving or receiving money to procure the election of a member of Parliament, though such money, &c. be not given to voters.

Pauper.

[2 Geo. III., c. 28, s. 8.]

formâ pauperis.

A DEFENDANT in a criminal proceeding is entitled to defend in formâ pauperis, if the court will allow it. Rep. T. Hard 211, Com. Dig., Formâ Pauperis, Vin. Ab Paupers; 1 Chit. C. L. 412.

By the 2 Geo. III. c. 28, s. 8, a person arrested on a capias or information, relating to the customs, upon making affidavit that he is not worth 5*l.*, exclusive of his wearing apparel, may, at the discretion of such judge, be admitted to defend as a pauper, with the same privileges as those who may sue in this manner for the recovery of civil rights.

The mode for the party defending, to obtain this benefit, is by making an affidavit before the judge or a commissioner of the court, under the last-mentioned act, that he is not worth 5*l.*, and then to petition to have a particular counsel and clerk assigned him. Vin. Ab. Paupers, B.; 1 Chit. C. L. 413.

An order cannot be made at the judge's chambers in vacation, for leave to prosecute in formâ pauperis: the order must be obtained in court. R. v. Cresswell, 1 Chit. C. L. 413.

When this admission is granted, it prevents the officers of the court from taking fees, as well as those who are assigned to conduct the cause on the motion of the defendant. Hullock, 228, n. 1.

Partition.

& 9 W. 3, c. 31.

BY the 8 & 9 Wil. III. c. 31, intituled, "An Act for the easier obtaining Partitions of Lands in Coparcenary, Joint-tenancy, and Tenancy in common," it is enacted, that if the high sheriff cannot conveniently be present at the execution of any judgment in partition, in such case the under-sheriff, in presence of two justices, may proceed to execution of the writ of partition.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 49, s. 12, pawnbrokers' licenses are to expire annually, on the 31st of July.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, sch. part 1, upon every license to be taken out yearly for using or exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker, within the cities of London and Westminster, or within the limits of the two-penny post, there shall be paid a duty of 15*l*.

Sect. 5. All persons who shall receive, by way of pawn, pledge or exchange, any goods for the repayment of money lent thereon, shall be deemed pawnbrokers.

Who shall be deemed pawnbrokers.

The 36 Geo. III. c. 87, being in force only for three years, and till the end of the then next session of Parliament, the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 99, was substituted in lieu thereof; and, by the latter act, s. 2, it is enacted, "That, upon and from the commencement of this act, it shall be lawful for all persons using and exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker, to demand, receive, and take of and from all and every person and persons applying or offering to redeem any goods or chattels pawned or pledged with such pawnbroker, a profit, after the following rates, over and above the principal sum and sums which shall have been lent and advanced upon the respective pledge or pledges, before any such pawnbroker shall be obliged to re-deliver the same; (videlicet),

Sect. 3. "And that, in all cases where any intermediate sum, lent upon any pawn or pledge, shall exceed the sum of two shillings and sixpence, and not exceed the sum of forty shillings, the person lending the same shall and may take, by way of profit as aforesaid, at and after the rate of fourpence and no more, for the loan of twenty shillings by the calendar month, including the current month as aforesaid."

Sect. 4 provides, "that in all cases where the sum to be demanded, received, and taken, by any pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, his, her, or their servant or agent, of and from any person or persons applying or offering to redeem any goods or chattels, pawned or pledged with such pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, either as profit upon any sum lent, or as part principal and part profit, shall amount to a total sum, of which the piece of money of the lowest denomination shall be one farthing ; and where the person or persons so applying, or offering to redeem such goods or chattels, shall have paid down the sum due for such principal and profit, or for such profit only (as the case may be), except the last remaining farthing, and shall not be able to produce and pay to such pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, his, her, or their servant or agent, a current farthing, and which shall be to the satisfaction and liking of such person or persons to receive the same, but shall, in lieu thereof, tender to such person or persons to receive the same one halfpenny, in order to discharge the said remaining farthing so due as aforesaid, the said pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, his, her, or their servant or agent, to whom such tender of a halfpenny for such purpose as aforesaid shall be made, shall, in exchange thereof, deliver unto such person or persons so redeeming goods as aforesaid, one good and lawful farthing, of the current coin of this kingdom, or in default thereof, shall wholly abate the said remaining farthing from the total sum to be received by him or them, of such person or persons so redeeming goods or chattels as aforesaid."

Sect. 5 provides, "that in all cases where the party or parties entitled to, and applying for the redemption of goods, pawned within the space of seven days after the expiration of the first calendar month, after the same shall have been pledged, he, she, or they shall and may be at liberty to redeem the same, without paying any thing by way of profit to the pawnbroker for the said seven days, or such part thereof as shall then have elapsed ; and that, in all cases where the party or parties so entitled, and applying as aforesaid, after the expiration of the said first seven days, and before the expiration of the first fourteen days of the second calendar month, he, she, or they shall and may be at liberty to redeem such goods, upon paying the profit payable for one calendar month, and the half of another calendar month, to the pawnbroker ; but that, in all cases where the party or parties so entitled and applying as aforesaid, after the expiration of the said first fourteen days, and before the expiration of the said second calendar month, it shall be lawful for the pawnbroker to demand and take the profit of the whole second month ; and that the like regulation and restriction shall take place, and be in force, in every subsequent calendar month, wherein application shall be made for redeeming goods pawned."

Sect. 6. Sect. 3. If any person shall offer to vote without producing such certificate, and being lawfully required to take the said oaths, and make such declaration as aforesaid, the same shall not be administered to him by the returning officer or person taking the poll, but he shall immediately withdraw, and take the same before one of the persons appointed as aforesaid.

Sect. 5. The returning officer shall provide a proper place for every such person so appointed, to which place the respective electors may have free access without interrupting the poll, and so as the persons so appointed may act separately without interfering with each other; and every such place shall be open and attended by the person appointed to act there, during all the time of the poll; and shall be kept open eight hours at least in every day, between eight in the morning and eight in the evening, until the final close of the poll; and such oaths, &c., shall be administered to as many of the electors, being ready, as conveniently can, not exceeding twelve at one time. I. Perjury by the Common Law.

[And herein, 1st, Of the Offence itself; 2ndly, The Indictment for it; 3rdly, The Evidence; 4thly, The Certiorari, &c.; and 5thly, The Punishment.]

1. What constitutes the Offence.

PERJURY by the common law seemeth to be a wilful false oath, by one who, being lawfully required to depose the truth in any judicial proceeding, swears absolutely in a matter material to the point in question, whether he be believed or not. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 1; 3 Inst. 164. Perjury at the common law.

Wilful—The false oath must be wilful, and proved to be taken with some degree of deliberation; for if upon the whole circumstances of the case it shall appear probable that it was owing rather to the weakness than perverseness of the party, as where it was occasioned by surprise or inadvertency, or a mistake of the true state of the question, it cannot but be hard to make it amount to voluntary and corrupt perjury, which is of all crimes whatsoever the most infamous and detestable. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 2. Must be wilful.

False—It is said not to be material, whether the fact which is sworn to be, in itself true or false; for however the thing sworn may happen to prove agreeable to the truth, yet if it were not known to be so by him who swears to it, his offence is altogether as great as if it had been false; inasmuch as he wilfully swears that he knows a thing to be true, which at the same time he knows nothing of, and impudently endeavours to induce those before whom he swears to proceed upon the credit of a deposition, which any stranger might make as well as he. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 6. But it is otherwise on stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9, post. Must be false.

So, in Pedley's case, 1 Leach, 327, it was holden by Lord Mansfield, C. J., that a man may be indicted for perjury in swearing that he believes a fact to be true, which he must know to be false.

It is further said, that upon this question being agitated in the Court of C. P. all the judges were unanimous, that belief was to be considered as an absolute term, and that an indictment might be supported upon such a statement. 1 Haw. c. 69, p. 88, note (a) edit. of 1795.

Oath—The false affirmation or declaration of any of the people called Quakers, made instead of an oath, will subject the party to the penalties of perjury, by stat. 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 34, 8 Geo. I. c. 6, and 22 Geo. II. c. 46. The latter stat. (by s. 36,) enacts, "If any person making such affirmation or declaration shall be lawfully convicted of having wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirmed and declared any matter or thing, which, if the same had been deposed in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, every person so offending shall incur and suffer the like pains, penalties, and forfeitures, as by the laws and statutes of this realm are to be inflicted on persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury." See 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, ante, Elibence, Vol. II. False affirmations of Quakers.

Being lawfully required—It seemeth clear, that no oaths whatsoever, taken before persons acting merely in a private capacity, or before those who take upon them to administer oaths of a public nature without legal authority, or before those who are legally authorized to administer some kinds of oaths, but not those which happen to be taken before them or even before those who take upon them to administer justice by virtue of an authority seemingly colourable, but in truth unwarranted and merely void, can amount to perjuries, but are altogether idle and of no force. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 4; R. v. Dunn, 1 D. & R. 10. See also, 4 Bl. Com. 137; and Oaths, Vol. IV. Must be legally sworn.

In any Judicial Proceeding—For though an oath be given by him that hath lawful authority, and the same broken, yet if it be not in a judicial proceeding, it is not perjury, because such oaths are general and extrajudicial, but it serves for aggravation of the offence. Such are, general oaths given to officers or Must be in a judicial proceeding.

ministers of justice, the oath of fealty and allegiance, and such like. Thus, if an officer commit extortion, it is against his general oath, but yet not perjury, because not in a judicial proceeding: but when he is charged with extortion, the breach of his oath may serve for aggravation. 3 Inst. 166; R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 69.

Therefore, where an oath is administered by a person that hath lawful authority to tender the same, and it is afterwards broken, yet if it be not in a judicial proceeding, it is no perjury, nor punishable by the common law. 3 Inst. 166. See 1 Stark. Rep. 511; R. v. White, M. & M. 271; 2 Chit. C. L. 303.

Swearing falsely before a magistrate, to induce him to compel another to find sureties for the peace, is indictable as perjury. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 31; 1 Camp. 404. But no indictment lies for perjury in a voluntary affidavit taken extra-judicially before a magistrate. 4 Bla. Com. 137.

The taking a false oath before a surrogate, to procure a marriage license, will not support an indictment for perjury. R. v. Foster, R. & R. C. C. 459; and see R. v. Alexander, 1 Leach, 63. If the marriage be had under such a license, so procured, the party may be indicted for a misdemeanor. Id.

A party may be indicted for perjury though he have not complied with the rules and orders of a court, which are merely directory; and, therefore, where a party swore falsely in an affidavit which could not, from certain omissions in the jurat, be received in the court in which it was sworn, it was held he was indictable, the perjury being complete at the time of swearing. R. v. Harley, R. & M., C. N. P. 94; 1 C. & P. 258, S. C.

Swearing absolutely.

Swears absolutely] For the deposition must be direct and absolute; and not as he thinketh, or remembereth, or believeth, or the like. 3 Inst. 166. And see Pedley's case, 1 Leach, 325, ante, 57.

The false swearing as to the legal operation of a deed is not indictable. 1 Esp. Rep. 280.

Must be material to the point in question.

In a Matter material to the Point in Question]—For, if it be not material, then, though it be false, yet it is no perjury, because it concerneth not the point in issue, and therefore in effect it is extra-judicial. 3 Inst. 167; R. v. McKeron, 2 Russ. 541.

But it is not necessary that it appear to what degree the point in which a man is perjured was material to the issue; for if it be but circumstantially material, it will be perjury. 1 Ld. Raym. 258.

Much less is it necessary that the evidence be sufficient for the plaintiff to recover upon; for in the nature of the thing an evidence may be very material, and yet it may not be full enough to prove directly the point in question. 2 Ld. Raym. 889.

In a late case, in an indictment for perjury in an answer in Chancery, to a bill filed against the defendant for the specific performance of an agreement relating to the purchase of land, the defendant had relied on the Statute of Frauds (the agreement not being in writing), and had also denied having ever entered into such an agreement, and upon this denial he was indicted; but it was held, that the denial of an agreement, which by the Statute of Frauds was not binding on the parties, was immaterial and irrelevant, and not indictable. R. v. Dunston, R. & M., C. N. P. 109.

Not material whether believed or not.

Whether believed or not]—It hath been holden not to be material, upon an indictment of perjury at common law, whether the false oath were at all credited, or whether the party in whose prejudice it was intended were in the event any way aggrieved by it or not; insomuch as this is not a prosecution grounded on the damage of the party, but on the abuse of public justice. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 9; 7 T. R. 315.

False oath, indictable in some cases, though not assignable as perjury.

In some cases, where a false oath has been taken, the party may be prosecuted by indictment at common law, though the offence may not amount to perjury. Thus, it appears to have been holden, that any person making or knowingly using any false affidavit taken abroad, (though a perjury could not be assigned on it here,) in order to mislead our courts of justice, is punishable by indictment as for a misdemeanor; and Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. said, "that he had not the least doubt, that any person making use of a false instrument in order to prevent the course of justice was guilty of an offence punishable by indictment." O'Mealy v. Newell, 8 East, 364; and see R. v. Foster, R. & R. C. C. 459.

INDICTMENT.

2. Indictment for Offence at Common Law.

In order to shorten and facilitate indictments and prosecutions for perjury, the 23 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 1, enacts,

Sect. 1. "And in every information or indictment for wilful and corrupt perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence, and by what court, or before whom the oath was taken (averring such court or person to have a competent authority to administer the same,) together with the proper averment or averments to falsify the matter wherein the perjury is assigned, without setting forth any part of the record or proceedings either in law or equity (other than as aforesaid), or the authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed."

On prosecution for perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence.

In R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 317, Ld. Kenyon, C. J., said, "We have occasion to lament, in almost all the trials for perjury, that the prosecutor does not avail himself of this excellent law, which was passed to obviate difficulties in drawing indictments for this offence." In the case referred to, the commission at the Admiralty session had been unnecessarily set forth in the indictment; and it was admitted that where a prosecutor undertakes to set out in the indictment, more of the proceedings than he need under this statute, he must set them forth correctly; but it was helden that the commission at the Admiralty session, being set forth as directed to A., B., and C., and others not named, of which A., B., and C., amongst others, should always be one, the court must take it to mean, that if either of the persons named of the quorum were present, it would be sufficient.

The provisions of this statute should be attended to.

The court generally will not quash an indictment for a crime of so enormous a nature as perjury, for insufficiency in the caption or body of it, but will oblige the defendant either to plead or demur to it. 2 Haw. c. 25, s. 146; sed vide 3 D. & R. 621. A judge may refuse to try an indictment for perjury clearly bad in point of law. R. & M. C. N. P. 147, 210.

Quashing indictment.

With respect to the plea of autrefois acquit by a defendant who has been acquitted of an indictment for perjury, but not on the merits, it may be generally observed of such plea, that it is an established principle, that unless the first indictment were such as the defendant (or, if for a felony, the prisoner) might have been convicted upon by proof of the facts contained in the second indictment, an acquittal on the first indictment can be no bar to the second. R. v. Fundercom and Abbott, O. B. Jan. 1796, 2 East's P. C. 519. See Acquittal, ante, Vol. I.

Plea of autrefois acquit.

Inducement—Like in an indictment for a libel, some inducement is generally necessary to render the subsequent statements intelligible. No more inducement should be stated than is absolutely necessary to explain the perjury assigned. See 2 Chit. C. L. 307. Thus, it is sufficient to state that a certain cause had arisen, and was depending, and came on to be tried in due form of law; or that at such a court I. K. was in due form of law tried on a certain indictment then and there depending against him, for murder, and that the perjury was committed on the trial either of the civil or criminal proceeding. R. v. Dowling, 5 T. R. 318; Cro. C. C. 7th ed. 612, n. a.; 2 Chit. C. L. 307; 1 Leach, 201; Peake, N. P. 112.

Inducement.

Time—The time of committing the perjury should sometimes be laid with precision, R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 69. Where an indictment for perjury, in an answer in the Exchequer, alleged that the bill was filed on the 1st day of Deember, but, on its production, it appeared to be entitled generally of the preceding Michaelmas term, as is the practice when a bill is filed in the interval between two terms: this was held to be no variance, because the day was not alleged as part of the record. R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. Rep. 521. Where, however, the time is material with reference to the crime of the defendant, as, for instance, with reference to his previous knowledge of a fact, which knowledge he subsequently denies on oath, the time must be proved as laid. Therefore, where the assignments of perjury were alleged in this form, "whereas, in truth and in fact, the said defendant, at the time of effecting the said policy, that is to say, a certain policy of insurance, purporting to have been underwritten by — Kite by his agent Meyer, on the 13th of August, 1807, &c. (and by other writers specified in the indictment), well knew," &c., and, on the production of the policy, it appeared that it had been underwritten by Meyer for Kite on the 15th of August, the variance was held fatal. R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. Rep. 524. See Indictment, Vol. III.

Perjury at Common Law—(Indictment.)

INDICTMENT.

Place.

Place—As to the statement of place and venue, see Indictment, Vol. III.

The court.

The Court—The court by which the oath was administered must be correctly described. An allegation that the oath was administered before justices assigned to hold the assizes, when by the evidence it appeared that the oath was administered when the judge was sitting under the commission of oyer and terminer and goal delivery, was holden to be a fatal variance. R. v. Lincoln, R. & R. 421. But an indictment for perjury in a cause tried at the assizes has been holden good, although it alleged the oath to have been taken before one only of the judges in the commission, whereas the names of both judges were, as usual, inserted in the nisi prius record. R. v. Alford, 1 Leach, 150. Where the indictment alleged that the cause came on to be tried before Lloyd, Ld. Kenyon, &c. William Jones being associated, &c. and from the judgment-roll it appeared that Roger Kenyon was associated, &c., the variance was held fatal. 1 Exp. R. 97. Where the indictment alleged a bill of discovery filed in the Exchequer (in the answer to which perjury was assigned) to have been filed on a day specified, viz. 1st of December, 1807, and it appeared, on the production of the bill, to have been filed in the preceding Michaelmas term, according to the practice of the court, where a bill is filed in vacation, it was held that the variance was immaterial, the day not having been alleged as part of the document. R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 521. Where the perjury was assigned in answer to a bill alleged to have been filed in a particular term, and a copy produced was of a bill amended in a subsequent term by order of the court, it was held to be no variance, the amended bill being part of the original bill. 3 Stark. Ev. 1138. Where an indictment for perjury, assigned on evidence given in the Palace Court, described the court as "the Court of the King's Palace at Westminster," and it appeared from the record of the trial below, that it was called "the Court of the King's Palace of Westminster," it was held no variance. R. v. Israel, 3 D. & R. 234. And where the same indictment averred that the cause in which the alleged perjury was committed "came on to be tried, and was then and there duly tried by a jury of the county," and the record of the trial stated that the jury came of the neighbourhood of Westminster, it was held, that as the cause was in fact so tried, and no county being mentioned in the record, it was no objection. Id. Where an indictment for perjury, in setting out the record of a conviction, stated an adjournment to have been made by Const, Esq. and A., B., C., and D., and others, their fellow justices, &c., and an examined copy of the record of conviction, when produced, stated the adjournment to have been made by Const, Esq., and E., F., G., and others, &c., the variance was held fatal, unless the defect was supplied by evidence of an adjournment made by the persons stated in the indictment. R. v. Bellamy, R. & M., C. N. P. 171.

Authority of court.

It is unnecessary to set forth the commission, from which the authority of the court is derived, in which the perjury was committed. See the 23 Geo. II. c. 11, ante, 59. Nor is it necessary to set out the nature of the authority of the person or court administering the oath. R. v. Callanan, 6 B. & C. 102.

But it is necessary to aver concisely they had competent authority to administer the oath. Dougl. 156. INDICTMENT.

The Oath—It must be averred positively and distinctly that the defendant was regularly sworn, and deposed, &c. Therefore, in an indictment in which perjury was, by the first count, charged to have been committed at a trial therein mentioned, and another count alleged that, at the trial, the defendant was found guilty, "by means of the false and material testimony of the defendant in the first count mentioned," and that a rule nisi for a new trial was granted, and that the defendant, knowingly, falsely, wilfully, and corruptly, made affidavit that the evidence given by him at the trial was true, "whereas it was false in the particulars in the first count assigned and set forth;" this latter count was held bad, for not averring distinctly that the defendant was sworn as a witness, and deposed to certain facts at the trial, instead of leaving it to be taken by intendment. R. v. Stevens, 5 B. & C. 246; R. v. Richards, 7 D. & R. 665. It is sufficient, however, in all cases, to allege in the indictment that the defendant was duly sworn. R. v. McCarthur, Peake, 155. And where the indictment averred that the defendant was sworn on the holy gospel of God, proof that the defendant was sworn and examined as a witness was held sufficient to support the averment. R. v. Rowley, R. & M. N. P. C. 302. The oath.

Where it was averred in an indictment that the defendant was sworn on the gospels, and he appeared to have been sworn according to the custom of his own country, this was considered as a variance, which would have been fatal had not the indictment been saved, by proof that he was previously sworn in the ordinary mode, ib.; sed qu. for how can perjury be assigned upon an oath which the defendant conscientiously does not consider binding? Collyer's Stat. 474.

It is not necessary to set out the jurat of the affidavit, R. v. Embden, 9 East, 437; nor is it necessary to state or prove that the affidavit was affiled in or exhibited to the court, or in any manner used by the defendant or others. R. v. Crossley, 7 T. R. 315.

The False Swearing—It should be averred that the defendant falsely swore, &c. R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & S. 385. An indictment at common law, alleging that the defendant falsely, maliciously, wickedly, and corruptly, swore, &c., without saying "wilfully," has been held to be sufficient, on the grounds that the former words include the latter. But the word wilfully is essential on an indictment on the statute of Elizabeth. Cox's Case, 1 Leach, 83, 71, 4th ed. And the words wilfully and corruptly cannot both be omitted in the indictment at common law. R. v. Stevens, 5 B. & C. 246. If the same person swears contrary facts at different times, it should be averred on which occasion he swore wilfully, falsely, or corruptly. R. v. Harris, 5 B. & A. 926; 1 D. & R. 578, S. C. Defendant falsely swore.

The Matter sworn to—Unlike to indictments for libels, it will suffice in an indictment for perjury to set out the substance of what the defendant swore. See 6 B. & Ves. 103; R. v. Grendall, 2 C. & P. 563; R. v. Coppard, 3 C. & P. 59; 1 M. & M. 118, S. C. The matter falsely sworn to need not be prefaced with the words, "to the tenor and effect following," "as follows," or "in words," or "figures following," or with other expressions which require an exact recital; but it should rather be "in substance and to the effect following." 2 Camp. 138; Cro. C. C. 7th ed., 573, n. (a); and Clay's Case, 2 Russ. 1786; 2 Chit. C. L. 309. Or "in manner and form following, that is to say," which allow of a greater latitude. 1 Leach, 192. The matter sworn to.

But, in every case, accuracy is required, and any substantial variance will be fatal. In an indictment for perjury in an affidavit, if a word were accidentally omitted in the original document, it must not be supplied as if sworn, but the omissions must be explained by an inuendo. R. v. Taylor, 1 Campb. 404; R. v. Lerfe, 2 Campb. 134. If, in an indictment for perjury before a committee of the House of Commons, on an election petition, it be stated that A. B. and C. D. were returned to serve as burgesses for the said borough of New Malton, and the indenture, when produced, describes them as returned for Malton, without the epithet "New," the variance will be fatal. 2 Campb. 134, 141. But it would suffice to say, that the election was had "by virtue of a certain precept of the high sheriff of the county, by him duly issued to the bailiff of the said borough of New Malton," though the precept varied, because it is said not to be matter of description. 2 Campb. 140; 2 Chit. C. L. 310. As to other variances, see R. v. Dudman, 7 D. & R. 324; R. v. Dunn, 1 D. & R. 10; R. v. Coppard, 3 C. & P. 59; R. v. Israel, 3 D. & R. 234; R. v. Carter, 6 Mod. 168; R. v. Greive, 1 Ld. Raym. 260.

When perjury is assigned in several parts of an affidavit, those parts may be set out in the indictment, as if continuous, though they are, in fact, separated by the introduction of other matter. R. v. Callanam, 6 B. & C. 102; 9 D. & R. 97, S. C.; and see R. v. Solomon, R. & M. C. N. P. 252.

Inuendoes.

Inuendo—In setting forth the matter in the record on which the assignment is made, as well as the perjury, it is frequently necessary to make use of inuendoes in order to explain the meaning. 2 Chit. C. L. 310. An inuendo is defined to be a mode of explaining some matter already expressed: it serves to point out where there is precedent matter, but can never introduce a new charge; it may elucidate what is already averred, but cannot add, or enlarge, or alter, its sense. 2 Salk. 513; 1 Ld. Raym. 256; 12 Mod. 139; 9 East, 95; 2 Chit. C. L. 310. If it is intended to explain anything, the matter must first be put on the record for it to explain. 4 Co. 20, a.

If any use be made of the inuendo which is imperfect, it cannot be rejected as surplusage, nor will it be cured by verdict. 1 Ld. Raym. 256; 2 Chit. C. L. 311.

Where, however, the oath of the defendant was, that he had been arrested before he got to his own house, in the parish of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, an inuendo, his house in the Haymarket, in St. Martin's, &c., is good, as only a more particular description of the same house. So, an oath being that the defendant was arrested upon the steps of his own door, an inuendo that it was the outer door is good. R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 70.

Where the inuendo and the matter it introduces are altogether impertinent and immaterial, it may be rejected as superfluous. 1 T. R. 65; 9 East, 93.

Assignments of perjury.

Assignments of Perjury—The indictment must assign positively the manner in which the matter sworn to is false. R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 70. A general averment that the defendant falsely swore, &c., upon the whole matter, is not sufficient: the indictment must proceed, by particular averments, to negative that which is false. R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & S. 385. Upon this principle it has been held that, if an insolvent debtor has sworn that his schedule contains a full, true, and perfect account of all debts owing to him, at the time of his petitioning for his discharge, an assignment of perjury on that oath, stating that "whereas, in truth and in fact, the said schedule did not contain a full, true, and perfect account," &c. (in the words of the oath), is too general; for it ought to state what debt he is charged with omitting. R. v. Hepper, 1 C. & P. 608; R. & M. C. N. P. 210, S. C. When the defendant swears only to belief, it may be proper to aver, "that he well knew" the contrary of what he swore, as in 4 Wentw. 231; 2 Chit. C. L. 312.

It should be here observed, that it will suffice to convict the defendant to prove any one of the material assignments of perjury. 2 Ld. Raym. 886; 2 Campb. 138. Yet, if the last part of one entire material assignment be disproved, it will not suffice. 2 Campb. 134.

Materiality.

Materiality—It must be shown, or expressly averred, that the matter sworn to was material to the question depending. R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 19; R. v. M^r Heron, 5 T. R. 316. But, though an allegation of this fact is essential, yet it is not necessary to set forth so much of the proceedings of the former trial as will show the materiality of the question on which the perjury is assigned: it is sufficient to allege generally that the particular question became a material question. R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 311. On the other hand, if the materiality appear on the record, it is unnecessary to aver it, T. P. C. 139, though it is most usual to do so. 2 Stark. C. N. P. 423, n.; and see 2 Russ. 541.

Conclusion—After the perjury has been assigned, the indictment usually concludes, "that so the defendant did commit wilful and corrupt perjury." 2 Leach, 860; Stark. 195. But it should seem that this conclusion of law from the premises is immaterial. See 2 Leach, 856; 2 Chit. C. L. 312.

EVIDENCE.
Conclusion.

3. Evidence of Offence at Common Law.

The evidence of one witness is not sufficient to convict of perjury, as, in such case, there would be only one oath against another. R. v. Lee, 2 Russ. 545. But two witnesses are not essentially requisite to disprove the particular fact sworn to; for, if any material circumstance be proved by other witnesses in confirmation of the witness who gives the direct testimony of perjury, it may turn the scale, and warrant a conviction. Ib. And the rule requiring two witnesses does not apply where the evidence consists of the contradictory oath of the party accused. R. v. Knill, 5 B. & A. 929, n., and 2 Russ. 545.

Number of witnesses.

To convict a man of perjury, a probable evidence is not enough; but it must be a strong and clear evidence, and the witnesses must be more numerous than those on the side of the defendant; for otherwise it is only oath against oath. Reg. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 194; R. v. Broughton, 2 Str. 1229. For there is this difference between a prosecution for perjury and a bare contest about property, that, in the latter case, the matter stands indifferent, and, therefore, a credible and probable witness shall turn the scale in favour of either party; but in the former, presumption is even to be made in favour of innocence, and the oath of the party will have a regard paid to it, until disproved. Reg. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 194.

Probable evidence.

Proof of the evidence set out in the indictment, by a witness who speaks from memory, but will not swear that he has given the whole of the defendant's former testimony, but says that he has stated, to the best of his recollection, all that was material to the transaction in question, and is positive that nothing was said qualifying the evidence proved, is sufficient to go to the jury. R. v. Rowley, R. & M., C. C. R. 111; Car. C. L. 186, S. C.

Speaking from memory.

Though the contrary doctrine appears at one time to have prevailed, it is now well established that the party prejudiced by the perjury is a competent witness to prove the offence; and though, at one time, it was considered necessary to show that such party had satisfied the judgment in the suit in which the perjury was committed, before he could be admitted as a witness, on the ground that he might possibly make use of a conviction for the purpose of obtaining relief in equity against the judgment, yet, as it is now an established rule, that a court of equity will not grant relief on a conviction which proceeds on the evidence of the prosecutor, there can be no objection to his being admitted a witness. And, even if the indictment proceed upon the 5 Eliz. c. 9, which gives the prosecutor half the forfeiture incurred, it is conceived that, as in an action to recover his moiety, he would be precluded from giving the conviction in evidence, there would be no objection to his competency. 2 Russ. 1791, and the authorities there cited; see also 1 Phil. Ev. 140. But this latter doctrine seems very doubtful; and see Bull. N. P. 289, and R. v. Williams, 9 B. & C. 549.

Prosecutor a competent witness.

Proof that the person before whom the oath was taken acted in the capacity of an officer fully capable of administering the oath, will suffice to raise a presumption that he had competent authority to receive it; it being a general presumption of law, that an individual acting in a public capacity is duly authorized so to do. R. v. Verelst, 3 Campb. 433; 4 T. R. 366; and see R. v. Crenwell, 24th Dec. 1816; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, a. Sometimes, special facts must be proved, to show the existence of the authority, where it is of a special nature, and limited to particular circumstances. Thus, on an indictment against a bankrupt for perjury on his last examination before the commissioners, it is necessary to prove the bankruptcy. 3 Campb. 96; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, a.; 1 Stark. C. L. 511; 3 Stark. Ev. 1135, 6. But such strict proof would not be required if the indictment were against a witness for perjury, before such commissioners. 3 Campb. 96.

Court before whom oath taken.

Occasion of oath.

On an indictment for perjury, in an answer to a bill in equity, the bill must be proved as usual. See Leach, 179, 3d ed.; 2 D. & R. 348; Bull. N. P. 243, 4. As to the mode of proving it, see ante, Vol. II. p. 45.

On an indictment for perjury committed on the trial of a former cause, the postea alone is sufficient evidence to prove that there was a trial, without showing a copy of the final judgment. Bull. N. P. 243; 2 P. W. 563; Stra. 162; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 56; ante, Vol. II. p. 44.

Where the prosecutor, to prove a trial at nisi prius, put in the nisi prius record, with the minute of the verdict indorsed on it by the associate, there was no postea drawn up, and the associate stated that none could be drawn up, as a rule for a new trial was pending, it was held sufficient proof of the trial at nisi prius. R. v. Browne, 3 C. & P. 572; M. & M., C. N. P. 315, S. C.; and see 8 B. & C. 341.

On an indictment at common law for perjury in an affidavit sworn before the Court of King's Bench, it is not necessary to prove that the affidavit was filed or exhibited, or in any manner used by the party. 7 T. R. 315. But this is not so when the party is indicted under the statute of Elizabeth. Skin. 403. Where the perjury is assigned in an answer of the defendant in chancery, the answer itself must be produced, from the proper office. Bul. N. P. 239; Bac. Ab. Ev. 624; 3 Stark. Ev. 1138. And, in an indictment for such perjury, it should be proved that the jurat is in the handwriting of a master in chancery. 2 Burr. 1189; 1 Leach, 50; 2 Campb. 508; and see ante, Vol. II. 44, 45.

Identity.

The identity of the party charged with the perjury should be clearly proved: this may be done as in other cases. See 1 Leach, 327; 3 Stark. Ev. 1139. It is a question for a jury; but evidence of a conclusive nature is requisite, in order to show that the defendant was the person who took the oath. 3 Stark. Ev. 1139. It is sufficient evidence of the identity of the prisoner with the party who actually took the oath in question, if his handwriting be proved. 2 Burr. 1189; 1 Leach, 50; 3 Mod. 117; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, b.

The perjury itself.

The perjury itself will be sufficiently shown by evidence that the defendant swore in substance and effect as stated in the indictment; and, as to what is a variance, see ante, 61; 3 Stark. Ev. 1141.

The whole of the defendant's evidence must be proved; because he might in one part have corrected any mistake made in another; though, when the perjury was committed on a cross-examination respecting a fact, not connected with the general merits of the case, proof of all the cross-examination will suffice. Peake, 37, 170; 2 Chit. C. L. 312. And it has been ruled in a late case of a similar nature, that it is sufficient for the prosecutor to prove all the evidence given by the defendant referable to the fact on which perjury is assigned. R. v. Rowley, R. & M. C. N. P. 299; 3 C. & P. 498, S. C.

Inuendoes.

The inuendoes, if material, should be proved. 1 Stark. C. L. 2d ed. 118; 1 T. R. 63; 9 East, 83, 95; Cro. Car. 489; Cro. Jac. 153; 3 Campb. 461; 7 Price, 544; ante, 62.

Materiality.

The materiality of the perjury must be proved. See ante, 58.

If the matter referred to by the averment be material, and affects the charge in such a manner, that the omission of it would alter the character of the perjury assigned, either in the degree in which it is charged to be injurious, or in the degree of guilt, the court will hold it must be strictly proved as it is charged, and the failure of proof, or the disproof of it, would be fatal. See Cowp. Rep. 72; 1 Chit. Rep. 603; 2 Stark. 510; 4 B. & A. 314. But, where the matters referred to consist of several particulars, some of which are material, and others not, the court will distinguish between such as are material and such as are not; and, if any one particular be disproved, to which the perjury is alleged to relate, if the charge would remain entire, and constitute perjury, without such proof, the court will not consider it to be a variance. See May v. Brown, 3 B. & C. 113; 4 D. & R. 670, S. C.; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, d.

PUNISHMENT,

To prove that the perjury was wilful and corrupt perjury, evidence may be given of expressions of malice used by the defendant towards the person against whom he gave the false evidence. R. v. Munton, 3 C. & P. 498. The defendant may prove that the matter sworn to falsely was not sworn to corruptly. Though perjury be assigned by the defendant in his answer, affidavit, or deposition, in writing, the defendant may prove that an explanation was afterwards given, qualifying or limiting the first answer. 3 Stark. Ev. 1145, 6; Sid. 418; 2 Keb. 576; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, d.

Wilfulness.

A party who is indicted separately with others for perjury, in swearing to the same fact, either of them, before conviction, may be a witness on the trial of the others. Fortes. Rep. 247; 2 Roll. Ab. 685; 2 Hale's P. C. 280.

(4.) Certiorari, &c.

It seems that the court will not ordinarily, at the prayer of the defendant, grant a certiorari for the removal of an indictment for perjury; for such crime deserves all possible discountenance, and the certiorari might delay, if not wholly discourage, the prosecution. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 28; see R. v. Richardson, 2 Leach, C. C. 500; Certiorari, Vol. I.

Certiorari.

Where the party is acquitted, no new trial is allowed in the case of perjury. R. v. Fenwick, 1 Sid. 135. But a new trial will be granted after verdict for the king, where it appears that the false swearing arose from mistake. R. v. Smith, 2 Show. 165.

New trial.

Where a true bill for perjury was found, and the judge at the assizes having refused to try it on account of manifest imperfections in the record, a new bill was preferred, whereupon the defendant was found guilty; but a new trial was granted, and then the prosecutor, instead of taking down the old record again, preferred a new indictment (for the same offence), and removed it into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari; the court refused to stay proceedings upon that indictment until the prosecutor paid the costs of the former proceedings. R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 761; 8 D. R. 590, 684, S. C.

Second indictment.

As to quashing indictments for perjury, see ante, 59.

(5.) Punishment and Consequences.

Perjury at common law is punishable by fine, imprisonment, and pillory, at the discretion of the court before whom the offender is convicted; and now, by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 114,* hard labour may be added.

Punishment.

For the further punishment of perjury, or subornation of perjury, it is enacted by the 2 Geo. II. c. 25 (made perpetual by the 9 Geo. II. c. 18), that, besides the punishment already to be inflicted by law for so great crimes, it shall and may be lawful for the court or judge before whom any person shall be convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury, or subornation of perjury, according to the laws now in being, to order such person to be sent to some house of correction within the same county, for a time not exceeding seven years, there to be kept to hard labour (a) during all the said time, or otherwise to be transported to some of his majesty's plantations beyond the seas, for a term not exceeding seven years, as the court shall think most proper."

2 Geo. 2, c. 25.
Further punishment of perjury or subornation.

A person convicted of perjury is disabled from being a juror, 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 25; or a witness, 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 19; 2 Russ. 1798.

Perjured person not to be a juror or witness.

(a) See the 3 Geo. IV. c. 114. Vol. II. Hard Labour.

OF.

But a pardon will restore his competency, except in the case of a conviction for perjury, or subornation of perjury, on the 5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 5, which provides that the offender shall never be admitted to give evidence in courts of justice until the judgment be reversed; and therefore the king's pardon will not, in such case, make him a competent witness. 1 Phil. Ev. 140; 2 Russ. 1798.

II. Subornation of Perjury at Common Law.

common law.

Subornation of perjury, by the common law, seems to be an offence in procuring a man to take a false oath, amounting to perjury, who actually taketh such oath. 2 Hawk. c. 69, s. 9.

But it seemeth clear that, if the person incited to take such an oath do not actually take it, the person by whom he was so incited is not guilty of subornation of perjury; yet it is certain that he is liable to be punished, not only by fine, but also by infamous corporal punishment. 2 Hawk. c. 69, s. 3; 6 East, 464; 2 East, Rep. 17; R. v. Edwards, 2 Russ. 518. See Attempts, Vol. I.

Indictment.

By the 23 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 2, it is enacted, "that in every information or indictment for subornation of perjury, or for corrupt bargaining or contracting with others to commit wilful and corrupt perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence, without setting forth any part of the record or proceedings, or the commission or authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed, or was agreed or promised to be committed. See ante, 59.

It does not seem to be necessary to set forth the means used by the defendant to effect his design; but it is sufficient to state that he, "by sinister and unlawful labours and means," procured the commission of the perjury. 2 Ld. Raym. 886; 2 Leach, 796. And, although it must appear on the face of the proceedings that the intention of the defendant was consummated, the word "procured" or "persuaded" will sufficiently convey this idea. 2 Ld. Raym. 889.

Evidence.

In support of an indictment for subornation, the record of the witness's conviction for perjury is no evidence against the suborners, but the offence of the perjured witness must be again regularly proved. 1 Leach, 455; Russ. 1796; see, further, as to the evidence, ante, 63 to 65.

Punishment.

The punishment is prescribed by the 2 Geo. II. c. 25, ante, 65; and the same punishment may, it seems, be inflicted as in perjury itself. See 5 Co. Rep. 99.

III. Perjury, and Subornation of, by Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9.

5 Eliz. c. 9.

Procuring any witness to commit perjury in any matter in suit, by writ, &c. concerning any lands, goods, &c. or when sworn in perpetuam rei memoriam, punishable by forfeiture of 40l.

As to subornation of perjury, in the first place, by the 5 Eliz. c. 9, [made perpetual by the 29 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2, and 21 Jac. I. c. 28, s. 8], it is enacted (s. 3) that all and every such person and persons which shall unlawfully and corruptly procure any witness or witnesses, by letters, rewards, promises, or by any other sinister and unlawful labour or means whatsoever, to commit any wilful and corrupt perjury, in any matter or cause whatsoever now depending, or which hereafter shall depend in suit and variance, by any writ, action, bill, complaint, or information, in anywise touching or concerning any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any goods, chattels, debts, or damages, in any of the courts, viz. the king's courts of Chancery, the Star Chamber, the Whitehall, or elsewhere within any of the king's dominions of England or Wales, or the marches of the same, where any person or persons have, or from thenceforth should have authority by virtue of the king's commission, patent, or writ, to hold plea of land, or to examine, hear, or determine any title of lands, or any matter or witnesses concerning the title, right, or interest, of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or in any of the queen's majesty's courts of record, or in any leet, view of frank-pledge, or law day, ancient demesne court, hundred court, court-baron, or in the court or courts of the Stannary in the counties of Devon and Cornwall; or shall likewise unlawfully and corruptly procure or suborn any witness or witnesses, which shall be sworn to testify in perpetuum rei memoriam; that then every such offender or offenders shall, for his, her, or their said offence, being thereof lawfully convicted or attainted, lose and forfeit the sum of forty pounds.

BY STATUTE.

5 Eliz. c. 9.

Sec. 4. "And if it happen any such offender or offenders, so being convicted or attainted as aforesaid, not to have any goods or chattels, lands or tenements, to the value of forty pounds, that then every such person so being convict or attainted of any of the offences aforesaid, shall for his or their said offence suffer imprisonment by the space of one half-year, (b) without bail or mainprize, and to stand upon the pillory, (c) the space of one whole hour, in some market town next adjoining to the place where the offence was committed, in open market there, or in the market town itself where the offence was committed."

Such offender not having goods, &c. to the value of 40*l*. to suffer imprisonment and stand in the pillory.

Sec. 5. And that no person or persons, being so convicted or attainted, be from thenceforth received as a witness to be deposed and sworn in any court of record (within England, Wales, or the marches of the same,) until such time as the judgment given against the said person or persons shall be reversed by attain or otherwise; and that, upon every such reversal, the parties grieved to recover his or their damages against all and every such person and persons as did procure the said judgment so reversed to be first given against them or any of them, by action or actions, to be sued upon his or their case or cases, according to the course of the common laws of this realm.

Persons convicted not to be received as witnesses until judgment reversed.

Sec. 6. Enacts, that if any person or persons, either by the subornation, unlawful procurement, sinister persuasion or means of any others, or by their own act, consent, or agreement, wilfully and corruptly commit any manner of wilful perjury, by his or their deposition in any of the courts before mentioned, or being examined ad perpetuum rei memoriam, that then every person or persons so offending, and being thereof duly convicted or attainted by the laws of this realm, shall for his or their said offence lose and forfeit twenty pounds, and to have imprisonment by the space of six months without bail or mainprize; and the oath of such person or persons so offending from thenceforth not to be received in any court of record within this realm of England or Wales, or the marches of the same, until such time as the judgment given against the said person or persons shall be reversed by attain or otherwise: and that upon every such reversal the parties grieved to recover his or their damages against all and every such person and persons as did procure the said judgment so reversed to be given against them or any of them, by action or actions to be sued upon his or their case or cases, according to the course of the common laws of this realm.

Persons committing perjury to forfeit 20*l*. and to be imprisoned for six months; and their oath not to be received in any court of record until judgment reversed.

Sec. 7. And if it happen the said offender or offenders so offending not to have any goods or chattels to the value of twenty pounds, that then he or they to be set on the pillory (d), in some market place within the shire, city, or borough where the said offence shall be committed, by the sheriff or his ministers, if it shall fortune to be without any city or town corporate; and if it happen to be within any such city or town corporate, then by the said head officer or officers of such city or town corporate, or by his or their ministers, and there to have both his ears nailed, and from thenceforth to be discredited and disabled for ever to be sworn in any of the courts of record aforesaid, until such time as the judgment shall be reversed, and thereupon to recover his damages in manner and form before mentioned.

And if such offenders have not goods to the value of 20*l*. they are to be set in the pillory and have their ears nailed, and to be disabled from being witnesses until judgment reversed.

Sec. 8. One moiety of the said forfeitures shall be to the queen, and the other moiety to such person as shall be grieved, hindered, or molested by reason of any of the offences before mentioned, that will sue for the same, &c.

Disposal of forfeitures.

Sec. 9. Enacts, that as well the judge and judges of every such of the said courts where any such suit shall be, and whereupon any such perjury shall be committed, as also the justices of assize and gaol delivery, and justices of peace

BY STATUTE.

Proclamation at assizes.

The act is not to extend to spiritual courts.

Nor to restrain other punishment of perjury.

Statute extends only to witnesses.

A party must be aggrieved.

Justices at sessions.

Punishment.

at their quarter sessions, both within the liberties and without, may inquire of, hear, and determine, all offences against the said act.

Sect. 10. This act is to be proclaimed at all assizes.

Sect. 11. Provides that this act shall no way extend to any spiritual or ecclesiastical court, but that every such offender, as shall offend in form as aforesaid, shall be punished by such usual and ordinary laws as are used in the said court.

And sect. 13 also provides, that this statute shall not restrain the authority of any judge having absolute power to punish perjury before the making thereof; but that every such judge may proceed in the punishment of all offences punishable before the making of the said statute, in such wise as they might have done and used to do, to all purposes, so that they set not on the offender less punishment than is contained in this act.

Any Witness—If the defendant perjureth himself in his answer, in the Chancery, Exchequer Chamber, or the like, he is not punishable by this statute; for it extendeth but to witnesses. 3 Inst. 166.

But he is punishable for the same by indictment at the common law. R. v. Morris, 3 Burr. 1189.

By any Writ, Action, Bill, Complaint, or Information—It hath been resolved that these words are to be extended to the latter clause concerning perjury, as well as to this concerning subornation; because it cannot well be intended, that the makers of the act, who inflict a greater penalty on subornation of perjury than on the perjury itself, should mean to extend the purview of the law in relation to what they esteemed the lesser crime, farther than in relation to that which they esteemed the greater. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 19; 5 Rep. 99, a.

But it is to be observed, that perjury or subornation in an action depending by indictment or criminal information, is not within this statute; but only in an action depending by writ, action, bill, complaint, or information. 3 Inst. 164.

Half to the Party grieved—It hath been collected from this clause, that no false oath is within the meaning of this statute which doth not give some person a just cause of complaint: and upon this ground it hath been said, that he who swears a thing which is true, but not known by him to be so, is not within this statute; because, howsoever heinous his offence may be in its own nature, yet when it proves in the event to be in maintenance of the truth, it cannot be said to give him a just cause of complaint, who would take advantage against another from his want of legal evidence to make out the justice of his cause. Also from the same ground it seemeth clearly to follow that no false oath can be within the statute, unless the party against whom it was sworn suffered some kind of disadvantage by it; for otherwise it cannot be said that any one was grieved by it; and, therefore, in every prosecution upon this statute, it must appear upon the trial that there was such a suit depending, wherein the party might be prejudiced in the manner supposed. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 23.

Justices at their Quarter Sessions.—And one justice (Mr. Dalton says) may bind the offender over to the sessions. Dalt. c. 70.

But because the prosecution upon this statute is more difficult than by indictment at the common law, and some one must be aggrieved by the offence, offenders are seldom prosecuted upon this statute, especially at the sessions; and it seems generally the safer way to proceed by indictment at the common law, at the assizes, or in the Court of King's Bench.

Shall not restrain—From this it seemeth undoubtedly to follow, that the Court of King's Bench, &c., proceeding upon an indictment or information of perjury or subornation of perjury at the common law, may not only set a discretionary fine on the offender, but also condemn him to the pillory, without making any inquiry concerning the value of his lands or goods. 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 16.

The statute 5 Eliz. prescribes the punishment; and see further, as to the punishment, the 2 Geo. II. c. 25, ante, 65.

Either by Subornation or otherwise.—It is not necessary to set forth in the indictment, whether the party took the false oath through the subornation of another, or without any such subornation, these words being only superfluity. BY STATUTE.
1 Haw. c. 69, s. 18. Indictment.

Wilfully and Corruptly.—These words are necessary in an indictment or action on this statute, and cannot be supplied by adding “against the form of the statute,” or by concluding “and so a wilful and corrupt perjury did commit.” 1 Haw. c. 69, s. 17; and see R. v. Stevens, 5 B. & Cres. 246; ante, 61.

An indictment for perjury cannot be maintained, where the supposed perjury depends on the construction of a deed; but the remedy is by a civil action, if the defendant acted inconsistently with the obligation entered into. R. v. Crespigny, 1 Esp. 280.

Like other indictments upon statutes, the indictment should conclude “contra formam,” though, if this be omitted, it will be good as at common law, and the defendant may be punished with the penalties which would be inflicted if the act had not been referred to, but cannot be sentenced to the additional punishment prescribed in the statute. 2 Hale, 191, 2; Cro. C. C. 8th ed. 40.

In support of an indictment on the statute, the evidence should show that the affidavit, &c. was used conformably to the indictment. 7 T. R. 319; and see further, ante, 64. Evidence.

The party injured is not a competent witness. Semble, ante, 63.

The prosecutor, unless he is also a witness, and his name appears as such on the back of the bill, cannot claim costs as a party grieved, if the indictment is at common law, but only when it is framed on the statute. 1 Esp. Rep. 126. Costs.

V. Power and Duty of Justices, in Cases of.

Mr. Hawkins says, it hath been of late settled, that justices of the peace have no jurisdiction over perjury at the common law; the principal reason of which resolution, he says, as he apprehended, was, that inasmuch as the chief end of the institution of the office of these justices was for the preservation of the peace against personal wrongs and open violence, and the word trespass, (in the com- Power of justices of the peace therein.) mission,) in its most proper and natural sense, is taken for such kind of injuries, it shall be understood in that sense only, or, at most, to extend to such other offences only as have a direct and immediate tendency to cause such breaches of the peace: as, libels and such like, which, on this account, have been adjudged indictable before justices of the peace. 2 Hawk. c. 8, s. 38.

And in the case of R. v. Bainton, 2 Str. 1088, an indictment at the quarter sessions for perjury at the common law was quashed for want of jurisdiction; and was said to have been done so about three years before, in the case of R. and Westiness. Et vide Reg. v. Yarrington, 1 Salk. 406.

And an indictment found at the quarter sessions for perjury at common law is void, the sessions having no jurisdiction over the offence; and if an indictment so found is removed by certiorari, and the case comes down for trial at nisi prius, the judge will not try it. R. v. Haynes, R. & M., N. P. C. 298.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction over perjury created by the 5 Eliz., ante, 67, 68.

Process.

23 Geo. 2, c. 11.

Judges may direct prosecution for perjury.

Though there does not seem to be any difference in the power of magistrates and judges to issue their warrants in cases of misdemeanor, and they have therefore a power so to do in perjury, as well as in other cases, yet in the practice of the London police-offices, no warrant is usually granted to apprehend a party accused of this offence, before an indictment has been found against him. But by stat. 23 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 3, the judge of assize (sitting the court, or within twenty-four hours after,) may direct any witness, if there shall appear to him a reasonable cause, to be prosecuted for perjury; and may assign the party injured, or other person undertaking such prosecution, counsel, who are to do their duty gratis: and such prosecution, so directed, shall be carried on without any duty or fees whatsoever. And the clerk of assize, or other proper officer of the court, shall give gratis, to the party injured or prosecutor, a certificate of the same being directed, together with the names of the counsel assigned him; which certificate shall be sufficient proof of such prosecution being directed: provided that no such direction or certificate shall be given in evidence on the trial.

Pewter, and other Metals.

DURING the reigns of Henry VII. and VIII., and Edward VI., five different statutes (19 Hen. VII. c. 6; 4 Hen. VIII. c. 7; 25 Hen. VIII. c. 9; 33 Hen. VIII. c. 4; 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 37) were passed for the purpose of preventing as well the importation of manufactured goods of tin or pewter, as the exportation of any brass, copper, or other metals (tin and pewter only excepted), in an unmanufactured state; as also to prevent any goods being manufactured within this kingdom of tin, pewter, or brass, of inferior quality to what they ought to be, on pain of forfeiting half to the king, and half to the finder. 2 Dick. 419.

By the 19 Hen. VII. c. 6, the master and wardens of the craft of Pewterers, and, where there are none such, the head and governors of the city or borough, might appoint searchers; and the justices at Michaelmas sessions were to appoint two persons, having experience therein, to search within the county; and of all such unlawful pewter or brass as they should find, half went to the king, and half to the searchers.

In default of the master and wardens not searching, any person, having sufficient knowledge in the said occupation, by oversight of the mayor or other head officer of the cities or boroughs, might search. Id.

But now, by the 3 Geo. IV, c. 41, s. 2, 4, these several statutes are repealed.

Recusants not to practise physic.

By the 3 Jac. I. c. 5, s. 8, no recusant convict shall practise physic, nor use the trade of an apothecary, on pain of £100.

Apothecaries and surgeons exempted from offices.

By the 6 & 7 Wil. III. c. 4, s. 2, apothecaries within London and seven miles thereof, and also apothecaries in any other place, who have served seven years' apprenticeship, shall be exempted from the office of constable, scavenger, overseer of the poor, and all other parish, ward, and leet offices.

See also, as to surgeons and apothecaries being exempt from juries, the 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 2, ante, Jurors, Vol. III., which repeals the 6 & 7 Wil. III. c. 4, and 5 Hen. VIII. c. 6, as to jurors.

By the 5 Hen. VIII. c. 6, surgeons shall be discharged of the constableness, watch, and all manner of office bearing any armour.

And, by the 18 Geo. II. c. 15, s. 10, all freemen of the Surgeons' Company in London shall be exempted from the office of constable, scavenger, overseer of the poor, and other parish, ward, and leet offices, and from serving on juries and inquests.

Mr. Hawkins, speaking of the former of these statutes, says, it seems by the equity thereof, and the ancient custom of the realm, all surgeons have been allowed the like privilege: that is, whether in London or elsewhere. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 43.

Whether physicians are exempted from offices.

By the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 40, s. 1, the president of the commonalty and fellowship of the faculty of physic in London, and the commons and fellows of the same, shall be discharged of watch and ward there, and shall not be chosen constable or any other officer.

Yet it seems to have been holden, that the equity of this act doth not extend to other physicians not mentioned in it; perhaps for this reason, because physicians have no such special custom for their discharge as surgeons are said to have. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 44.

And it seemeth that a practising physician, being chosen constable in pursuance of a custom in respect of his lands in a town, has no remedy for his discharge; for that there are no precedents of this kind, and his calling is private: yet, if he be chosen constable of a town, which hath sufficient persons besides to execute this office, and no special custom concerning it, perhaps he may be relieved by the King's Bench. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 41.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 2, members and licentiates of the College of Physicians, in London, are exempt from serving on juries. See Jurors, Vol. III.

Suing for fees.

It is clear that a physician cannot maintain an action for his fees; for, like those of a barrister, the fee is a quiddam honorarium. Chorley v. Bolcot, 4 T. R. 317. (r)

If a physician give a person a potion, without any intent of doing him any bodily hurt, but with intent to cure or prevent a disease, and, contrary to the expectation of the physician, it kills him, this is no homicide; and the like of a surgeon. "And I hold their opinion," says Lord Hale, 1 Hale, 429, "to be erroneous that think, if he be no licensed surgeon or physician that occasioned this mischance, that then it is felony: for physic and salves were before licensed physicians and surgeons; and, therefore, if they be not licensed according to the 3 Hen. VIII. c. 11, or the 14 & 15 Hen. VIII. c. 5, they are subject to the penalties in the statutes; but God forbid that any mischance of this kind should make any person not licensed guilty of murder or manslaughter." These opinions, therefore, may serve to caution ignorant people not to be too busy in this kind in tampering with physic, but are no safe rule for a judge or jury to go by. The 55 Geo. III. c. 194, "for better regulating the practice of Apothecaries throughout England and Wales," s. 1, recites the first charter of James I. to the Apothecaries' Company, and that some of the clauses and provisions contained in the said charter, so far as the same regard the said society of Apothecaries, have been found inadequate for the purposes thereby intended; and enacts, that the said charter of James I., and all the powers, penalties, regulations, &c., therein contained (except such parts thereof as are hereby altered, varied, or repealed), shall be, and the same is, hereby declared to be in full force, &c.

55 Geo. 3, c. 194. Charter by Jac. I to the Apothecaries' Company.

Charter confirmed, except as altered by this act.

By sect. 2, so much of recited charter as directs the master and wardens, &c., to enter the shops of apothecaries, and to examine their medicines, &c., and to impose penalties, is repealed.

Sect. 3. And, in lieu thereof, the master, wardens, and society, of apothecaries, and their successors, or any of the assistants, or persons properly qualified [viz. s. 4, for London and 30 miles around, being a member of the Society of Apothecaries of at least 10 years' standing, and all other parts of England and Wales, an apothecary in actual practice for at least ten years], to be by the master and wardens nominated, not being fewer in number than two persons, may at all seasonable times, in the day-time, as often as to the said master and wardens it shall seem expedient, enter into any shop of any apothecary in England and Wales, and search, survey, prove, and determine, if the medicines, simple or compound, wares, drugs, or things whatsoever therein contained, and belonging to the art or mystery of apothecaries, be wholesome, meet, and fit for the cure, health, and ease, of his majesty's subjects; and all such medicines, &c., which they shall find false, unlawful, deceitful, stale, unwholesome, corrupt, pernicious, or hurtful, shall and may burn, or otherwise destroy; and also shall report to the master, wardens, and assistants, of the said society, the name of such person as shall be found to have the same in possession; and the said master, wardens, and assistants, shall and may impose and levy the following fines and penalties upon every person whose names shall be so reported to them, as hereinafter mentioned: for the first offence, £5; for the second offence, £10; and for the third and every other offence, £20.

Master, wardens, &c., empowered to enter shops of apothecaries, &c., and examine drugs, &c.

Penalties.

And, by the 1 Mar. Sess. II. c. 9, s. 6, all justices, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, constables, and other officers, in London, shall assist the president of the College of Physicians, and persons by them authorized, in searching for faulty apothecary wares.

Searching for drugs.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 194, s. 5. And whereas it is the duty of every person, using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary, to prepare with exactness and to dispense such medicines as may be directed for the sick by any physician lawfully licensed to practise physic by the president and commonalty of the faculty of physic in London, or by either of the two universities of Oxford or Cambridge; therefore, for the further protection, security, and benefit of his majesty's subjects, and for the better regulation of the practice of physic throughout England and Wales, it is enacted, that if any person using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary, shall at any time knowingly, wilfully, and contumaciously, refuse to make, mix, compound, prepare, give, apply, or administer, or any way to sell, set on sale, put forth, or put to sale, to any person or persons whatever, any medicines, compound medicines, or medicinale compositions, or shall deliberately or negligently, falsely, unfaithfully, fraudulently, or unduly make, mix, compound, prepare, give, apply, or administer, or any way sell, set on sale, put forth, or put to sale to any person or persons whatever, any medicines, compound medicines, or medicinale compositions, as directed by any prescription, order, or receipt, signed with the initials, in his own handwriting, of any physician so lawfully licensed to practise physic, such person or persons so offending shall, upon complaint made within twenty-one days by such physician, and upon conviction of such offence before any of his majesty's justices of the peace, unless such offender can show some satisfactory reason, excuse, or justification, in this behalf, forfeit, for the first offence, the sum of £5; for the second offence, the sum of £10; and for the third offence he shall forfeit his certificate, and be rendered incapable in future of using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary, and be liable to the penalty inflicted by this act upon all who practise as such without a certificate, in the same manner as if such party so convicted had never been furnished with a certificate enabling him to practise as an apothecary; and such offender, so deprived of his certificate, shall be rendered and deemed incapable in future of receiving and holding any fresh certificate, unless the said party so applying for a renewal of his certificate shall faithfully promise and undertake, and give good and sufficient security, that he will not in future be guilty of the like offence.

Persons not to practise as apothecaries, &c., without due examination.

Sect. 14. And, to prevent any person from practising as an apothecary, without being properly qualified to practise as such, it is enacted, that, after the 1st day of August, 1815, it shall not be lawful for any person (except persons already in practice as such) to practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales, unless he shall have been examined by the court of examiners, or the major part of them, and have received a certificate of his being duly qualified to practise as such from the said court of examiners, or the major part of them, (a) who are hereby authorized and required to examine all persons applying to them, for the purpose of ascertaining the skill and abilities of such persons in the science and practice of medicine, and their fitness and qualification to practise as an apothecary; and the said court of examiners, or the major part of them, are hereby empowered either to reject such person, or to grant a certificate of such examination, and of his qualification to practise as an apothecary, as aforesaid: provided always that no person shall be admitted to such examination until he shall have attained the full age of 21 years. See the 6 Geo. IV. c. 133, s. 5, post, 87.

Applicants for examination to produce testimonials.

Sect. 15 provides and enacts, that no person shall be admitted to any such examination for a certificate to practise as an apothecary, unless he shall have served an apprenticeship of not less than five years to an apothecary, and unless he shall produce testimonials, to the satisfaction of the court of examiners, of a sufficient medical education, and of a good moral conduct.

Penalty for acting without a certificate. (a)

Sect. 20 enacts, that if any person (except such as are then actually practising as such) shall, after the 1st August, 1815, act or practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales, without having obtained such certificate, as aforesaid, every person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of £20; and if any person (except such as are then acting as such, and excepting persons who have actually served an apprenticeship, as aforesaid) shall, after the said 1st of August, 1815, act as an assistant to an apothecary to compound and dispense medicines, without having obtained such certificate, as aforesaid, every person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of £5. See the 6 Geo. IV. c. 133, s. 5, post, 87. (a)

And no apothecary shall be allowed to recover any charges claimed by him in any court of law, unless he shall prove on the trial that he was in practice as an apothecary prior to or on the 1st of August, 1815, or that he has obtained a certificate to practise as an apothecary from the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, as aforesaid. Practising while under the service of another, though for the party's own benefit, is not a practising within the act. Brown v. Robinson, 1 C. & P. 264. In an action for a libel on the plaintiff, who had served upwards of three years as house apothecary at a public infirmary, before the 55 Geo. III. c. 194, it was held that such service was sufficient to qualify him as an apothecary, without proof of apprenticeship, or production of a certificate, in conformity with the statute. Wogan v. Somerville, 1 Moore, 102; 7 Taunt. 401, S. C.

But where it appeared that the defendant, who was sued for the penalty, never had or could have made up physicians' prescriptions prior to the 1st of Aug. 1815, this was held to be cogent evidence to be left to the jury, and that they did right in finding that he had not practised as an apothecary, although he had administered medicines to the patients before that period. 3 B. & A. 40.

Nor is it sufficient, to bring a party within the exception, to show that, previously to and on the 12th of July, 1815 (when the act received the royal assent), he was practising as an apothecary; but he must show that he was so practising on the 1st of August, 1815. Apoth. Comp. v. Roby, 5 B. & A. 949.

(b) If, in an action on an apothecary's bill, the plaintiff fail to prove himself qualified within the act, he cannot recover even for the vials in which the medicines were supplied. Steed v. Henley, 1 C. & P. 574.

In an action by payee of a promissory note, expressed to be "in consideration of the plaintiff's care and medical attendance bestowed on the maker," it was held that the plaintiff, to recover, must bring himself within section 21. Blogg v. Pinkers, R. & M., C. N. P. 125.

A general certificate of qualification to practise, without limitation as to time or place, is sufficient to enable an apothecary to sue for medicines, &c., furnished to patients in London; though the receipt indorsed on the certificate is for four guineas, and paid after the commencement of the action. Chadwick v. Beuning, R. & M., C. N. P. 306.

An apothecary may charge for attendance, or for the medicines he sends, but he cannot charge for both. Townes v. Lady Gresley, 3 C. & P. 581. A surgeon may recover for attendance. Poucher v. Norman, 3 B. & C. 745.

A member of the Royal College of Surgeons cannot sue for medicines furnished, unless he be also certificated by the Apothecaries' Company. Allison v. Haydon, 1 M. & P. 588.

Application of monies arising from penalties.

Recovery of fines and penalties.

Distress not unlawful for want of form.

Saving rights.

Limitation of actions.

Sect. 24 enacts, that all sums of money which shall arise from the granting of certificates of examination shall be appropriated and disposed of by the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, in such manner as they shall, from time to time, direct and deem most expedient.

Sect. 25. And all sums arising from conviction and recovery of penalties for offences committed against this act, shall be applied and disposed of in manner following: viz. one half to the informer, and one half thereof to the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, to be disposed of in such manner as they shall deem most expedient.

Sect. 26 enacts, that all penalties and forfeitures by this act imposed (the manner of levying and recovering whereof is not otherwise directed) shall, if they exceed the sum of £5, be recovered by action, in the name of the master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, of the city of London, in any of his majesty's courts of record in England or Wales, &c.; and, if such penalty or forfeiture shall amount to less than the sum of £5, the same shall be levied and recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace, acting for any county, city, town, or place where the offence shall be committed (which warrant such justice is hereby empowered and required to grant, upon the confession of the party, or upon the evidence of any credible witness upon oath, and which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer); and the overplus (if any) of the money arising by such distress and sale shall be returned upon demand to the owner of such goods and chattels, after deducting the costs and charges of making, keeping, and selling the distress; and, in case sufficient distress shall not be found, or such forfeitures and penalties shall not be paid forthwith, it shall be lawful for such justice, and he is hereby authorized and required, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause the offender to be committed to the common gaol for the county, city, town, or place where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding one calendar month, unless such penalties, and forfeitures, and costs, shall be sooner fully paid and satisfied.

Sect. 27. And where any distress shall be made for any sum of money to be levied by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the notice or information, summons, conviction, warrant, or distress, or other proceeding relating thereto; nor shall the party distraining be deemed a trespasser ab initio, on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards done by the party so distraining; but the person aggrieved by such irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage, in an action upon the case.

Sect. 28 provides, that nothing in this act contained shall extend in any way to affect the trade or business of a chymist and druggist, in the buying, preparing, compounding, dispensing, and vending drugs, medicines, and medicinal compounds, wholesale and retail; but all persons using or exercising the said trade or business, or who shall or may hereafter use or exercise the same, may use, exercise, and carry on the same trade or business, in such manner, and as fully and amply, to all intents and purposes, as the same trade or business was used, exercised, or carried on, by chymists and druggists before the passing of this act.

Sect. 29 provides, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to prejudice or in any wise to interfere with any of the rights, privileges, &c., of the two Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, the royal College of Physicians, the royal College of Surgeons, or the said Society of Apothecaries, except such as shall or may have been altered or amended by this act, or of any person practising as an apothecary previously to the 1st day of August, 1815.

Sect. 30 provides, that no action or suit shall be brought or prosecuted against any person, bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, for anything done in pursuance of this act, after six calendar months next after the fact committed; or, in case there shall be a continuation of damages, then after six calendar months next after such damage shall have ceased; and every such action shall be laid and brought in the county where the matter in dispute shall arise; and the defendant recovering shall have double costs.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 133, it is enacted—"Whereas an act was passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George III., intituled 'An Act for better regulating the Practice of Apothecaries throughout England and Wales:' and whereas doubts have arisen as to some of the provisions of the said act: and whereas by the said act power is given to the master, wardens, and society of the art and mystery of apothecaries of the city of London for the time being, and their successors, or any of the assistants, or any other person or persons properly qualified, as in the said recited act is mentioned, to be by the master and wardens nominated and assigned, not being fewer in number than two persons at the least, to go and enter into any shop or shops of any person or persons whatever, using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary in any part of England and Wales, for the purpose of searching, surveying, proving, and determining if the medicines, wares, drugs, or any thing or things whatsoever therein contained, and belonging to the art or mystery of apothecaries aforesaid, be wholesome, meet, and fit for the cure, health, and ease of his majesty's subjects: and whereas there is not any form set forth in or provided by the said recited act, according to which such appointment for the purposes aforesaid should be made, and in consequence thereof in some cases the persons appointed by the said master and wardens to go and enter into the shops of persons using the art and mystery of apothecaries, have met with difficulty in obtaining admission thereto, for the purpose of examining the drugs, wares, and medicines therein contained: and whereas it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and provision should be made in relation to such appointment as aforesaid: and whereas the said act requires to be amended in other respects, for the more effectually carrying into execution the beneficial purposes thereof: it is enacted, that, from and after the passing of this act, all appointments which shall be made by the master and wardens of the said society of the art and mystery of apothecaries of the city of London, in pursuance of the said recited act, of any persons, to go and enter into the shops of any person or persons using the art and mystery of an apothecary in any part of England and Wales, for the purpose of searching, surveying, and proving whether the medicines, wares, drugs or any thing or things whatsoever in such shop or shops contained, and belonging to the art or mystery of an apothecary, be wholesome, meet, and fit for the cure, health, and ease of his majesty's subjects, shall be in the form hereinafter stated, and shall be sealed with the common seal of the said society of the art and mystery of apothecaries of the city of London, and shall, on being produced to any person or persons at the shop or dwelling-house having a shop therein, of any apothecary in any part of England or Wales, by the persons therein appointed, who in pursuance and by virtue thereof shall require to enter such shop for the purpose of examining the medicines, drugs, wares, and other things therein contained, in pursuance of the said recited act, be deemed to be sufficient evidence of the appointment of the persons in such appointment or appointments named for the purposes therein expressed.

6 Geo. 4, c. 123.

Members of court of assistants may be members of court of examiners.

Sect. 2. "And whereas doubts have arisen, whether the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said society of apothecaries, or the major part of them, can appoint or elect any person or persons who are members of the said court of assistants (although they are duly qualified according to the said recited act) to be members of the court of examiners, directed to be from time to time appointed in pursuance of the said recited act: and whereas it would be useful and expedient, that a limited number of persons, being members of the said court of assistants of the said society, duly qualified pursuant to the said recited act, should be eligible to be chosen and appointed to be members of the said court of examiners; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful to and for the said master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said society of apothecaries, or the major part of them, from time to time to elect and appoint any member or members of the court of assistants of the said society (not exceeding four persons in the whole,) duly qualified according to the said act to be members of the court of examiners, directed in and by the said recited act to be from time to time appointed: provided always, nevertheless, that the master and the wardens of the said society for the time being shall be in all cases incapable of being elected as members of the said court of examiners; and any person or persons who shall, after his or their election to be a member of the said court of examiners, be chosen and appointed to be either master of the said society of apothecaries, or senior warden or junior warden thereof, shall ipso facto vacate his seat in the said court of examiners, and shall be incapable of being re-elected, until he shall have ceased to be master or senior or junior warden of the said society."

Master and wardens may administer oaths to examiners as by 55 G. 3, c. 124.

Sect. 3. "And whereas doubts have arisen whether the oath or affirmation directed by the said recited act passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty as aforesaid to be taken and subscribed by all persons who shall from time to time, in pursuance of the aforesaid act, be chosen and appointed to be members of the court of examiners, before they can act as examiners, can be administered by the master and wardens of the said society, or whether such oath or affirmation must be administered by the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said society, or the major part of them; and it would be convenient that power should be given, as well to the master and wardens of the said society of the art and mystery of apothecaries for the time being, or to the master and one of the wardens of the said society for the time being, as to the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said society, or the major part of them, to administer the said oath or affirmation so directed to be taken and subscribed by all persons who shall be appointed to be members of the said court of examiners, before they can act as examiners; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall and may be lawful to and for the master and wardens of the said society for the time being, or for the master and one of the wardens of the said society for the time being, or for the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said society, or the major part of them, and they are hereby respectively authorized, required, and empowered, to administer to all persons who shall from time to time be, by the master, wardens, and court of assistants of the said society, or the major part of them, chosen and appointed to be members of the said court of examiners, by virtue of the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George III. the oath or affirmation directed by the said recited act to be taken by all persons who shall in pursuance of that act be from time to time appointed to be members of the court of examiners, before they can act as examiners."

Sect. 4. "And whereas many persons who have heretofore held, and now do or who hereafter shall hold commissions in his majesty's service, as surgeons, either in his majesty's navy, or as surgeons or apothecaries in his majesty's army, cannot commence practice as apothecaries in any part of England or Wales, without being examined by the court of examiners appointed in pursuance of the aforesaid recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George III. or being liable to the penalties thereby imposed on persons who, not having been in practice as apothecaries on the 1st day of August, 1815, shall commence to act or practise as apothecaries without having been examined, and received certificates of their qualification, pursuant to the said recited act : and whereas it is expedient to provide a remedy in that behalf ; be it therefore enacted, that every person who heretofore has held, or who now holds, or hereafter shall hold a commission or warrant as surgeon or assistant surgeon in his majesty's navy, or as surgeon or assistant surgeon or apothecary in his majesty's army, or as surgeon or assistant surgeon in the service of the Honourable the East India Company, shall be entitled to practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales, without having undergone any such examination, or received any such certificate, as by the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George III. is directed, and without being liable to any penalty or disability whatsoever imposed by the said recited act, on persons who, not having been in practice as apothecaries on the said 1st day of August, 1815, without having been examined, and received certificates in the manner directed by the said recited act, commenced practice as apothecaries in any part of England or Wales ; and no such person shall be obliged, in order to recover in a court of law any charges claimed by him as an apothecary, to prove that he was in practice as an apothecary on the said 1st day of August, 1815, otherwise than as holding a commission or warrant as surgeon or assistant surgeon in his majesty's navy, or as surgeon or assistant surgeon or apothecary in his majesty's army, or as surgeon or assistant surgeon in the service of the Honourable the East India Company ; any thing in the said recited act contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

6 Geo. 4. c. 133.

Surgeons, &c. in the navy, and surgeons and apothecaries, &c. in the army, may practise without examination.

Sect. 5. " And whereas by the said recited act it is enacted, that from and after the 1st day of August, 1815, it shall not be lawful for any person (except persons already in practice as such,) to practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales, unless he shall have been examined in the manner, and received such certificate of qualification, as by the said recited act is directed : and whereas it is also thereby enacted, that if any person (except such as are then actually practising as such,) shall after the said 1st day of August, 1815, act or practise as an apothecary, in any part of England or Wales, without having obtained such certificate as in the said recited act is mentioned, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l*. ; and if any person (except such as are then acting as such, and excepting persons who have actually served such an apprenticeship as in the said recited act is mentioned), shall after the said 1st day of August, 1815, act as an assistant to any apothecary to compound and dispense medicines, without having obtained such certificate as in the said act is mentioned, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l*. : and whereas by the said recited act it is also further enacted, that no apothecary shall be allowed to recover any charges claimed by him in any court of law, unless such apothecary shall prove on the trial that he was in practice as an apothecary prior to or on the said 1st day of August, 1815, or that he has obtained a certificate to practise as an apothecary from the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries as aforesaid : and whereas by the said recited act it is also enacted, that nothing in the said act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to lessen, prejudice, or defeat, or in any wise to interfere with any of the rights, authorities, privileges, and immunities of any person or persons practising as an apothecary previously to the 1st day of August, 1815 ; but the said persons or person shall have, use, exercise, and enjoy all such rights, authorities, privileges, and immunities, in as full, ample, and beneficial a manner, to all intents and purposes, as they might have done before the passing of the said recited act, in case the same had never been passed : and whereas it is expedient that the several terms or periods in the said act mentioned, after which persons not being at such times or periods in practice as apothecaries are required by the said recited act to be examined, or are thereby made subject to the penalties by the said act imposed on persons commencing practice as apothecaries, or assistants to apothecaries, contrary to the provisions thereof, or to prove their exemption from Seal of the company to be proof of the authenticity of the certificates.

Sect. 7. "And whereas the authenticating the certificates of qualification of such persons as have been or as shall be examined by the court of examiners in pursuance of the aforesaid act has been attended with considerable expense, and might often be difficult of proof, if such certificates were required to be authenticated in different parts of England at the same time in different actions: for remedy whereof, be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, the common seal of the said society of the art and mystery of apothecaries of the city of London shall be deemed to be and shall be received in every court of law or equity in any part of England or Wales as sufficient proof of the authenticity of the certificate to which such seal shall be affixed, and that the person therein named is duly qualified to practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales."

Sect. 8. whereas several persons who have been upon their first and second examinations deemed unfit to receive a certificate of qualification to act as apothecaries, have, upon a subsequent examination, received certificates of their qualification to act as apothecaries, and it would be expedient to provide a remedy in that behalf; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the court of examiners who shall be appointed from time to time in pursuance of the said act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty King George III. or the major part of them, to examine any person or persons who have been rejected by the said court of examiners, on the second examination of such person or persons, from time to time as often as such person or persons shall apply to be examined, so as such future examinations be from time to time respectively at an interval of not less than six months from the previous examination; and that all persons who have heretofore received, from the said court of examiners, certificates of their qualification to act as apothecaries, upon their third or subsequent examination, shall be deemed to have been legally examined; and that the certificates which have been granted to such persons shall be deemed and taken to be as valid as if the same had been granted by the said court of examiners on the first or second examination of such persons."

Sect. 10 provides and enacts, "that no action or suit shall be brought or prosecuted against any person or persons, body or bodies politic, corporate or collegiate, for any thing done in pursuance of this act, or the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year of his late majesty King George III., after six calendar months next after the fact committed; or in case there shall be a continuation of damages, then after six calendar months next after the doing or committing such damage shall have ceased, and not afterwards, nor until the expiration of twenty-one days after notice shall have been given to or left for the person or persons, body or bodies politic, corporate or collegiate, against whom such action is intended to be brought, under the hand of the party intending to bring such action, previously to the commencing such action; and every such action or suit shall be laid and brought in the county where the matter in dispute shall arise, and not elsewhere; and the defendant and defendants in every such action or suit shall or may, at his, her, or their election, plead specially, or the general issue, and give this act and the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late majesty, and the special matter, in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance of and by the authority of this act and the said recited act; and if it shall appear to have been so done, or if any such action or suit shall have been brought before the expiration of twenty-one days after notice shall have been given or left as aforesaid, or after sufficient satisfaction shall have been made or tendered, or shall be brought in any other county or place than as aforesaid, then and in every such case the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; and upon such verdict, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or shall suffer a discontinuance or non pros. of his, her, or their action or suit after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if a verdict shall pass against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or if upon demurrer or otherwise judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, then the defendant or defendants shall have double costs, and shall have such remedy for recovering the same as any defendant hath for recovering costs of suit in any other cases by law."

[56 Geo. III. c. 138.]

Pillory, what.

PILLORY (in Latin, collistrigium, from the person's neck being put between two boards,) is a very ancient punishment, in this kingdom, and was used heretofore by the Saxons. 3 Inst. 219.

Tumbrel, what.

The tumbrel seemeth to have been anciently the same with the ducking-stool; an engine for the punishment of scolding women, by ducking them over head and ears in water, and especially in muddy or stinking water, according to the etymology of Lord Coke, who tells us that the word tumbrel signifieth a dung-cart. Lamb. 61; 3 Inst. 219.

Who shall find them.

Every one that hath a leet or market ought to have a pillory and tumbrel to punish offenders; and it seems that a leet may be forfeited for not taking care to have a pillory and tumbrel. 3 Inst. 219; 2 Haw. c. 11, s. 5.

Infamy of the punishment.

They that have been adjudged to the pillory or tumbrel are so infamous that they shall not be received to be jurors or witnesses. 3 Inst. 219.

56 Geo. 3, c. 138.
Judgment of pillory to be awarded for certain offences only.

By the stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 138, after reciting that, "as the punishment of the pillory has in many cases been found inexpedient, and not fully to answer the purpose for which it was intended," it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act judgment shall not be given and awarded against any person or persons convicted of any offence, that such person or persons do stand in or upon the pillory, except for the offences hereinafter mentioned; any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding: provided that all laws now in force whereby any person is subject to punishment for the taking any false oath, or for committing any manner of wilful and corrupt perjury, or for the procuring and suborning any other person so to do, or for wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirming or declaring, or procuring or suborning any other person so to affirm and declare, in any matter or thing which, if the same had been deposed in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, shall continue and be in full force and effect; and that all persons guilty of any of the said several offences shall incur and suffer the same punishment, penalties, and forfeitures as such persons were subject to by the laws and statutes of this realm, or any of them, before the passing of this act, and as if this act had not been made."

Court may fine or imprison offenders.

Sect. 2 enacts, "that in all cases where the punishment of the pillory has hitherto formed the whole or a part of the judgment to be pronounced, it shall and may be lawful for the court before whom such offence is tried, to pass such sentence of fine or imprisonment, or of both, in lieu of the sentence of pillory, as to the said court shall seem most proper: provided that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend in any manner to change, alter, or affect, any punishment whatsoever which may now be by law inflicted in respect of any offence, except only the punishment of pillory, in manner as herem-above is directed."

Not to change any punishment for offences, except the pillory.

Piracy.

[11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7; 8 Geo. I. c. 24; 18 Geo. II. c. 30; 5 Geo. IV. c. 113.]

AS to the trial of piracy, see Admiralty, Vol. I. p. 47, 8.

At common law, the offence of piracy consists in committing those acts of robbery and depredation upon the high seas, which, if committed on land, would have amounted to felony there. 1 Russ. 100.

Where several mariners on board a ship lying near the Groyne seized the captain, he not agreeing with them, and, having put him on shore, carried away the ship, and afterwards committed several piracies, this force upon the captain, and the carrying away the ship, which was explained by the use of it afterwards, was adjudged piracy. R. v. May and others, 2 E. P. C. 796; 2 Russ. 103.

If persons at sea force the captain of a vessel to sell part of his cargo for less than its value, it is piracy. 3 T. R. 783; see 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, s. 4. But if a pirate attack a vessel, and before he obtains possession of her, the captain, in order to redeem her, give an oath to pay a sum certain, this is no piracy, for there was no taking. Molloy, 64, s. 18. But if there be an actual taking, it is piracy, although the pirate afterwards allow the party to proceed on his voyage. 1 Sir L. Jenk. 98.

If a party making a caption at sea, do so by the authority of any prince or state, it cannot be considered piracy; for a nation never can be deemed pirates: fixed domain, public revenue, and a certain form of government, exempt a people from that character. Even a capture by authority of the states of Algiers, Tunis, or Tripoli, cannot be treated as piracy. 2 Sir L. Jenk. 790; Grot. 2, c. 18, s. 2; but see now 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7, infra, and 18 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 1, post, 94.

If the subjects of the same state commit robbery upon each other, upon the high sea, it is piracy. If the subjects of different states commit robbery upon each other, upon the high sea, if their respective states be in amity, it is piracy; if at enmity, it is not; for it is a general rule, that enemies never can commit piracy on each other, their depredations being deemed mere acts of hostility. 1 Sir L. Jenk. 94; 4 Inst. 154.

See further, Robbery, post.

A variety of offences have been made piracies by different statutes.

The 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7, s. 8, (made perpetual by the 6 Geo. I. c. 19, enacts, that, "if any of his majesty's natural-born subjects or denizens of this kingdom shall commit any piracy or robbery, or any act or hostility, against others his majesty's subjects, upon the sea, under colour of any commission from any foreign prince or state, or pretence of authority from any person whatsoever, such offender and offenders, and every of them, shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be pirates, felons, and robbers; and they and every of them, being duly convicted thereof, according to this act, or the aforesaid statute of King Henry VIII. (28 Hen. VIII. c. 15,) shall have and suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers, upon the seas, ought to have and suffer."

By stat. 11 & 12 Wil. 3, c. 7, king's subjects, &c. committing piracy on others of the king's subjects by commission from any foreign prince, shall be adjudged pirates, &c., and suffer death.

11 & 12 W. 3, c. 7.

Commander or mariner, who shall betray his trust, or turn pirate, &c.

Sect. 9 enacts, "that if any commander or master of any ship, or any seaman or mariner, shall, in any place where the admiral hath jurisdiction, betray his trust, and turn pirate, enemy, or rebel, and piratically and feloniously run away with his or their ship or ships, or any barge, boat, ordnance, ammunition, goods, or merchandizes, or yield them up voluntarily to any pirate, or shall bring any seducing messages from any pirate, enemy, or rebel, or consult, combine, or confederate with, or attempt or endeavour to corrupt, any commander, master, officer, or mariner, to yield up or run away with any ship, goods, or merchandizes, or turn pirate, or go over to pirates;" "or make or endeavour to make a revolt in the ship, (he) shall be adjudged, deemed, and taken to be a pirate, felon, and robber, and, being convicted thereof according to the directions of this act, shall have and suffer pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers, upon the seas, ought to have and suffer."

Persons setting forth, or aiding or assisting any pirate, &c.,

Sect. 10 recites that, "several evil-disposed persons, in the plantations and elsewhere, have contributed very much towards the increase and encouragement of pirates, by setting them forth, and by aiding, abetting, receiving, and concealing them and their goods, and there being some defects in the laws for bringing such evil-disposed persons to condign punishment:" enacts, "that all and every person and persons whatsoever, who, after the 29th day of September, in the year of our lord 1700, shall, either on the land or upon the seas, knowingly or wittingly set forth any pirate, or aid and assist, or maintain, procure, command, counsel, or devise any person or persons whatsoever, to do or commit any piracies or robberies upon the seas, and such person and persons shall thereupon do or commit any such piracy or robbery, then all and every such person or persons whatsoever, so as aforesaid setting forth any pirate, or aiding, assisting, maintaining, procuring, commanding, counselling, or advising the same, either on the land or upon the sea, shall be and are hereby declared, and shall be deemed and adjudged to be, accessory to such piracy and robbery done and committed; and further, that after any piracy or robbery is or shall be committed by any pirate or robber whatsoever, every person and persons, who, knowing that such pirate or robber has done or committed such piracy and robbery, shall, on the land or upon the sea, receive, entertain, or conceal any such pirate or robber, or receive or take into his custody, any ship, vessel, goods, or chattels, which have been by any such pirate or robber piratically and feloniously taken, shall be, and are hereby likewise declared, deemed, and adjudged to be, accessory to such piracy and robbery; and that, after the said 29th day of September, all such accessories to such piracies and robberies shall and may be inquired of, tried, heard, determined, and adjudged, after the common course of the laws of this land, according to the said statute made in the twenty-eighth year of King Henry VIII. as the principals of such piracies and robberies may and ought to be, and not otherwise; and; being thereupon attainted, shall suffer such pains of death, losses of lands, goods, and chattels, and in like manner, as the principals of such piracies, robberies, and felonies, ought to suffer, according to the said statute of King Henry VIII., which is hereby declared to be and continue in full force, any thing in this present act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

shall be adjudged accessories,

the like for concealing pirates, &c.

How accessories shall be tried.

Reward to discover any combination for running away with ship, &c.,

Sect. 12. "And for the better and more effectual prevention of combinations and confederacies for the running away with or destroying of any ship, goods, or merchandize: be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that a reward of 10*l*. for every ship or vessel of one hundred tons or under, and 15*l*. for every ship or vessel of a greater burden, shall be paid by the captain, commander, or master of every ship or vessel, wherein any such combination or confederacy shall be set on foot for the running away with or destroying any such ship, or the goods and merchandizes therein laden, to such person as shall first make a discovery thereof, upon due proof of such combination or confederacy; the same to be paid at the port where the wages of the seamen of the said ship are or ought to be paid, after such discovery and proof made."

and how to be paid.

Sect. 16. How commissions to the cinque ports shall be directed. See Admiralty, Vol. I.

Sect. 17. For the prevention of seamen deserting of merchant ships abroad, in parts beyond the seas, which is the chief occasion of their turning pirates, and of great detriment to trade and navigation in general, it is enacted, "that all such seamen, officers, or sailors, who shall desert the ships or vessels wherein they are hired to serve for that voyage, shall for such offence forfeit all such wages as shall be then due to him or them."

1 Geo. 1. c. 24.

Seamen deserting merchant ships to lose their wages.

It has been decided that making, or endeavouring to make, a revolt, with a view to procure a redress of grievances, and without any intent to run away with the ship, or to commit any act of piracy, is an offence within the ninth section of this statute. R. v. Hastings, R. & M. C. C. 82.

By the 1 Geo. 1. c. 24, (made perpetual by 2 Geo. II. c. 28,) sect. 1, reciting that "the number of persons committing piracies, felonies, and robberies upon the seas, is of late very much increased; and, notwithstanding the laws already made and now in being, many idle and profligate persons have turned pirates, and betaken themselves to that wicked course of life, whereby the trade and navigation into remote parts will greatly suffer, unless some further provision be speedily made for bringing such persons, and all others, who shall be any ways aiding and assisting, or in confederacy with them, to condign punishment;" it is declared and enacted, "that if any commander or master of any ship or vessel, or any other person or persons shall, from and after the 25th day of March, which shall be in the year of our lord 1722, anywise trade with any pirate, by truck, barter, exchange, or in any other manner, or shall furnish any pirate, felon, or robber upon the seas, with any ammunition, provision, or stores of any kind, or shall fit out any ship or vessel knowingly, and with a design to trade with, or supply or correspond with any pirate, felon, or robber upon the seas; or if any person or persons shall anywise consult, combine, confederate, or correspond with any pirate, felon, or robber upon the seas, knowing him to be guilty of any such piracy, felony, or robbery, such offender and offenders, and every of them, shall in each and every of the said cases be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be guilty of piracy, felony, and robbery, and he and they shall and may be inquired of, tried, heard, and adjudged of, and for all or any the matters aforesaid, according to the 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, and the 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7, and he and they, being convicted of all or any the matters aforesaid, shall suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers upon the seas ought to suffer; and, in case any person or persons belonging to any ship or vessel whatsoever, upon meeting any merchant ship or vessel on the high seas, or in any port, haven, or creek whatsoever, shall forcibly board or enter into such ship or vessel, and though they do not seize and carry off such ship or vessel, shall throw overboard or destroy any part of the goods or merchandizes belonging to such ship or vessel, the person or persons who shall be guilty thereof, shall in all respects be deemed and punished as pirates as aforesaid."

Commander of ships or others, trading with pirates, furnishing them with stores, corresponding with them, &c.

Persons belonging to any vessel, forcibly boarding any merchant ship, and throwing any goods overboard.

Sect. 3. Reciting that there are some defects in the laws for bringing persons who are accessories to piracy and robbery upon the seas, to condign punishment, if the principal who committed such piracy and robbery is not or cannot be apprehended and brought to justice, enacts, "that all and every person and persons whatsoever, who, by the said statute made in the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of King William III. are declared to be accessory or accessories to any piracy or robbery therein mentioned, are hereby declared, and shall be deemed and taken, to be principal pirates, felons, and robbers, and shall and may, from and after the said 25th day of March, 1722, be inquired of, heard, determined, and adjudged, in the same manner as persons guilty of piracy and robbery may and ought to be inquired of, tried, heard, determined, and adjudged by the said statute made in the eleventh and twelfth years of his late majesty King William, and, being thereupon attainted and convicted, shall suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, and in like manner, as pirates and robbers ought by the said act to suffer."

Persons declared accessories to piracy, by 11 & 12 Wil. 3, c. 7, shall be deemed principals.

Sect. 4 enacts, "that all and every offender or offenders convicted of any piracy, felony, or robbery, by virtue of this act, shall not be admitted to have the benefit of clergy, but be utterly excluded of and from the same."

Offenders convicted on this act, excluded the benefit of clergy.

18 Geo. 2, c. 30.

Sect. 7 enacts, "that masters or seamen, not defending themselves against pirates, or who shall utter any discouraging words, shall, if the ship be taken, forfeit their wages to the owners, and suffer six months' imprisonment."

18 Geo. 2, c. 30.

By the 18 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 1, reciting that, by an act made in the eleventh year of King William III., intituled, "An Act for the more Effectual Suppression of Piracy," it is (amongst other things) enacted, "that all piracies, felonies, and robberies committed on the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, may be examined, inquired of, tried, and determined and adjudged, according to the directions of the said act, in any place at sea, or upon the land, in any of his majesty's islands, plantations, colonies, dominions, forts, or factories, to be appointed for that purpose by the king's commission, in the manner therein directed; and it is also thereby further enacted, that if any of his majesty's natural-born subjects, or denizens of this kingdom, shall commit any piracy or robbery, or any act of hostility, against others of his majesty's subjects, upon the sea, under colour of any commission from any foreign prince or state, or pretence of authority from any person whatsoever, such offenders shall be deemed pirates, felons, and robbers; and they, being duly convicted, according to the said act, or according to an act of the twenty-eighth year of the reign of King Henry VIII. therein recited, shall have and suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers upon the seas ought to have and suffer; and whereas, since the present wars with France and Spain, divers of his majesty's natural-born subjects have entered in the service of his majesty's enemies, on board privateers, or other ships, having commissions from the crowns of France and Spain, and committed divers hostilities against his majesty's subjects upon the seas, in the West Indies, and other parts; and whereas doubts have arisen, whether, as such offenders have, by such their adherence to the king's enemies, been guilty of high treason, they can be deemed guilty of felony, within the intent of the said act, and, as such, liable to be tried by the said court of admiralty, appointed, or to be appointed, by virtue of the said act: therefore, to put an end to the said doubts, and to prevent the inconveniences that must arise, by the want of speedy justice on such offenders," it is enacted, that all persons, being natural-born subjects, or denizens of his majesty, who, during the present or any future wars, have committed, or shall commit, any hostilities upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place, where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, against his majesty's subjects, by virtue or under colour of any commission from any of his majesty's enemies, or have been or shall be any other ways adherent, or giving aid or comfort to his majesty's enemies upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place, where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, may be tried as pirates, felons, and robbers in the said Court of Admiralty, on shipboard, or upon the land, in the same manner as persons guilty of piracy, felony, and robbery, are by the said act directed to be tried; and such persons, being upon such trial convicted thereof, shall suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as any other pirates, felons, and robbers ought, by virtue of the said recited act of the eleventh year of King William III., or any other act, to suffer."

Subjects or denizens, during any wars, committing hostilities at sea, against his majesty's subjects, where the admirals have power, or giving aid, &c. to enemies at sea, may be tried as pirates.

Not to be tried again for the same crime as high treason.

Criminals not tried by this act, may be tried for high treason, by 28 H. 8, c. 5.

Dealing in slaves on the high seas, &c. to be deemed piracy.

Sect. 2 provides and enacts, "that any person who shall be tried and acquitted, or convicted, according to this act, for any of the said crimes, shall not be liable to be indicted, prosecuted, or tried again in Great Britain, or elsewhere, for the same crime or fact, as high treason."

Sect. 3 provides, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to prevent any persons guilty of any of the said crimes, who shall not be tried according to this act, from being tried for high treason within this realm, according to the aforesaid act of the twenty-eighth year of King Henry VIII.

An assayer shall be elected by the company in each of the said places, who shall take an oath of office.

By the said acts, every goldsmith, silversmith, and plateworker, within the said places, and elsewhere, shall, before he takes upon him to exercise the said trade, enter his name, and mark, and place of abode, with the wardens of the company where an assayer is; and if he shall not make such entry, or shall strike any other mark but what is so entered, he shall forfeit double value, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue in any court of record in the county or place where the offence shall be committed. As to the fineness thereof by the standard, it is enacted by the 6 Geo. I. c. 11, s. 41, that plate may be made, either according to the old standard (of 11 ounces and 2 pennyweights fine silver, in every pound troy), or according to the new standard (of 11 ounces and 10 pennyweights); but differently marked. 6 Geo. 1, c. 11.

And by the 12 Geo. II. c. 26, s. 5, plate of 11 ounces and 10 pennyweights shall be marked with the maker's mark, viz. the first letters of his christian and surname; and the mark of the said company, viz. a lion's head

24 Geo. 2, c. 53.

Additional mark.

And moreover, by the 24 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 1, 5, all plate shall be marked with a new mark of the king's head, beside the old marks, and the duties shall be paid previous to the marking thereof.

And by s. 8, no gold or silver plate shall be sold or exchanged until marked, on pain of 50*l*.

Allowance to be made.

But by s. 7, 10, the duties shall be returned for all plate defaced for being coarser than the standard (if no fraud appear). And an allowance of one fifth part shall be made for goods sent to be assayed in a rough state.

Goods excepted.

And by s. 9, the said duties shall not extend to any jeweller's work other than mourning rings, nor to any jointed night ear-rings of gold, or gold springs of lockets, or to goods excepted by the 12 Geo. II. c. 26, s. 6.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 7, "If any person shall forge or counterfeit, or cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, any mark, stamp, or die, which shall have been provided, made, or used in pursuance of this or any former act, relating to any duties on gold or silver plate made or wrought in Great Britain, for the purpose of marking or stamping any such gold or silver plate, in the manner directed by any such act, or shall forge, counterfeit, or resemble, or cause or procure to be forged, counterfeited, or resembled, the impression of any such mark, stamp, or die, upon any such gold or silver plate, with intent to defraud his majesty, his heirs, or successors; or if any person shall mark or stamp, or cause or procure to be marked or stamped, any such gold or silver plate, or any vessel or ware of base metal, with any such forged or counterfeited mark, stamp, or die, as aforesaid, or shall transpose or remove, or cause or procure to be transposed or removed, from one piece of gold or silver plate to another, or to any vessel or ware of base metal, any impression made with any mark, stamp, or die, which shall have been provided, made, or used in pursuance of this or any former act, for the purpose of marking or stamping of any such gold or silver plate, as aforesaid; or if any person shall sell, exchange, or expose to sale, or export out of Great Britain, any such gold or silver plate, or any vessel or ware of base metal, having thereupon the impression of any such

By the same statute, "If any person shall transpose or remove, or cause, &c. from one piece of wrought gold or silver to another, or to any vessel or ware of base metal, any impression provided, made, or used under the direction of the committee of stamps, or persons authorized in that behalf, for denoting the duties or payment of duties on plate; or shall stamp or mark, or cause, &c. any such with any mark, stamp, or die, forged or counterfeited, to resemble any mark, &c. so provided; or shall sell, exchange, or expose to sale, or export out of Great Britain, any wrought plate of gold or silver, or any vessel or ware of base metal, having thereon the impression of any forged or counterfeited mark, stamp, or die, so provided, &c. as aforesaid, or any impression of any such mark, &c. so transposed or removed as aforesaid, knowing the same to be so forged or transposed; or shall wilfully and without lawful excuse (proof to be on the accused) have or be possessed of any such forged or counterfeited mark, &c., every such offender shall on conviction be adjudged guilty of felony without clergy."

But now, by the 1 Wil. IV. c. 66, s. 1, all forgeries theretofore declared capital (except those relating to coin), and not declared capital by that act, are to be punished with transportation or imprisonment only; and the above offence of forging marks on plate, &c., is not mentioned in the 1 Wil. Punishment for forgery, &c. of the mark.

R. v. Jackson, 1 Cowp. 297, 298. The defendant had been convicted upon the 28 Edw. I. c. 20, (the punishment of which is imprisonment and ransom at the king's pleasure) for making silver plate of worse alloy than the standard alloy of the realm. The indictment also contained a count upon the 6 Geo. I. c. 11, and the third for an offence at common law. He was found guilty upon all the counts. In Mich. 1774, motion was made in arrest of judgment, upon the ground of the 28 Edw. I. c. 20, being repealed, when the Court of King's Bench took time to consider and look into the acts of Parliament: Lord Mansfield declared the unanimous opinion of the court, that it "is in full force, and not repealed or abrogated by any of the subsequent statutes since enacted." His lordship observed, that the preamble of the 12 Geo. II. c. 26, recites the 28 Edw. I. c. 20, and some other acts, as subsisting laws; but says not one word as to a repeal of any of the former laws. He farther instanced two similar cases decided by him, where sentence of fine and imprisonment was pronounced, and no objection was made in either case. "Therefore," said he, "I suppose it was taken for granted, as it is at this time by the Goldsmiths' Company, that the statute was still in force. We are all of opinion that it is in force, and, consequently, that the indictment is good." The rule for arresting judgment was discharged.

Evidence to support conviction.

R. v. Glossop, 4 B. & A. 616. In a conviction of defendant for causing to be acted, at a certain place called the Coburg Theatre, in the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, for gain and reward, a certain entertainment of the stage, called Richard the Third, the evidence set forth was, that the defendant was seen once or twice at the rehearsals of Richard; that another person was stage-manager; that defendant engaged J. B. B. to perform, and gave him a check for the amount of his benefit: it was held, that this was sufficient to warrant the justices in drawing the conclusion, that the defendant caused the play of Richard the Third to be performed. The conviction also stated, after the appearance and plea of defendant, that divers credible witnesses, to wit, J. B. B., &c., came before the justices upon their several oaths, to them severally and respectively, and in the presence of the said J. B. B., &c., duly administered: held that, taking it altogether, it did substantially appear that the oath was administered to the witnesses in the presence of the magistrates. The evidence also stated, that the Coburg Theatre was in the parish of Lambeth, and the adjudication of the penalty was to the poor of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth: it was held, that this was no variance, it not appearing that there were two distinct parishes so named.

Form of conviction.

The conviction stated, "that on, &c., at, &c., C. W. W. came before two justices for the county of Surrey, and informed them that defendant, late of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, in the county of Surrey, in a certain place in the parish aforesaid, called the Royal Coburg Theatre, without lawful authority of letters patent, and without license from the Lord Chamberlain, did cause to be acted, for gain and reward, a certain entertainment of the stage, to wit, a certain tragedy called Richard the Third, or the Battle of Bosworth Field, &c., contrary to the statute, &c. The conviction then stated the appearance of defendant, and plea of not guilty; and then proceeded thus: "Nevertheless, upon this same day and year last aforesaid, at the said police-office, Union Hall, in the said parish of St. Saviour aforesaid, divers credible witnesses, to wit, one John Tovey, one Junius Brutus Booth, and one William Allway, came before us, the said justices, upon their several oaths on the holy gospel of God, to them severally and respectively now here, and in the presence of the said John Tovey, Junius Brutus Booth, and William Allway, respectively duly administered, depose, swear, and, in the presence of the said Joseph Glossop, upon their oaths aforesaid, severally affirm and say," &c. In the evidence it was stated that the Coburg Theatre was in the parish of Lambeth, and that an alteration of the play of Richard the Third was acted there for money. As to the defendant's causing that play to be represented, the evidence stated was, that J. B. B. became acquainted with defendant as manager and proprietor of the Coburg Theatre; that defendant was seen once or twice at the rehearsals of Richard; that another person was stage-manager; that J. B. B. engaged with defendant to perform several characters; that J. B. B. applied to defendant for that purpose; and that defendant made him an offer for twelve nights to perform; that the contract was in writing; that J. B. B. afterwards performed there; that, at his benefit, defendant gave him a check for the amount. The conviction concluded that defendant was guilty, and adjudged the penalty of £50; one half to the informer, and one half to the poor of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, being the parish where the offence was committed. The conviction having been removed into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari, three objections were taken. First, that it did not sufficiently appear that the defendant had caused the play of Richard the Third to be performed: all that appears is, that he was seen at one or two rehearsals of Richard, and that he offered to engage performers, and paid them. But these facts do not show, even primé facie, that he caused that particular play to be performed, which is necessary. Secondly, the witnesses do not appear to have been sworn in the presence of the magistrates, or of the defendant; they are stated to have been sworn in the presence of themselves only: if so, the evidence was improperly taken. Thirdly, the adjudication of the penalty is to the poor of St. Mary, Lambeth; whereas the evidence states the Coburg Theatre to be in Lambeth only, and non constat that Lambeth and St. Mary, Lambeth, are the same parish. Abbott, C. J., said, "As to the first objection, it is sufficient to say, that it cannot prevail, unless the evidence stated on the face of the conviction be such as that no reasonable person could draw the conclusion, that the defendant caused this particular play to be performed. I am very far from thinking that to be the case. The magistrates might very reasonably draw the conclusion; and, having done so, we cannot overturn their decision as to the fact. As to the second objection, the whole forms one sentence; and it is there stated that the defendant, having appeared before the magistrates, and pleaded not guilty, 'nevertheless, upon this same day and year, divers credible witnesses, to wit, &c., come before us, upon their several oaths, on the holy gospel of God, now here in the presence of the said witnesses duly administered,' &c. Taking the whole together, I think it substantially appears that the oath was administered in the presence of the magistrates to the witnesses. As to the last objection, I think the evidence sufficient to support the adjudication. It does not appear that Lambeth and St. Mary, Lambeth, are two parishes; and, unless that be so, it is no variance. If, in the trial of an ejectment, the premises were described to be in St. Mary, Lambeth, and the evidence stated them to be in Lambeth, I think it would be no variance. And it was so held in Doe d. Tollet v. Salter, 13 East, 9, where the ejectment was for lands in Farnham, which, at the trial, were proved to be in Farnham Royal; and there it was held no variance, the defendant not having proved that there were two Farnhams. I do not think, therefore, that the magistrates were wrong in the adjudication made by them on this evidence. Upon the whole, therefore, none of these objections are sufficient; and the conviction, being regular, must be affirmed." Conviction affirmed. See further as to variances in the statement of places, Indictment, Vol. III.

Or other Entertainment of the Stage—R. v. Handy, 6 T. R. 286. The defendant was convicted in the penalty of £50, under the 10 Geo. II. c. 28, for acting, representing, and performing, a certain entertainment of the stage, called tumbling, &c., at Birmingham; which conviction was removed by certiorari, in order to take the opinion of the court whether this offence came within the statute. Lord Kenyon, C. J. (inter alia), said, "I do not think that tumbling is an entertainment of the stage within the meaning of the act; it might equally be said that fencing on a public stage is. By the third section of this act, a copy of the piece to be represented is to be sent to the Lord Chamberlain for his approbation, previous to the acting; but no copy could have been given of this entertainment. This is a penal act, and cannot be extended to entertainments which did not exist when the act was made."

Tumbling not an entertainment of the stage within the 10 Geo. 2, c. 28.

By the 10 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 7, if any interlude, &c. (as ante, 102), be acted, represented, or performed, in any place where wine, ale, beer, or other liquors, shall be sold or retailed, the same shall be deemed to be acted for gain, hire, and reward.

SECT. 3. No person shall, for hire, gain, or reward, act, or cause to be acted, any new play, or any part therein, or any new part added to an old play, or 16 Geo. 2, c. 28. any new prologue or epilogue, unless a true copy thereof be sent to the lord chamberlain fourteen days before the acting, together with an account when and where it is intended to be acted, signed by one of the managers.

The lord chamberlain may prohibit the same, as he thinks fit; and, if any such person shall, for hire, &c., act, or cause to be acted, without such copy being sent, or against such prohibition, he shall forfeit £50, and the license of the playhouse shall be void.

Sect. 5. And no person shall be authorized to act, except within the liberties of the city of Westminster, and where the king shall reside. But this section is repealed by the 7 Geo. III. c. 27, s. 19.

28 Geo. 3, c. 30.

And, by the 28 Geo. III. c. 30, s. 1, "It shall be lawful for the justices at the general or quarter sessions, at their discretion, to grant a license to any person making application for the same by petition for the performance of any such tragedies, comedies, interludes, operas, plays, or farces, as are or shall be represented at the patent or licensed theatres in Westminster, or have been submitted to the inspection of the lord chamberlain, as aforesaid, at any place within their jurisdiction, or within any city, town, or place, situate within the limits of the same, for any time not exceeding sixty days, to commence within the next six months, and to be within such four months as shall be specified in the said license, so as there be only one license in use at the same time within the jurisdiction so given, and so as such place be not within twenty miles of London or Westminster, or eight miles of any patent or licensed theatre, or ten miles of the residence of the king, or of any place within the same jurisdiction, at which, within six months preceding, a license under this act shall have been had and exercised; or within fourteen miles of either of the universities, or within two miles of the outward limits of any city, town, or place, having peculiar jurisdiction, and so also as no license under this act shall have been had and exercised at the same place within eight months then next preceding."

Sect. 2. "But no such license shall be granted to be exercised within any city, town, or place, having peculiar jurisdiction, unless proof be made that the majority of the justices acting for such place have, at a public meeting, signed their consent; or unless an express condition be therein inserted, that the same shall not be valid until approved by the majority of the justices of such place, at a meeting holden expressly for that purpose."

Sect. 3. "Nor shall such license be granted by the justices within any city, town, or place, unless notice shall have been given by the person applying for such license three weeks before such application to the mayor, bailiff, or other chief civil officer of such place, of such intended application."

10 Geo. 2, c. 28.

By the 10 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 6, all pecuniary penalties inflicted by this act may be recovered in the courts at Westminster, or before two justices, by the oath of one witness or confession, to be levied by distress; and, for want of sufficient distress, the offender to be committed to the house of correction for a time not exceeding six months, there to be kept to hard labour, or to the common gaol, not exceeding six months, without bail or mainprize. Persons aggrieved by order of the justices, may appeal to the next sessions. The said penalties to be distributed, half to the informer, or person suing, and half to the poor.

Sect. 8. Prosecution to be within six calendar months. And the section provides as to actions for acts done under the statute.

By special acts of Parliament, playhouses are permitted to be erected in particular places.

Nuisances, riot, &c.

It has been laid down that, though the audience at a theatre have a right to express their disapprobation of any performance or performer exciting their displeasure at the moment, yet if a number of persons go thither with an intention to make a disturbance, and render the performance inaudible, though they offer no actual violence to the house, or any person there, yet they will be guilty of a riot, or a route. 2 Camp. 358; and see Conspiracy, Vol. I.

Playhouses may become nuisances, like any other disorderly house. See Bac. Ab. Nuisances (a); 1 Hawk. c. 75, s. 7; Disorderly House, Vol. I.

It seems that players may be prosecuted as guilty of a nuisance in acting obscene plays. R. v. Curl, 2 Stra 790.

Plea.

WHEN the indictment is found, the defendant may either plead to it, or demur. By pleading, he puts in issue the facts of the charge; by demurring, he admits the facts, and contends that they charge no offence indictable by law. See Demurrer, Vol. I. as to demurrers. Plea or demurrer.

Pleas are either in abatement or bar.

Pleas in Abatement may be for the omission of the addition of the defendant, under the statute of additions, or for misnaming him, &c. See, further, Pleas in abatement, Vol. I. Pleas in abatement.

Pleas in Bar are either special pleas, or the general issue. Special pleas may be of a previous conviction of the same offence, or a previous acquittal on a valid indictment, or of a pardon. See Autrefois Convict, Vol. I. Acquittal, Vol. I. Pardon, ante, Vol. V. p. 1. Other special pleas are in practice confined to the cases of prosecutions for neglect of duty in repairing highways and bridges, when the parish indicted or presented for omitting to repair a highway, or the county indicted for omitting to repair a bridge, and desiring to throw the liability on some other party, must show that liability by specially pleading it. See Highways, Vol. III. p. 69. Bridges, Vol. I. Pleas in bar.

The plea employed in the infinitely greater number of cases in which the charge is denied, both misdemeanors and felonies, is the general issue, not guilty. This plea not only casts on the prosecutor the burden of making out every part of his charge, but it entitles the defendant to give in evidence every possible ground of justification and excuse which can form an answer to the accusation. See Talf. Dick. Sess. The general issue.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 1, reciting that "trials for criminal offences in that part of the United Kingdom called England, are attended with some forms which frequently impede the due administration of justice, and it is, therefore, expedient to abolish such forms, and also to abolish the benefit of clergy [see Clergy, Vol. I.], and to make better provision for the punishment of offenders in certain cases," it is enacted, "that if any person, not having privilege of peerage, being arraigned upon any indictment for treason, felony, or piracy, shall plead thereto a plea of 'not guilty,' he shall, by such plea, without any further form, be deemed to have put himself upon the country for trial, and the court shall, in the usual manner, order a jury for the trial of such person accordingly." 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28.

Sect. 2 enacts, "that if any person, being arraigned upon, or charged with, any indictment or information for treason, felony, piracy, or misdemeanor, shall stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to the indictment or information, in every such case it shall be lawful for the court, if it shall so think fit, to order the proper officer to enter a plea of 'not guilty' on behalf of such person; and the plea so entered shall have the same force and effect as if such person had actually pleaded the same." A plea of "not guilty," without more, shall put the prisoner on his trial by jury.

If he refuses to plead, court may order a plea of "not guilty" to be entered.

IV. Provisions of the 10 Geo. IV. c. 45.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 45, entitled, "An Act to continue, until the 5th day of July, 1832, an Act for the more effectual Administration of the Office of a Justice of the Peace in and near the Metropolis," reciting the 3 Geo. IV. c. 55, and the 6 Geo. IV. c. 21, it is enacted, "that the said act of the third year of this reign, as the same is amended by the said act of the sixth year of this reign, and by this act, shall continue and be in force until the 5th day of July, 1832, and from thence until the end of the then next session of Parliament."

Recited act, 3 Geo. 4, c. 55, as amended by 6 Geo. 4, c. 21, and this act, continued.

Sect. 2. "And whereas, in case of the establishment of a new police-office for the administration of the police in and near the metropolis, it may be expedient that the horse and foot patrol, now acting under the orders of the chief magistrate of the public office in Bow Street, should be placed under the orders of such new police-office; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state to direct that such horse and foot patrol shall be under the orders of the justices of such new police-office, when the same shall be established; and that any of such justices shall have power to administer, to all persons who now do or hereafter may belong to such horse and foot patrol, an oath to the same effect as the chief magistrate of the office in Bow Street is empowered to administer, by the said recited act of the sixth year of this reign; and the persons taking such oath shall have power to act as constables within the same counties and places as are mentioned in the said last-mentioned act, and shall, in such counties and places, have all such powers, authorities, privileges, and advantages, as any constable now has, or hereafter may have, within his constableness; and it shall be lawful for such principal secretary of state to direct that the receiver appointed under the said recited act of the third year of this reign shall, out of the monies issued to him out of the consolidated fund, pay over in each year to such person as may be appointed receiver of monies, applicable to the purposes of such new police, such sum of money as may now by law be applied to the maintenance of the said horse and foot patrol; the same to be hereafter applied towards defraying the charges and expenses of the said horse and foot patrol, after the same shall be placed under the orders of such new police-office."

10 Geo. 4, c. 45.

Secretary of state may direct that the horse and foot patrol be placed under the new police-office, when established.

Sect. 3. "And whereas it is expedient to remove all doubts respecting the application of such penalties and forfeitures as may be recovered before any justice or justices at any of the offices mentioned in the said act of the third year of this reign; be it therefore enacted, that where, by any act or acts, any penalties or forfeitures, or shares of penalties or forfeitures, are or shall be recoverable in a summary manner before any justice or justices of the peace, and by such act or acts respectively the same are or shall be limited, and made payable to his majesty, or to any body corporate, or to any person or persons whatsoever, save and except the informer who shall sue for the same, or any party aggrieved, in every such case, the same, if recovered or adjudged before any justice or justices at any of the said offices, shall, notwithstanding anything in such act or acts respectively contained, be recovered for, and adjudged to be paid to, the receiver for the time being, mentioned in the said act of the third year of this reign, to be by him applied for the purposes of the said act; and the same shall not, in any case, be recovered by, or adjudged to be paid to, any other person than the said receiver, unless such person be the informer or the party aggrieved; and each of the justices at the said offices, and their clerks, and the said receiver, are hereby released and indemnified from all claims and demands, except those of his majesty, in respect of any penalties or forfeitures, or shares of penalties or forfeitures, which, before the passing of this act, shall have been received at any of the said offices, and claimed and retained for or on behalf of the said receiver."

I. The Offence of, and Punishment.

Bigamy and polygamy.

BIGAMY is where a man has two wives successively; Polygamy, where he hath several wives at the same time; but they are commonly confounded one with the other.

9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 22, it is enacted, "that if any person, being married, shall marry any other person, during the life of the former husband or wife, whether the second marriage shall have taken place in England or elsewhere, every such offender, and every person counselling, aiding, or abetting such offender, shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas, for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol, or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and any such offence may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished, in the county where the offender shall be apprehended, or be in custody, as if the offence had been actually committed in that county: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to any second marriage contracted out of England, by any other than a subject of his majesty, or to any person marrying a second time, whose husband or wife shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years then last past, and shall not have been known by such person to be living within that time, or shall extend to any person who, at the time of such second marriage, shall have been divorced from the bond of the first marriage, or to any person whose former marriage shall have been declared void by the sentence of any court of competent jurisdiction."

Punishment.

Place of trial.
Exceptions.

By this act, all the prior statutes relative to this offence are repealed.

General clauses.

See the general clauses of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, affecting all its provisions, ante, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

previous laws.

Before this act, if the second marriage took place out of the jurisdiction of the law of England, it was not punishable under that law. Moreover, as the law then stood, a person whose consort had been abroad for seven years, though known to be living, might marry again with impunity; and it was also held, under one of the former statutes, that a person divorced a mens et thoro only, was exempt from the penalties of bigamy. 1 East, P. C. 466. It will be seen the present act has made many improvements in these respects. See Collyer's Statutes, 28; Carr. C. L. 251, 2.

Voidable marriage.

Being Married].—This extends to a marriage de facto, or voidable by reason of consanguinity, affinity, or such like; for it is a marriage in judgment of law until it be avoided; and, therefore, though neither marriage be de jure, yet they are within this statute. 3 Inst. 88.

Void marriage.

But it is otherwise if the marriage be not voidable merely, but void: as, for instance, if a woman marry A., and in the lifetime of A. marry B.; and after the death of A., and whilst B. is alive, she marry C.; she cannot be indicted for bigamy in her marriage with C., because her marriage with B. was a mere nullity. 1 Hale, 693, post, 143.

So, the marriage of an idiot, or of a lunatic not in a lucid interval, is void, because he is deemed in law incapable of entering into such a contract. 1 Bl. Com. 438, 439. So, if a boy under fourteen, or a girl under twelve, contract matrimony, it is void, unless both husband and wife consent to and confirm the marriage, after the minor arrives at the age of consent. Co. Lit. 79.

OFFENCE AND PUNISHMENT.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 22, it will be seen, contains exceptions as to certain marriages.

If the first marriage is by banns, it is no objection that the parties did not reside in the parish where the banns were published and the marriage was celebrated. R. v. Hind, R. & M. C. N. P. 253. (a)

By the Marriage Act (4 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 22, Marriage, Vol. III.) certain marriages are declared null and void.

Certain marriages

The marriage acts do not extend to Jews or Quakers, but they include all other dissenters; the marriages of the latter must, therefore, be proved in the ordinary manner. It seems that, to prove a Jewish marriage, it is not enough to produce witnesses who were present at the ceremony in the synagogue, but that the written contract between the parties should be produced, and the execution of it proved. Horn v. Noel, 1 Camp. 61. On the trial of a plea of coverture, Lord Kenyon permitted a Jewess, who had been the former wife of the supposed husband of the defendant, to give parol evidence of her own divorce in a foreign country, according to the custom of the Jews there. Ganer v. Ganesborough, Peake, C. N. P. 17; but see R. v. Lolley, infra.

Jews' or Quakers'
marriages.

Foreign Marriages].—A marriage celebrated out of England, according to the lex loci, is recognized in this country as a valid marriage. If the first marriage were in England, it is not a valid defence to prove a divorce a vinculo matrimonii out of England before the second marriage, founded on grounds (in that case, adultery) on which a marriage cannot be dissolved a vinculo matrimonii in England. R. v. Lolley, Russ. & Ry., C. C. R. 237; and see Gainer v. Ganesborough, supra.

riages.

A marriage in Scotland, between English subjects, according to the Scotch law, is good in our courts. Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. 54; Harford v. Morris, ib. 430. A marriage in Scotland, by an infant, who was an English subject, without consent of parents or guardians, was held good by the Court of Delegates. Compton v. Bearcroft, B. N. P. 113; see the 58 Geo. 3, c. 84.

Scotch marriage.

A marriage in Ireland, by a clergyman of the established church, is good, though it takes place in a private room, without any special license. Smith v. Maxwell, 1 C. & P. 271. As to the marriage of minors, in Ireland, it is, by Irish marriage.

(a) R. v. John Hind, otherwise John Ashmead Hind, Durham Sum. Ass. 1813, MS. C. C. R. 3 Burn, J. 24 ed. The prisoner was tried before Chambre, J., at Durham Summer Assizes, 1813, upon an indictment for bigamy. The first marriage was in Yorkshire, and took place in April, 1812. The second was at the parish of Houghton-le Spring, in the county of Durham, in December, 1812, the first wife being still living. A doubt arose upon the validity of the first marriage, under the following circumstances:—The parties resided in the parish of Marrick, in the county of York. The parish church of Marrick, at the times of publishing the banns and celebrating the marriage, was under repair, and wholly or in a great measure unroofed, and no service was performed there. The banns were therefore published at the church of Grinton, the parish adjoining to Marrick, and the marriage also was celebrated at Grinton. The proofs in all other respects were full, and the prisoner was convicted and received sentence; but as the statute makes no express provision for the publication of banns and the celebration of marriages under such publication, elsewhere than in the parishes where the parties reside (except when such residence is in extra-parochial places), the case was submitted for the opinion of the judges, upon the question of the validity of the first marriage. See the 26 Geo. II. c. 33, ss. 1, 5, and 8. On the 13th of November, 1813, eleven judges assembled, and all agreed that the tenth section of this act, which had not been adverted to, put an end to the doubt. Conviction right. See the 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 13, and 5 Geo. IV. c. 32; Marriage, Vol. III.

the Irish stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 11, enacted, "That any marriage of a person under twenty-one, without the consent of the father or guardians, shall be void; but if no such suit be commenced within one year after the marriage, it shall be good. Therefore, in the case of a prisoner indicted for bigamy, where it appeared that the first marriage, which was by license, was celebrated in Ireland when he was under twenty-one, and that his father did not consent, this was held to be no defence, as more than a year had elapsed from the time of the marriage. R. v. Jacobs, cor. Twelve Js. 1826; R. v. Riordan, cor. Twelve Js. 1828; Carr. C. L. 255.

At the Ennis assizes, 1815, a person was tried, before the lord chief baron, for bigamy. In 1806, he was married by a Catholic priest to his first wife, who was an Irish Catholic, the prisoner stating that he was a Catholic. In 1815, he married his second wife, he then passing for a Protestant. This marriage was celebrated by a clergyman of the established church. The prisoner's counsel contended, that as the prisoner was in fact a Protestant at the time of the first marriage, it was void, as every marriage of a Catholic and a Protestant, by a Catholic priest, would be; and witnesses were called to show that, up to the time of the first marriage, the prisoner always went to church, and was considered a Protestant. The lord chief baron said, that the law was correctly stated by the prisoner's counsel, and left it to the jury to say whether they did not consider the prisoner to be a Catholic at the time of the first marriage. The jury found that he was so, and convicted him. R. v. Hanley, 1815, Carr. C. L. 254; see the 21 & 22 Geo. III. c. 25; 19 Geo. II. c. 13.

French marriage.

Les Cinq Codes contain the following provisions respecting marriage. Code Civil, Art. 63:—"Before celebration of marriage, the officer of the civil state shall make two publications at eight days' interval, on Sunday, before the door of the town-hall. Such publications, and the act of them to be drawn up, shall set forth the prenomen, names, professions, and domiciles of the future couple, their state, either of full age or minority, and the prenomen, names, professions, and domiciles of their fathers and mothers. The act shall set forth moreover the days, places, and hours, where the publications shall have been made; it shall be inscribed upon a register by itself, which shall be marked and certified in manner prescribed by article 41 (b), and deposited, at the end of each year, in the registry of the tribunal of the district." Art. 64.—"An extract of the act of publication shall be affixed at the door of the town-hall, and shall remain so during the eight days' interval between the one and the other publication. The marriage cannot be celebrated before the third day after, and exclusive of that of the second publication." Art. 68.—"In case of opposition, the officer of the civil state may not celebrate the marriage before his receipt of the dismissal, under pain of a fine of three hundred francs and all damages." Art. 74.—"The marriages shall be celebrated in the township where one of the couple shall be domiciled. Such domicile, as to marriage, shall be established by six months' continued habitation in the same township." In the case of Lacon v. Higgins, D. & R. N. P. C. 40, Stark. 78, M. Nettement, the French vice-consul, resident in London, deposed as follows:—"Marriages celebrated in France contrary to the articles 63, 64, and 74, of the Code Civil, are absolutely null and void, and a marriage in violation of these articles is, in fact, no marriage at all; and the issue of such marriages are bastardized. A marriage between British subjects, if solemnized according to the law of England, at the British ambassador's, is recognized as valid in France; but then it must be registered by the ambassador, to render it operative; but if the parties are not married at the British ambassador's, they must comply with the law of France in like manner as French subjects. And British subjects, after a residence in France of six months, may be married in the same manner as French subjects; but at the ambassador's they may be married without having resided six months in France. And even if persons lived together, and were acknowledged as man and wife, that circumstance would not avail, if the legality of the marriage came afterwards into question." In that case, two British subjects, who had been previously resident in Paris, went to Versailles to be married. The ceremony was performed at a hotel, by a clergyman of the church of England, in the presence of two witnesses. The clergyman gave a written certificate of the marriage, but that was not produced. After this marriage, the parties lived together, and were received every where as man and wife. It was also stated, that British subjects resident in Paris were usually married at the British ambassador's, where a register of marriages solemnized there is regularly kept. Upon these facts, and the evidence of M. Nettement (above stated), and a reference to the articles of the Code Civil, Abbott, C. J., said, "I am clearly of opinion that, according to the law of France, this marriage is invalid, and consequently must be so considered in an English court of justice." Carr. C. L. 257.

In the case of Latour v. Teesdale, 8 Tawn. 830, a marriage between two British subjects, solemnized by a Catholic priest, at Madras, followed by cohabitation, was held valid, though there had been no license from the governor, which it had been, before then, the uniform custom to obtain. And Gibbs, C. J., said, "British subjects, settled at Madras, are governed by the laws of this country, which they carry with them, and are unaffected by the law of the natives. What is called the Marriage Act does not follow subjects to foreign settlements; and the question, therefore, is, whether it would have been a valid marriage here before that act passed." And his lordship lays down, that "a marriage between British subjects, celebrated in a British settlement, according to the laws of this country, as they existed before the Marriage Act," (a) is valid.

The 4 Geo. IV. c. 91, enacts, "that all marriages, solemnized by a minister of the church of England, in the chapel or house of any British ambassador or minister, residing within the country to the court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel belonging to any British factory abroad, or in the house of any British subject residing at such factory; and all marriages solemnized within the British lines, by any chaplain or officer, or other person officiating under the orders of the commanding officer of a British army serving abroad, shall be deemed valid." A marriage abroad, of a British subject, attached to a British army, which then had military possession of the place, is valid, if it would have been a valid marriage in England before the Marriage Act. R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 282.

Indian or colonial marriages.

Marriages in ambassadors' houses, British factories, or in places of which the British government has military possession.

Shall marry any other Person during the Life of the Former Husband or Wife shall be Felony—A. married B. in Holland, and afterwards in the same country married C., in B's lifetime; B. died, and then living C., A. married D. in England. This was holden not to be within the act; because the marriage with C. was simply void. But, if B. had been living, it would have been felony to have married D. in England. R. v. Lady Madison, 1 Hale, 693, 1 East's P. C. 466.

Former consort alive.

But though the first marriage be voidable, as by reason of consanguinity or the like, yet, being a marriage in judgment of law, and subsisting in fact at the time, till it be avoided, a second marriage would be within the act: such second marriage, however, is merely void. 1 East's P. C. 466; 3 Inst. 88.

In R. v. William Allison, alias William Wilkinson, Russ. & R. C. C. 109; 1 Russ. C. & M. 207; the prisoner was tried before Chambre, J., at the York Lent assizes, 1806, upon an indictment for bigamy, in marrying Ann Epton, on the 23d May, 1804, Jane, his former wife, being then living. It was proved by Thomas Pape, with whom the prisoner formerly lived as servant, that he was present at the celebration of the marriage between the prisoner and Jane Chaplin, at the parish church of Ulroome, on the 27th of February, 1798. They were married by the curate of the parish. The prisoner quitted the service of the witness at the following May Day, and he had not known much of the parties since that time; but Jane was living on the 8th of October, 1805, on which day he saw her. Another witness proved that he was present at the prisoner's second marriage with Ann Epton; they were married at the parish church of Ottringham, by the curate of the parish, on Whit Wednesday, 1804, the prisoner then

The jury convicted the prisoner; but Chambre, J., respite the judgment, upon a doubt whether this evidence, without any proof of the registration of either marriage or of any license or publication of banns, was sufficient to support a conviction. All the judges, except Lord Ellenborough, who was not present, in Easter Term, 1806, held the conviction right. And see Mary Nowood's case, East's P. C. 470; Morris v. Miller, 4 Burr. 2057.

II. Indictment for.

Indictment.

The indictment must state the two marriages, and aver that the former consort was alive at the time of the second marriage. In the Duchess of Kingston's case, the first count stated generally that the defendant, on such a day, &c., being then married, and then the wife of A. J. H., with force and arms, at, &c., did feloniously marry E. P., &c., the said A. J. H. being then alive, &c. The second count stated the time and place of the first as well as the second marriage. When the trial is in the county where the party was apprehended, there is an additional averment of that fact. 1 East's P. C. 469.

Venue.

We have already noticed the provision of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 22, as to allowing the venue to be in the county where the offender was apprehended, or is in custody, ante, p. 140.

As to the County where the Offender was apprehended—This, according to the resolution in Lord Digby's case, may be in the place where the party is taken, which is the place where he is imprisoned. And it is only cumulative; for he may be indicted where the second marriage was, though he be never apprehended; and so may be outlawed. 1 Hale, 694; 1 Russ. 289, 290; Hutt. 131.

Where the prisoner, having been apprehended for another offence, is detained in the same county for bigamy, the detainer is such an apprehension as will warrant the indicting him in that county. R. v. James Jordan, otherwise James Weaver, Russ. & R. C. C. 48; 1 Russ. C. & M. 192. The prisoner was tried before Lawrence, J., at the summer assizes for the county of Worcester, 1802, on an indictment charging him with felony, in marrying, on the 7th of June, 1802, one Elizabeth Lane, in the parish of St. Clement's, in the county of the city of Worcester, Mary Taylor, his former wife, being then living, and that he was apprehended for the felony aforesaid at the parish of Astley, in the county of Worcester. The facts of both marriages were proved; and that the prisoner was apprehended in the county of Worcester on a charge of stealing two hammers of one William Collins, and that, being in the house of correction on that charge, a bill of indictment was found against him for this bigamy at the quarter sessions, and, on the bill being found, he was detained by an order of that court. It appeared further in evidence that he was a bastard, and married Mary Taylor before he was of the age of 21 years, and when he was about 20 years old.

The counsel for the prisoner made two objections to his conviction—Firstly. That an indictment could be preferred against him for this offence only in the county where the second marriage was, or in some other county where he was apprehended for that offence, whereas the defendant was apprehended in the county of the city of Worcester, not for this bigamy, but for a larceny. And, if that were otherwise, the prisoner could not be convicted on this indictment, as it charged he was apprehended in the county for this felony, which was not proved, as his apprehension was for a larceny. Secondly. That this was not a case within the 1 Jac. I. c. 11, there being a provision in the third section of that statute that it shall not extend to any person for or by reason of any former marriage had within age of consent, which age was insisted, since the 26 Geo. II. c. 33, to be twenty-one, and not, as at the time of passing the statute, fourteen in males and twelve in females. The jury found the prisoner guilty, but the learned judge reserved these points for the consideration of the judges. In Hilary Term, 1803, the judges determined the conviction to be right, being of opinion upon the first point, that as the prisoner was in custody on a criminal charge, he was liable to be tried where he was imprisoned. See Lord Digby's case, Hutt. 131, upon stat. 3 Jac. I. c. 4, and also Forsyth's case, 2 Leach, 826.

III. Evidence.

Proof of the marriages.

In respect to the manner of proving the two marriages, the first must be duly established to be valid, according to the rites and customs of the country in which it was celebrated. 1 East's P. C. 469; per Bayley, J., Smith v. Huson, Deleg. T. 1811, citing a case reserved for the opinion of the judges, K. B., M. 1803; 1 Phil. Evid. 287.

Where the first marriage, which was with a Roman-Catholic woman, was by a Romish priest in England, not according to the ritual of the church of England, and the ceremony was performed in Latin, but the witnesses, not understanding that language, could not swear that the ceremony of marriage according to the church of Rome was read, the defendant was acquitted. (d) But Lord Chief Justice Willes, who tried him, seemed to be of opinion that a marriage by a priest of the church of Rome was a good marriage if the ceremony according to that church could be proved,—namely, the words of the contracting part of it. But this was before the Marriage Act. Lyon's case, Old Bailey, Dec. 1738; 1 East's P. C. 469; see Fielding's case, 14 How. St. Tr. 1328.

If the marriage was celebrated in this country, it may be proved by the production of the register of the marriage, or an examined copy of it, together with some proof, either direct or presumptive, of the identity of the parties; Arch. C. L. 294; ante, 91; Vol. II. p. 49. And if the marriage were by license, and it appear that either of the parties were a minor at the time, the prosecutor must further prove that the marriage was solemnized with the consent of the father, guardian, or mother of the minor, as required by the Marriage Act. R. v. Bridgewater, and R. v. Butler, 1 Russ. 294; R. & R. 61, S. C.; per Bayley, J., in Smith v. Huson, 1 Phil. 287; Arch. C. L. 294. The marriage may be proved by some person who was present at it; and in that case it is not necessary to prove the registration, or license, or banns. R. v. Allison, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 109; ante, 143, S. C.

The law will not presume marriage in cases of bigamy, as it will in civil cases. Smith v. Huson, 1 Phil. 287.

If the marriage was celebrated abroad, it may be proved by any person who was present at it; and such circumstances should also be proved, from which the jury may presume that it was a valid marriage according to the laws of the country in which it was celebrated. Proof that the ceremony was performed by a person appearing and officiating as a priest, and that it was understood by the parties to be the marriage ceremony according to the rites and custom of the foreign country, would be sufficient presumptive evidence of it, (see R. v. Bampton, 10 East, 282), so as to throw upon the defendant the onus of impugning its validity. See Arch. C. L. 294; and as to proof of foreign laws, see Vol. II. p. 49. The law of France as to marriage, was proved by production of a book purporting to contain the code of France, and proved by oral testimony to contain the law of France; the book purporting to have been published at the royal printing-office, which was (according to the statement of the witness) authorized to print the laws of France by the government. Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. R. 178. As to foreign registers, see Vol. II. p. 38.

How far the acknowledgment of the defendant upon the subject of his marriage is sufficient evidence of the fact, may admit of some doubt. In True-man's case it was held, that proof of the prisoner's cohabiting with and acknowledging himself married to a former wife, then living, such assertion being backed by his producing to the witness a copy of the proceeding in a Scotch court against him and his wife for having contracted the marriage improperly (the marriage, however, being still good according to that law), was sufficient evidence of the first marriage; and, upon such evidence, together with due proof of the second marriage, the prisoner was convicted. The point being reserved for the opinion of the judges, all of them (with the exception of Per-ryn, B. and Buller, J. who were absent), held the conviction proper. Two of them observed that this did not rest upon cohabitation and bare acknowledgment; for the defendant had backed his assertion by the production of the copy of the proceedings: but some of the judges thought that the acknowledgment alone would have been sufficient, and that the paper produced in evidence was only a confirmation of such acknowledgment. Truman's case, Nottingham Spring Ass. 1795; 1 East's P. C. 470.

With respect to the admission of a bare acknowledgment in cases of this nature, Mr. East says (1 P. C. 471), it may be difficult to say that it is not evidence to go to the jury, like the acknowledgment of any other matter in pais, where it is made by a party to his own prejudice at the time. But it must be admitted that it may, under circumstances, be entitled to little or no weight; for such acknowledgments, made without consideration of the consequences, and palpably for other purposes at the time, are scarcely deserving of that name, in the sense in which acknowledgments are received as evidence; more especially if made before the second marriage, or upon occasions when, in truth, they cannot be said to be to the party's own prejudice, nor so conceived by him at the time.

As to proving the averment of the party being apprehended in the county where the venue is laid, see ante, 144.

First wife cannot be a witness.

The first and true wife is not to be allowed as a witness against the husband, nor vice versâ; but it seemeth clear that the second wife may be admitted to prove the second marriage, being not so much as his wife de facto. 1 Hale, 693; 4 *Blac. I. General Observations.

IT is to be observed in general, that popish recusants are liable to all the forfeitures and disabilities and other inconveniences, to which other recusants are liable; and to many others, to which other recusants are not liable.

A recusant is any person who refuses to go to church and worship God after the manner of the Church of England; a popish recusant is a papist who so refuseth; and a popish recusant convict is a papist legally convicted thereof.

There were several statutes made against recusants in Queen Elizabeth's reign, and the former part of the reign of King James the First, the force of which, as to protestant dissenters, is taken away by the Act of Toleration; but no papist or popish recusant shall have any benefit by that act.

II. Toleration of Catholics.

By the 31 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 1, it shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to appear in any of the courts at Westminster, or at the general quarter sessions for the county, city, or place where he shall reside, and there in open court, between the hours of nine in the morning and two in the afternoon, take, make, and subscribe the following declaration and oath; viz. :—

"I, A. B., do hereby declare, that I do profess the Roman Catholic religion." Declaration.

"I, A. B., do sincerely promise and swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to his majesty King , and him will defend to the utmost of my power against all conspiracies and attempts whatever that shall be made against his person, crown, or dignity; and I will do my utmost endeavour to disclose and make known to his majesty, his heirs and successors, all treasons and traitorous conspiracies which may be formed against him or them: And I do faithfully promise to maintain, support, and defend to the utmost of my power the succession of the crown; which succession, by an act intitled 'An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown and better Security of the Rights and Liberties of the Subject,' is and stands limited to the Princess Sophia, Electress and Duchess Dowager of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being protestants, hereby utterly renouncing and abjuring any obedience or allegiance unto any other person claiming or pretending a right to the crown of these realms. And I do swear, that I do reject and detest, as an unchristian and impious position, that it is lawful to murder or destroy any person or persons whatsoever, for or under pretence of their being heretics or infidels; and also that unchristian and impious principle, that faith is not to be kept with heretics or infidels. And I do further declare that it is not an article of my faith, and that I do renounce, reject, and abjure the opinion, that princes excommunicated by the pope in council, or any authority of the see of Rome, or by any authority whatsoever, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects, or any person whatsoever. And I do promise that I will not hold, maintain, or abet any such opinion, or any other opinion contrary to what is expressed in this declaration. And I do declare that I do not believe that the Pope of Rome, or any other foreign prince, prelate, state, or potentate, hath or ought to have any temporal or civil jurisdiction, power, superiority, or pre-eminence, directly or indirectly, within this realm. And I do solemnly, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare, that I do make this declaration and every part thereof in the plain and ordinary sense of the words of this oath, without any evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation whatever; and without any dispensation already granted by the pope, or any authority of the see of Rome, or any person whatever; and without thinking that I am or can be acquitted before God or man, or absolved of this declaration, or any part thereof, although the pope or any other person or authority whatsoever shall dispense with or annul the same, or declare that it was null or void. So help me God."

Certificate thereof to be given.

Which said declaration and oath shall be subscribed by such person. And the proper officer shall make, subscribe, and deliver a certificate of such declaration and oath having been duly made and taken, if demanded, for which he shall have 2s.; which certificate shall be competent evidence, unless falsified.

Not required to resort to church.

Sect. 3. And no Roman Catholic, who shall have taken and subscribed the said oath, as aforesaid, shall be convicted upon any of the acts following: viz. 1 Eliz. c. 2; 23 Eliz. c. 1; 29 Eliz. c. 6; 35 Eliz. c. 2; 1 Jac. I. c. 4; 3 Jac. I. c. 4; 3 Jac. I. c. 5; and 7 Jac. I. c. 6; or any other statute or law of this realm, or in any ecclesiastical court, for not resorting to church, or having servants who shall not resort to church, or other place of common prayer.

II. c. 2, papists are made subject to several punishments, penalties, and disabilities, it is enacted, that no person who shall take and subscribe the said oath in manner aforesaid shall be prosecuted or convicted for being a papist, or reputed papist; or for professing or being educated in the popish religion; or for hearing or saying mass; or for being a priest or deacon; or entering or belonging to any ecclesiastical order or community of the church of Rome; or for being present at, or performing or observing, any rite, ceremony, practice, or observance of the popish religion, or maintaining or assisting others therein.

And no minister or other person shall officiate in any such place of meeting until his name and description as a priest or minister shall have been recorded at the sessions; for which shall be paid 6d., and a certificate thereof shall be granted, if demanded, for which shall be paid 2s. And no priest or minister who shall officiate in any such meeting not so recorded, as aforesaid, shall be deemed to be within the benefit of this act, for any purpose whatsoever.

And the minister's name to be recorded there.

Places of assembly not to be locked.

Sect. 6. Provided that if any such place of assembly shall have the doors locked, barred, or bolted, during the time of meeting, all persons who shall

III. of the Parliament of Ireland, and who shall have duly taken the oaths and declaration required by the said act, shall not, in respect of any such office, place, or situation, be liable, in England, Wales, Berwick-upon-Tweed, or in his majesty's navy, or in the Islands of Jersey or Guernsey, to any of the pains, &c. enacted by the 25 Car. By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, it is enacted, "That from and after the commencement of this act, all such parts of the said acts as require the said declarations, or either of them, to be made or subscribed by any of his majesty's subjects, as a qualification for sitting and voting in parliament, or for the exercise or enjoyment of any office, franchise, or civil right, be and the same are (save as hereinafter provided and excepted) hereby repealed."

So help me God.'

The name of the sovereign for the time being to be used in the oath,

Sec. 3. "Wherever, in the oath hereby appointed and set forth, the name of his present majesty is expressed or referred to, the name of the sovereign of this kingdom for the time being, by virtue of the act for the further limitation of the crown and better securing the rights and liberties of the subject, shall be substituted from time to time, with proper words of reference thereto."

No Roman Catholic capable of sitting or voting until he has taken the oath.

Sec. 4. "No peer professing the Roman Catholic religion, and no person professing the Roman Catholic religion, who shall be returned a member of the House of Commons after the commencement of this act, shall be capable of sitting or voting in either house of Parliament respectively, unless he shall first take and subscribe the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, before the same persons, at the same times and places, and in the same manner as the oaths and the declaration now required by law are respectively directed to be taken, made, and subscribed; and that any such person professing the Roman Catholic religion, who shall sit or vote in either house of Parliament, without having first taken and subscribed, in the manner aforesaid, the oath in this act appointed and set forth, shall be subject to the same penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities, and the offence of so sitting or voting shall be followed and attended by and with the same consequences, as are by law enacted and provided in the case of persons sitting or voting in either House of Parliament respectively, without the taking, making, and subscribing the oaths and the declaration now required by law."

Roman Catholics may vote at elections, and be elected, upon taking the oath.

Sec. 5. "It shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to vote at elections of members to serve in Parliament for England and for Ireland, and also to vote at the elections of representative peers of Scotland and of Ireland, and to be elected such representative peers, being in all other respects duly qualified, upon taking and subscribing the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, and instead of the declaration now by law required, and instead also of such other oath or oaths as are now by law required to be taken by any of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, and upon taking also such other oath or oaths as may now be lawfully tendered to any persons offering to vote at such elections."

Oath shall be administered in the same manner as former oaths.

Sec. 6. "The oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth shall be administered to his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, for the purpose of enabling them to vote in any of the cases aforesaid, in the same manner, at the same time, and by the same officers or other persons as the oaths for which it is hereby substituted are or may be now by law administered; and that in all cases in which a certificate of the taking, making, or subscribing of any of the oaths or of the declaration now required by law is directed to be given, a like certificate of the taking or subscribing of the oath hereby appointed and set forth shall be given by the same officer or other person, and in the same manner as the certificate now required by law is directed to be given, and shall be of the like force and effect."

Sect. 7. "In all cases where the persons now authorized by law to administer the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration to persons voting at elections, are themselves required to take an oath previous to their administering such oaths, they shall, in addition to the oath now by them taken, take an oath for the duly administering the oath hereby appointed and set forth, and for the duly granting certificates of the same."

Sect. 8. "Whereas in an act of the Parliament of Scotland made in the eighth and ninth session of the first Parliament of King William the Third, intituled 'An Act for the preventing the Growth of Popery,' a certain declaration or formula is therein contained, which it is expedient should no longer be required to be taken and subscribed:" it is enacted, "That such parts of any acts as authorize the said declaration or formula to be tendered, or require the same to be taken, sworn, and subscribed, shall be and the same are hereby repealed, except as to such offices, places, and rights as are hereinafter excepted; and that from and after the commencement of this act it shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to elect and be elected members to serve in Parliament for Scotland, and to be enrolled as freeholders in any shire or stewartry of Scotland, and to be chosen commissioners or delegates for choosing burgesses to serve in Parliament for any districts or burghs in Scotland, being in all other respects duly qualified, such persons always taking and subscribing the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance and abjuration as now required by law, at such time as the said last-mentioned oaths, or either of them, are now required by law to be taken."

Sect. 9. "No person in holy orders in the Church of Rome shall be capable of being elected to serve in Parliament as a member of the House of Commons; and if any such person shall be elected to serve in Parliament as aforesaid, such election shall be void; and if any person, being elected to serve in Parliament as a member of the House of Commons, shall, after his election, take or receive holy orders in the Church of Rome, the seat of such person shall immediately become void; and if any such person shall, in any of the cases aforesaid, presume to sit or vote as a member of the House of Commons, he shall be subject to the same penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities as are enacted by an act passed in the forty-first year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to remove Doubts respecting the Eligibility of Persons in Holy Orders to sit in the House of Commons;' and proof of the celebration of any religious service by such person, according to the rites of the Church of Rome, shall be deemed and taken to be prima facie evidence of the fact of such person being in holy orders, within the intent and meaning of this act."

Sect. 10. Oath of person
post-office.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 41, no person shall be capable of exercising any employment relating to the post-office, or any branch thereof, or be any way concerned in receiving, sorting, or delivering of letters, before he shall have taken the following oath, before a justice of the peace where he resides.

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will not wittingly, willingly, or knowingly open, detain, or delay, or cause, procure, permit, or suffer to be opened, detained, or delayed, any letter or letters, packet or packets, which shall come into my hands, power, or custody, by reason of my employment in or relating to the post-office; except by the consent of the person or persons to whom the same is or shall be directed, or by an express warrant in writing under the hand of one of the principal secretaries of state for that purpose; or except in such cases where the party or parties to whom such letter or letters, packet or packets, shall be directed, or who is or are chargeable with the payment of the port or ports thereof, shall refuse or neglect to pay the same, and except such letters or packets as shall be returned for want of true directions, or when the party or parties to whom the same is or shall be directed cannot be found: and that I will not in any way embezzle any such letter or letters, packet or packets, as aforesaid."

No letter to be opened or delayed.

Exception.

And, by sect. 40, no person shall wittingly, willingly, or knowingly open, detain, or delay, or cause, procure, or suffer any letter or packet, after delivery into the post-office, or into the hands of any person employed for the receiving or carrying post letters, and before delivery to the persons to whom directed, or for their use; except by express warrant in writing under the hand of one of the principal secretaries of state; or except where the party to whom directed, or who is chargeable with the payment of the port, shall refuse to pay the same: and every person so offending, or who shall embezzle any such letter or packet, shall forfeit 20*l.*, to be recovered by action, &c., at Westminster, together with costs; and, besides such penalty, such offender shall be incapable of having, using, exercising, or enjoying any office, trust, or employment, in or relating to the post-office, or any branch thereof.

In the case of Martin v. Ford, 5 T. R. 101, it was determined that the penalty of 20*l.* inflicted by the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 40, on persons who willingly or knowingly open, detain, or delay any letter after the same hath been delivered at the post-office, or into the hands of any person employed for the receiving or carrying post letters, extends only to persons in the employment of the post-office, and not to a person, nominated jointly by the inhabitants of a village near a post town, and the postmaster of that town to receive and deliver the letters to those inhabitants.

Postmasters are not to charge for delivering letters within established

It is now settled, that if the persons to whom letters are addressed, reside within the established limits of the post town, the postmasters are obliged to deliver such letters at their places of abode, and at the rate of postage only as established by act of Parliament. Stock v. Harris, deputy postmaster at Gloucester, E. 11 Geo. III. 5 Burr. 2709; Smith v. Plowditch, M. 15 Geo. III. 1 Cowp. 182; and vide per Aston, J. 1 Cowp. 189. being post towns.

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 7, s. 5, the postmaster-general may undertake at the expense of the post-office the conveyance and delivery of letters directed to persons abiding in towns and places (not being post towns) from the respective post towns to which such letters shall be carried by the post in the usual manner, and also the collection of letters in and from such towns, villages, and places to be sent by the post, and may take such sums of money for such extra service as may be agreed upon between him and the inhabitants of such place.

Sect. 6. "Provided that nothing herein shall prevent the inhabitants of any such towns and places from carrying or re-carrying, or employing servants or other persons to carry, letters to or from the post town in like manner as they have been heretofore accustomed and are by law authorized to do."

And by the 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 2, the postmaster-general is authorized to do the same where the towns from whence the letters are to be conveyed are not post towns; and sect. 3 contains the same proviso as sect. 5 of 41 Geo. III. 48 Geo. 3, c. 81.

c. 7.

By the 9 Anne c. 10, s. 17, no person shall receive, take up, order, despatch, convey, carry, recarry, or deliver any letter or packet of letters, or make any collection of letters, or set up or employ any conveyance whatsoever for such receiving, &c. &c., or by means whereof any letter or packet of letters shall be received, &c. &c., on pain of 5*l.* for every several offence, and also 100*l.* per week.

Conveying letters otherwise than by post.

Sect. 32 saves the privileges of the two Universities.

And by the 42 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 5, no person shall send or tender, or deliver to be sent otherwise than by the post, or by the authority of the postmaster-general, or his deputy or deputies, or to the nearest and most convenient post town, to be from thence forwarded by the post, any letter or packet of letters, on pain of 5*l.* for every offence, with full costs to the informer, in any court of record at Westminster; one moiety thereof to the king, the other moiety to the informer. See the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 7, infra.

Sect. 6. "Provided, that nothing herein shall extend to any letter concerning goods sent by any common carrier, and to be delivered with such goods without profit or advantage for receiving or delivering the same; nor any letter of merchants, owners of ships, or merchant vessels, nor any the cargo therein sent on board such vessels to be delivered by the masters thereof, or by any other employed by them for the carriage thereof without hire or reward for the same; nor any commission or return thereof; affidavits, writs, process, or proceedings, or return thereof, out of any court; nor any letter sent by any private friend in their way of journey, or by any messenger sent on purpose, concerning the private affairs of any person." See the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 8, p. 182.

Exceptions.

A letter sent in a parcel from one stamp distributor to another, containing amongst other things stamps, is to be presumed to relate to them so as to bring it within the exception respecting letters accompanying goods in the 42 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 6; at least, a carrier seeking to evade his liability to answer for the loss of it, under the pretence of its having been an illegal act, must give some prima facie evidence to the contrary to lay the foundation for his objection. Bennett v. Clough, 1 B. & A. 461.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 19, penalties under this act to be sued for in any court of record; one moiety to the king, the other to the informer with full costs.

Sect. 30. All sums not exceeding 5*l.* due from any person for letters delivered, shall be recovered before justices of the peace as small tithes are. Such debt to be preferable to any debt to a private person. See post, Cities.

Postage recoverable as small tithes.

By statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 7, reciting, that notwithstanding the provisions in that behalf made by the 9 Anne, c. 10, and 42 Geo. III. c. 81, "the practice of sending and conveying by stage coaches, carts, waggons, ships, vessels, boats, barges, and other conveyances, letters and packets which, by virtue of the laws relating to the post-office, ought to be sent by the post, prevails to a considerable extent, to the great prejudice and diminution of his majesty's revenue;" it is enacted, "That from and after the passing of this act, [12th April, 1824,] no person or persons whatsoever, or body politic or corporate, in any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain or Ireland, or other his majesty's dominions, where any post is or shall be established under the management of his majesty's postmaster-general, shall receive, take up, order, despatch, convey, carry, re-carry, or deliver, or shall send, or cause to be sent or conveyed, or tender or deliver in order to be sent or conveyed, otherwise than by the post, or by and with the authority and consent of his majesty's postmaster-general for the time being, or the deputy or deputies of such postmaster-general, or to the nearest or most convenient post town, to be from thence forwarded by the post, any letter or letters, on pain of forfeiting for each and every letter or letters, whether such letter shall be received, taken up, ordered, despatched, conveyed, carried, re-carried, or delivered, or sent, or caused to be sent or conveyed, or tendered, or delivered, in order to be sent or conveyed, separately or by itself, or together with any other letter or letters, or other matter or thing whatsoever, the sum of 5*l.*, one moiety whereof to the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of the person who shall inform or sue for the same, to be sued for and recovered, with full costs of suit, by any person who shall and will inform and sue for the same, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, for offences committed within that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, and in any of his majesty's courts of record in Dublin for offences committed in Ireland, and before the sheriff or steward court of the shire or stewartry within which the party offending shall reside, or the offence shall be committed, for offences committed in Scotland."

Act not to extend to letters to be delivered with goods sent by common carriers or by vessels; nor to proceedings issuing out of courts; nor to letters sent by private friends, or by messengers on private affairs. (h)

Sect. 8 provides, "That this act shall not extend to subject any person or body corporate to any such penalty or forfeiture as aforesaid, for receiving, taking up, ordering, despatching, conveying, carrying, re-carrying, or delivering or sending, or causing to be sent or conveyed, or for tendering or delivering, or sending or causing to be sent or conveyed, or for tendering or delivering in order to be sent or conveyed, any letter or letters which shall respectively concern goods sent by any common known carrier of goods, and shall be sent with and for the purpose of being delivered with the goods that such letter or letters do concern, without hire or reward, profit or advantage, for the receiving or delivering the same; nor any letter or letters of merchants, owners of any ships, barques, or vessels of merchandize, or any the cargo or lading therein, sent on board the same ships, barques, or vessels of merchandize, to be delivered by the masters of the same ships, barques, or vessels of merchandize, or by any other person employed by them for the carriage of such letters, according to their respective directions, without paying or receiving any hire or reward, advantage or profit for the same in anywise; nor any commission or return thereof, affidavits, writs, process, or proceedings, or return thereof, issuing out of any court; nor any letter sent by any private friend in his or her way of journey or travel, so as such letter shall be delivered by such friend to the party to whom such letter shall be directed; nor any letter or letters to be sent by any messenger on purpose for or concerning the private affairs of any person."

Limitation of actions.

By sect. 9, "if any action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons for anything done in pursuance of this act, the same shall be commenced within twelve months after the fact committed, and not afterwards; and the defendant or defendants in such action shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if it shall appear so to be done, or that such action or suit shall be commenced after the time before limited for bringing the same, that then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; and upon a verdict for the defendant, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsuited, or discontinue his, her, or their action or suit after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have in any other cases by law."

General issue.

Treble costs.

Postmaster not to meddle in elections.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 44, no postmaster shall, by word, message, or writing, or in any other manner, endeavour to persuade any elector to give, or dissuade any elector from giving his vote for the choice of any person to serve in Parliament, on pain of 100*l.*; half to the informer, and half to the poor; and likewise of being incapacitated.

59 Geo. 3, c. 30.

By the 59 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 1, the receivers-general of the revenues of customs, excise, stamps, and postage in England, shall pay into the receipt of the exchequer, on such days in every week as the commissioners of the treasury shall direct, all monies arising in Great Britain, by the customs, excise, stamps, and postage, received by the said receivers-general, and afterwards paid by them into the Bank of England.

Liability of postmaster for loss.

Case does not lie against the postmaster-general for a bank note stolen by one of the sorters out of a letter delivered into the post-office. Whitfield v. Lord De Spencer, Comp. 754; post, 189.

(2). Offences relative to the Post-Office by Servants and others.

By the 5 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 20, if any postboy shall quit the mail before his arrival at the next stage; or shall suffer any other person (except the person employed to guard the mail) to ride on the horse or carriage; or shall loiter on the road so as to retard the arrival of the mail; or shall not in all possible cases convey the mail after the rate of six miles an hour at the least: he shall, on conviction by confession, or oath of one witness before one justice, be sent to the house of correction, to be there kept to hard labour, not exceeding one month, nor less than fourteen days.

Postboy loitering upon the road.

And, by sect. 21, if any postboy shall by himself or in combination with others unlawfully collect any letters, or convey or cause them to be unlawfully conveyed, he shall, on conviction by confession on oath of one witness before one justice, forfeit for every letter or packet so collected, conveyed or delivered, 10s. to the informer: if not forthwith paid on conviction, to be committed to the house of correction to hard labour, not exceeding two months nor less than one.

Unlawfully collecting letters.

Sect. 19. If any person appointed, authorized, and intrusted to take in letters or packets and receive the postage thereof, shall embezzle or apply to his own use any money received by him with such letters, &c. for the postage thereof; or shall burn or otherwise destroy any letter or packet by him so taken in or received; or who, by virtue of his office, shall advance the rates upon letters or packets sent by the post, and not duly account for the money received by him for such advanced postage; he shall be deemed guilty of felony.

Embezzling money for letters post paid, or destroying the letters.

And by the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 3, if any person employed in any business of the post-office, who shall take any letter or packet to be forwarded by the post, and receive any money therewith for the postage, shall burn or destroy any such letter or packet; or shall advance the rate of postage upon any letter or packet sent by the post, and not duly account for the money by him received for such advanced postage; he shall be deemed guilty of felony.

7 Geo. III. c. 50.

By s. 1 (which re-enacts more at large the provisions of the 5 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 17,) it is enacted, "That if any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person whatsoever, employed in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, carrying, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the post-office, shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any letter, packet, bag, or mail of letters which such person might be entrusted with, or which shall have come to his hand or possession, containing any bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, exchequer bill, South Sea, or East India bond, dividend, warrant of the Bank, South Sea, East India, or any other company, society, or corporation, navy or victualling or transport bill, ordnance debenture, seaman's ticket, state-lottery ticket or certificate, bank receipt for payment on any loan, note of assignment of stock in the funds, letter of attorney for receiving annuities or dividends, or for selling stock in the funds, or belonging to any company, society, or corporation, American provincial bill of credit, goldsmith's or banker's letter of credit, or note for or relating to the payment of money; or other bond or warrant, draught, bill, or promissory note whatsoever for the payment of money; or shall steal or take the same out of any letter or packet that shall come to his hands or possession, such offender shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy." (a)

Secreting, embezzling, or destroying letters containing certain securities or instruments by one employed by the post-office, felony.

Stealing, or taking the same out of any letter or packet, felony.

Shaw was indicted on the 7 Geo. III. There were four counts in the indictment: 1st. That, being a clerk employed in sorting and charging letters in the post-office, the prisoner feloniously secreted, embezzled, and destroyed a letter containing a bank note for 20*l*. 2dly. That, being a person employed in the business relating to the general post-office, he secreted, &c. 3dly. That, being a clerk employed in sorting and charging letters in the post-office, he feloniously stole and took out of a letter a bank note for 20*l.* 4*thly.* That, being a person employed in the business relating to the general post-office, he feloniously stole, &c. It appeared in evidence that the prisoner was only a sorter, and not a charger of letters; whereupon the recorder, who tried him, directed the jury (the proof of the fact being very plain) to convict him, which they did, on the second and fourth counts only. It was then moved in arrest of judgment that, as he had been acquitted on the counts which charged him as a sorter and charger, and did not appear to be a person employed by the post-office in any other business but that of sorting, which is one of the employments particularly specified in the 7 Geo. III., which says, that "if any person employed in receiving, sorting, charging, &c. or in any other business relating to the post-office, shall, &c." he could not be convicted on the third and fourth counts. This, being adjourned to Serjeants' Inn, was argued before eleven of the judges (abs. Blackstone, J.) who unanimously agreed that judgment should be arrested, but inclined to think, that the jury might have convicted the prisoner on the first and third counts, by a special finding that he was a sorter only. Shaw's case, O. B. May, 1771; Blac. Rep. 789; 2 East's P. C. 580.

Containing any bank note, &c.

Benjamin Willoughby was indicted on the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, for that he, being a clerk employed in the post-office at Birmingham, in stamping and charging letters, stole and took out of a letter there, a certain warrant for the payment of money, (setting it forth, by which it appeared to be a Birmingham post-bill, or bill of exchange payable in London.) The fact of stealing having been proved, it was objected that this was not "a warrant for the payment of money" within the meaning of the act, but a post-bill, or bill of exchange. The prisoner was found guilty, but judgment was respited to take the opinion of the judges. Though at first there was a difference of opinion among the judges, at length they all agreed that it was properly stated in the indictment; for, though it was a bill of exchange, it was also a warrant for the payment of money; it was a voucher to the bankers or drawers, if genuine, for the payment, and it might also have been laid to be a draught. And they said it could not be distinguished from the case of R. v. Shepherd, Mich. 1781, where in forgery the indictment was in the same form, and holden good. Willoughby's case, Warwick Lent Ass. 1783; 2 East's P. C. 581.

Money in a letter.

Stealing money out of letters is not within these acts. Timothy Skutt, who was a sorter of letters, &c., stole two letters, each containing 5*s.* 3*d.* in gold coin; and, being indicted on these statutes, and the fact being proved, it was objected that, as the letters contained money, and not any security relating to the payment of money mentioned in the acts, the case did not fall within them; and the court being of that opinion, he was acquitted on that indictment, but was again indicted and convicted of grand larceny for stealing the money, and was transported. Skutt's case, O. B. 1774; 2 East's P. C. 581.

Parts of a note.

In Moore's case, 2 East's P. C. 581, it was holden, upon a conference by all the judges (except Buller, J., who was absent, and doubted), that a letter-carrier secreting half a bank note in one letter on one day, and the other half in another letter on another day, is a secreting within the 7 Geo. III. c. 50.

Since this decision, another act has passed (42 Geo. III. c. 81), which (sect. 1), after reciting the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 1, and the expediency of extending its provisions so as to protect the conveyance by the post of all and every part or parts of such securities or instruments, enacts, "if any deputy, clerk, agent, &c. &c. (as in the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 1, ante, p. 183), in the post-office shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy, any letter or packet, bag or mail of letters, with which he is entrusted, or which may come into his possession, containing any part or parts of any such security or instrument as in the said act are mentioned, or shall steal or take out of any letter or packet that shall come to his possession any part or parts of any such security or instrument, every such offender shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy." (a)

And, by sect. 2, "if any person whatsoever, whether employed in any business relating to the post-office or not, shall counsel, command, hire, persuade,

Persons procuring, &c. to commit offences, or fraudulently receiving such securities or parts thereof, guilty of felony,

(a) As to clergy, see Clergy, Vol. I.

procure, aid, or abet, any such deputy, &c., or other officer employed, &c., in the post-office to commit any offence in the said recited act, or in this act before mentioned; or shall, with a fraudulent intention, buy or receive the whole or any part of such security, &c., which he shall know to have been contained in any such letter, &c., so by any such deputy, &c., secreted or embezzled, or stolen or taken out of any letter, &c., that shall come to his possession, or which he, at the time of buying or receiving, shall know to have been contained in and stolen or unlawfully taken out of any letter, &c., stolen and taken by any person whatsoever from or out of any mail, bag, &c., or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters, &c.; each and every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of felony without benefit of clergy, (a) and may be tried and convicted as well before as after the trial or conviction of the principal felon, and whether the principal felon shall have been apprehended, or shall be answerable to justice or not."

and may be tried before or after the principal.

By the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 2, "if any person or persons shall rob any mail or mails, in which letters are sent or conveyed by the post, of any letter or letters, packet or packets, bag or mail of letters, or shall steal and take from or out of any such mail or mails, or from or out of any bag or bags of letters sent or conveyed by the post, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets sent or to be sent by the post, any letter or letters, packet or packets, although such robbery, stealing, or taking, shall not appear to be proved to be a taking from the person, or upon the king's highway, or to be a robbery committed in any dwelling-house, or any coach-office, stable, barn, or any outhouse belonging to a dwelling-house, and although it should not appear that any person or persons were put in fear by such robbery, stealing, or taking, yet such offender or offenders, being thereof convicted, as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of felony, without benefit of clergy." (a)

Robbing the mail, or stealing letters.

This section does not extend to the servants of the post-office; and, therefore, a conviction of one of them for stealing out of the post-office a letter sent to be delivered by the post, was holden to be wrong. The opinion of the judges in this case was founded on a comparison of the second section of the act with the first and third sections, which were expressly intended to guard against the misconduct of the servants of the post-office. Pooley's case, O. B. 1801; 1 East's P. C. Add. xvii.; R. & R. 12, S. C. But the report of such decision has been mentioned as incorrect. And it is clear that a person may be indicted and convicted under the third section of the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, post, p. 187, for stealing a letter, though such person has an employment in the post-office, especially if such letter did not come to him in the course of his employment. 2 Russ. C. & M. 239; Brown's case, post, p. 187.

A bill of exchange may be laid as a warrant for the payment of money, within the statute. Willoughby's case, 2 E. P. C. 581. Stealing money out of letters is not within the act. Skutt's case, 2 E. P. C. 582. And, where a person employed in the post-office secreted a letter, containing a draft not duly stamped, it was held not to be an offence within the act, the draft not being available. R. v. Pooley, R. & R. 12; 3 B. & P. 311, S. C. But secreting a letter, containing country bank notes paid in London, and not re-issued, is an offence within the statute; for they are available against the makers of them, into whomsoever's hands they come. R. v. Ranson, R. & R. 232.

An indictment upon this act for secreting two letters containing therein a bank note, was held good, upon proof that it was sent in halves on different days. Moore's case, 2 E. P. C. 582; and see R. v. Ellins, R. & R. C. C. 188.

The note or other security stolen in the letter may be described generally in the indictment. 2 E. P. C. 583.

Noah Pearce, intending to steal the mail-bags, went one night about the usual time to the post-office at High Wycombe, and pretending to be the mail-guard, obtained from the person at the office the bags of letters, which were let down to Stealing letters. him from out of the window of the post-office by a string, from whence he took them, and immediately went away. Being indicted on this act, and found guilty, all the judges were of opinion, in Hilary Term following, that the conviction was proper, on a count in the indictment for stealing the letters out of the post-office. His artifice in obtaining the delivery of them in the bag out of the house was the same as if he had actually taken them out himself. Noah Pearce's case, Buckingham Sum. Ass. 1794, 2 East's P. C. 603. In this case the property did not pass; as the postmaster had no property in the mail-bags to part with. Ante, 183, 184.

A letter-carrier, taking letters out of the office, intending to deliver them to the owners, but to embezzle the postage, cannot be indicted for stealing such letters, under this act. James Howatt was indicted on the second section of this act: 1st, for stealing out of the London bags, sent by the general post-office from London to Manchester, divers letters specified; 2ndly, 3rdly, and 4thly, for stealing the like letters out of the post-office in Manchester, and out of a certain house for the receipt and delivery of letters sent by the post, and out of a certain place for the same. It appeared to be the duty of the clerks in the office to count the letters and deliver them out to the letter-carriers, of whom the prisoner was one. He contrived to obtain possession of some of the letters before they were so counted out to him, and was detected with them in his pocket in the letter-carrier's room, which is under the same roof as the office, separated from it only by some steps. For some time previous there had been a great deficiency in the receipt of the postage, though there was no complaint of the miscarriage of any letters; and from circumstances it appeared, and so the jury found when they convicted the prisoner, that he intended to have delivered the letters, and only to have embezzled the postage. But in the Michaelmas Term following, all the judges (abs. Hotham, B.) agreed that this was not a stealing within the act. Howatt's case, Lancaster Sum. Ass. 1795, cor. Rooke, J., 2 East's P. C. 604; and see post, 187.

Trial, where.

On an indictment for robbing the mail, the robbery must have formerly been proved to have been committed in the county laid in the indictment. R. v. Thomas, 2 East's P. C. 605. But now this difficulty is removed by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 12; and see Indictment, Vol. III. p. 330.

52 Geo. 3. c. 143.
Offences of persons employed by the post-office, how to be punished.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 2, if any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person whatsoever employed by or under the post-office of Great Britain in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, carrying, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the said office, shall, after the passing of this act, secrete, embezzle, or destroy any letter or packet, or bag or mail of letters, with which he or she shall have been entrusted in consequence of such employment, or which shall in any other manner have come to his or her hands or possession, whilst so employed, containing the whole or any part or parts of any bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, exchequer bill, South Sea or East India bond, dividend warrant, either of the Bank, South Sea, East India, or any other company, society, or corporation, navy or victualling or transport bill, ordnance debenture, seaman's ticket, state-lottery ticket or certificate, bank receipt for payment on any loan, note of assignment of stock in the funds, letter of attorney for receiving annuities or dividends, or for selling stock in the funds, or belonging to any company, society, or corporation, American provincial bill of credit, goldsmith's or banker's letter of credit, or note for or relating to the payment of money, or other bond or warrant, draught, bill, or promissory note whatsoever, for the payment of money; or shall steal and take out of any letter or packet with which he or she shall have been so entrusted, or which shall have so come to his or her hands or possession, the whole or any part or parts of any such bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, exchequer bill, South Sea or East India bond, dividend warrant, either of the Bank, South Sea, East India, or any other company, society, or corporation, navy or victualling or transport bill, ordnance debenture, seaman's ticket, state-lottery ticket or certificate, bank receipt for payment of any loan, note of assignment of stock in the funds, letter of attorney for receiving annuities or dividends, or for selling stock in the funds, or belonging to any company, society, or corporation, American provincial bill of credit, goldsmith's or banker's letter of credit or note for or relating to the payment of money, or other bond or warrant, draught, bill, or promissory note whatsoever, for the payment of money; every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy.

52 Geo. 3, c. 143.

By s. 3, if any person shall, after the passing of this act, steal and take from any carriage, or from the possession of any person employed to convey letters sent by the post of Great Britain, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets, or bags or mails of letters sent or to be sent by such post, any letter or packet, or bag or mail of letters, sent or to be sent by such post, or shall steal and take any letter or packet out of any such bag or mail, every person so offending, and being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy (a); and such offences shall and may be inquired of, tried, and determined, either in the county where the offence shall be committed, or where the party shall or may be apprehended.

Offences of other persons against the post office, how to be punished.

In Broune's case, the prisoner was employed in the post-office to deliver letters, but not to sort them; but he did sort them, when regularly he ought not to have done so, and whilst sorting, stole a letter. The indictment charged him, as a sorter, with secreting, and, as a common person (under sect. 3 of the 52 Geo. III.), with stealing: but as it appeared that he ought not to have been allowed to sort, he was acquitted of secreting; and it was then urged he could not have been convicted under the third section, because he was a person employed in the post-office, and the case of R. v. Pooley, ante, 185, was cited. A case being reserved, the judges stated, that the report of R. v. Pooley was to the point in question mistaken: that R. v. Simpson, cor. Lord Ellenborough, Thompson, B., and Lawrence, J., O. B. 1810, was in point the other way; that a man who stole was not less a person stealing, because he had some employment in the office; and that, upon a contrary construction, if a person in the office stole, but not in the course of his employment, he would be unpunishable. R. v. Brown, 2 Russ. C. & M. 238; and R. & M., C. C. 32, n. a.

Previously to the last case it had been holden, that a letter-carrier taking letters out of the post-office, intending to deliver them to the owners, but to embesgle the postage, is not indictable for stealing such letters, under the second section of the 7 Geo. III. c. 50. Hovatt's case, ante, p. 186.

A stamper of the post-office, who purloins a letter for the purpose of delivering it as a missorted letter, with a view of obtaining the postage of it, cannot be capitally convicted of secreting a letter containing bills, under the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 2, although the letter may, in fact, contain bills. R. v. Sharpe, cor. 12 Judges, 1825; Car. C. L. 147; R. & M., C. C. R. 125, S. C. See also the case of R. v. Ellins, R. & R., C. C. 188.

The horse mail-bags being left by the mail-rider, after he had taken possession of them, for a temporary purpose, for two minutes, were stolen during his absence: the case is within the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 3. R. v. Robinson, 2 Stark. N. P. 485; and see ante, 185.

And, by the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 4, if any person shall, after the passing of this act, counsel, command, hire, persuade, procure, aid, or abet, any such deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any officer or person whatsoever employed by or under the said office, in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, carrying, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the said office, to commit any of the offences hereinbefore mentioned, or shall, with a fraudulent intention, buy or receive the whole or any part or parts of any such security or instrument, as hereinbefore described, which shall have been contained in, and which, at the time of buying or receiving thereof, he or she shall know to have been contained in any such letter or packet so secreted, embezzled, stolen, or taken by any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person so employed, as aforesaid, or which such person so buying or receiving, as aforesaid, shall, at the time of buying or receiving thereof, know to have been contained in and stolen and taken out of any letter or packet, stolen and taken from or out of any mail or bag of letters sent and conveyed by such post, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets, or bags or mails of letters, sent or to be sent by such post; every person so offending, and being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy, and shall and may be tried, convicted, and attainted of such felony, as well before as after the trial or conviction of the principal felon, and whether the said principal felon shall have been apprehended or shall be amenable to justice or not.

42 Geo. 3, c. 81.
Persons secreting or refusing to deliver up letters, which shall be found or picked up, &c. guilty of a misdemeanor.

By the 42 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 4, it is enacted, that if any person shall wilfully secrete, keep, or detain, or, being required to deliver up by any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, rider, driver, or guard, of any mail coach, or any other officer or person whatsoever, employed in any business relating to the post-office, shall refuse or wilfully neglect to deliver up any mail or bag of letters sent or conveyed, or made up in order to be sent or conveyed, by the post, or any letter or packet sent by the post, or put for that purpose into any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters, &c. and which letter or packet, bag or mail of letters, shall have been found or picked up by the same or any other person, or shall, by or through accident or mistake, have been left with or at the house of the same or any other person; each and every person so offending shall be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, to be punished by fine and imprisonment.

5 Geo. 4, c. 30.
Persons employed in the postoffice embezzling votes, parliamentary proceedings, or newspapers,
&c. misdemeanor.

And the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 10, reciting, "that serious loss, inconvenience, and injury, may be sustained by the wilful embezzling or purloining of printed votes or proceedings in Parliament, and printed newspapers, sent or to be sent by the post, within the United Kingdom," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act [12th April, 1824], if any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, letter-sorter, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person whatsoever, employed, or hereafter to be employed, in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the post-office in the said United Kingdom, shall wilfully purloin, embezzle, secrete, or destroy, or shall wilfully permit or suffer any other person or persons to purloin, embezzle, secrete, or destroy, any printed votes or proceedings in Parliament, or printed newspapers, or any other printed paper whatsoever, sent or to be sent by the post without covers, or in covers open at the sides, each and every such person or persons so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by fine and imprisonment; and such offences shall and may be inquired of, tried, and determined, either in the county where the offence shall be committed, or where the party shall or may be apprehended."

9 Anne, c. 10.
Measurer's oath.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 12, and 5 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 9, 10, persons appointed from time to time to measure the post roads shall be sworn to perform the same according to the best of their skill and judgment, before a justice of the peace, who shall make a certificate thereof in writing, to be entered in the general post-office, without fee.

Inspection of letters by government.

It should be observed, that notwithstanding the above enactments against detaining or opening letters, the correspondence of the kingdom is still liable to the inspection of government; for, by a warrant from one of the principal secretaries of state, letters may be detained and opened. One of the reasons assigned in the ordinance made in 1657, for the establishment of the general post-office, is, "that it will be the best means to discover and prevent many dangerous and wicked designs against the commonwealth." 1 Bla. Com. 322, note. (a)

It was determined so long ago as 13 Wil. III. in the case of Lane v. Cotton, by three judges of the Court of King's Bench, though contrary to Lord C. J. Holt's opinion, that no action could be maintained against the postmaster-general for the loss of bills or articles sent in letters by the post. 1 Ld. Raym. 646; 1 Cowp. Rep. 100. A similar action was brought against Lord Le Despencer and Mr. Carteret, postmaster-general in 1778, to recover a bank note of 100*l.*, which had been sent by the post and was lost. Lord Mansfield delivered the opinion of the court, that there was no resemblance or analogy between the postmasters and a common carrier, and that no action for any loss in the post-office could be brought against any person except him by whose actual negligence the loss accrued. Cowp. 754, 765. For this reason it is recommended by the secretary of the post-office to cut bank notes and to send one half at a time. This is the only safe method of sending bank notes, as the Bank would never pay the holder of that half which had been fraudulently obtained.

Liability of postmaster for loss, &c., of letters.

(3.) Postage of Inland and Irish Letters.

It may be as well to observe, in the first place, that postmasters in country towns are frequently in the habit of charging a half-penny and a penny a letter on delivery at the houses in the town above the Parliamentary rates, under the pretence that they are not obliged to carry the letters out of the office gratis. But it has been repeatedly decided that such demand is illegal, and that they are bound to deliver the letters to the inhabitants within the usual and established limits of the town, without any addition to the rate of postage. Rowning v. Goodchild, 3 Wils. 443; 2 Black. Rep. 906; 5 Burr. 2709; 2 Rol. Rep. 906; Cowp. 182. And an action lies against a deputy-postmaster for non-delivery of letters gratis in a country post town. Id.

Charging beyond postage.

But by the 41 Geo. III. (United Kingdom) c. 7, s. 5 and 6, and 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 2 and 3, ante, 180, letters may be conveyed to and from places not being post towns, and charged with extra prices.

The penny post was set up in London by one Murray, in 1681; it was claimed by government in 1711, and raised to 2*d.* in 1724. Twopenny post.

And by the 45 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 1, for the conveyance of every letter, originally sent by the twopenny post, and not first passing, and afterwards to pass by the general post, directed to or sent from places beyond the delivery of the general-post letter-carriers, 1*d.*; for every letter originally passing by the general post, directed to places beyond the delivery of the general post, and afterwards delivered by the twopenny post, 2*d.*

Twopenny-post letters delivered out of general post delivery, additional.

III. c. 62, and 17 Geo. III. st. 2, c. 53, enabling the postmaster-general to open and return letters to foreign parts in consequence of certain political emergencies.

Inland letters.

But where the distance above 300 miles is more than 100 miles, a further sum of, for every single letter, 1*d.*; double, 2*d.*; treble, 3*d.*; an ounce, 4*d.*; and so on progressively for every further distance of 100 miles a like further sum, for a single letter, 1*d.*; double, 2*d.*; treble, 3*d.*; an ounce, 4*d.*; and so in proportion.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 1, the following additional rates, being rated by the letter or by the ounce, are established for the carriage of letters by the post in Great Britain, above the distance of twenty miles, from the office where such letters may be put in to the office where the same may be directed: viz.

For every Single Letter	0	0	1
For every Double Letter	0	0	2
For every Treble Letter, or other Letter under an Ounce in Weight	0	0	3
And for every Ounce in Weight, and for every Packet not exceeding an Ounce in Weight	0	0	4
And so in proportion for every other letter or packet of greater weight than an ounce.

By the third section of the act, these rates of postage are not to extend to letters sent by or to seamen and soldiers, under the 35 Geo. III. c. 53.

By the fourth section, the powers of former acts are extended to that act.

Letters inclosing patterns.

By the 26 Geo. II. c. 13, s. 8, for every single letter or cover containing one or more papers with patterns, or one or more patterns of cloth, silk, or stuff, or one or more samples of any other sort of goods, or one or more piece or pieces of any other sort or thing inclosed therein or affixed thereto, though not paper, if the same do not weigh an ounce, the rates payable by 9 Anne, c. 10, for a double letter.

But by the 35 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 9, every such packet or cover shall be sent open at the sides, and without any letter or writing in, upon, or with such packet or cover, other than the name of the person sending the same and the place of his abode, and the prices of the articles contained therein or affixed thereto.

By the 45 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 1, for every such letter or packet with such inclosures, sent according to the 26 Geo. II. c. 13, and 35 Geo. III. c. 54, there shall be paid the sum of 1*d.*

Additional rates on letters inclosing patterns.

And by the 52 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 2, for the conveyance by the post of every letter, packet, or cover, containing patterns of cloth, silk, stuff, or samples of other goods or other sort of thing, not exceeding one ounce in weight, if the same letter or packet or cover shall be closed or not open at the sides, an additional rate of 2*d.* for every such letter, packet, or cover: and for the conveyance by the post of every letter or cover containing one or more paper or papers with patterns, or containing one or more pattern or patterns of cloth, silk, or stuff, or one or more sample or samples of any other sort of goods, or one or more piece or pieces of any other sort of thing inclosed therein or affixed thereto, though not on paper, if the same do not weigh an ounce, an additional rate of one penny for every such letter, so as every such letter, packet, or cover shall be sent open at the sides and without any letter or writing in, upon, or with such packet or cover, other than the name of the person sending the same, and the place of his abode, and the prices of the articles contained therein, or affixed thereto.

Letters containing other letters, &c., on same sheet.

By the 6 Geo. I. c. 21, s. 51, bills of exchange written on the same piece of paper with a letter, and several letters to several persons, written on the same piece of paper, shall pay as so many distinct letters.

By the 26 Geo. II. c. 13, s. 7, writs or other proceedings at law, inclosed or written on the same piece of paper with a letter, shall pay as so many distinct letters.

And by the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 7, s. 4, all merchants' accounts, bills of exchange, invoices, and bills of lading, shall be rated as so many several letters, or by the ounce, according to the rates by this act made payable on letters conveyed by the general post. But this provision is materially altered by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 21, s. 13, post, 193.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 37, s. 4, for preventing prohibited goods being imported in letters or packets, the officer employed at the post-office where any foreign letter or packet containing any inclosure shall be received may carry the same before a justice for the county, or magistrate for the town, in which such office is situate, and upon oath made that he suspects the same to contain goods which are prohibited to be imported, or upon which a duty is payable upon importation, shall, in the presence of such magistrate, cut open (b) a slit in such letter or packet not exceeding two inches in length; and if it shall appear to such magistrate that any such goods are contained therein, he shall open the same, and in the presence of such officer destroy such goods, and inclose such letter or packet in a cover, in which shall be written an attestation signed by him of the name of the officer who brought the same, and the time when, and the quantity and description of goods found therein, and that the same were destroyed; which cover shall be sealed and forwarded to the commissioners of the customs, who, on receipt thereof, shall pay to the said officer any sum not exceeding 5*l.* nor less than 10*s.*

Prohibited goods, suspected to be in foreign letters.

Sect. 5. And if on making such slit as aforesaid no such goods shall be found in such letter or packet, such magistrate shall inclose the same in a cover, and shall therein also send an attestation signed by him that the said opening was made in his presence, and shall deliver the same sealed up to the said officer, to be forwarded by the ordinary course. And no additional postage shall be charged in consequence of such proceeding.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 1, it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for his majesty's postmaster-general and his deputy and deputies, in his discretion, to receive at the General Post-Office in London, packets containing re-issuable cash notes only, issued by country bankers under annual license, and payable at the houses of their respective agents in London, which cash notes have been paid by such agents in London for conveyance by the post within Great Britain at his discretion, to the bank in the town or place from which such cash notes were first issued, and to no other bank, town, or place whatever; and to demand, have, receive, and take for the conveyance of such packets, to and for the use of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, rates of postage not exceeding one-fourth part of the rates and duties of postage by law established, or which may hereafter be established for the conveyance of letters and packets by the post; any law, statute, custom, or usage, to the contrary notwithstanding."

Re-issuable cash notes issued by country bankers, and paid in London, may be conveyed by post to the banks whence first issued, at rates herein mentioned.

Sect. 2. "That no such packet shall be conveyed under the provisions in this act unless the same shall exceed six ounces in weight, and shall be superscribed 're-issuable country bank notes only,' and certified by the signature of the agent or agents of such country bank, or one of them, in his or their own handwriting; and provided that the said packets shall contain no writing, communication, matter, or thing whatever."

Packets conveyed to exceed six ounces, &c.

Sect. 3. "That such packets shall be delivered to the postmaster-general, or his deputy or deputies, at the General Post-Office in London, at such hours in the day and under such regulations as the postmaster-general for the time being shall in his discretion from time to time appoint, and such packets shall also be delivered by the deputy or deputies of the postmaster-general in the country under such regulations and restrictions as the postmaster-general for the time being shall from time to time think fit to appoint."

Time of delivery at post-office regulated by postmaster-general.

Sect. 4. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for his majesty's postmaster-general, and his deputy and deputies, in his or their discretion, to detain any such packet, and in the presence of the sender or senders thereof, or in his or their absence, in case of non-attendance after notice in writing left at his or their place of abode, requiring his or their attendance, to open, examine, and search the same, in order to discover whether any writing, communication, matter, or thing, other than re-issuable notes only, shall be contained therein; and in case upon examination thereof it shall be discovered that any such writing, communication, matter, or thing, other than re-issuable notes, shall be

Application of penalties.

Sect. 5. "That one moiety of the pecuniary penalty hereby imposed shall be payable to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, and the other moiety to any person who shall inform and sue for the same, to be recovered, with full costs of suit, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of his majesty's courts of record in Great Britain, wherein no essoign, protection, or privilege, or wager of law, shall be admitted."

Money arising by rates to be carried to the consolidated fund.

Sect. 6. "That the monies to arise by the several rates and duties as aforesaid, (except the monies which shall be necessary to defray such expense as shall be incurred in the management and collection of the same,) shall be paid into the receipt of the exchequer at Westminster, and carried to and made part of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

From July 5, 1827, the duties of postage on letters between Great Britain and Ireland shall be levied according to schedule (A.)

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 21, reciting, "that by the laws now in force, imposing certain rates of postage in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, letters conveyed by the post from places in Great Britain to places in Ireland, or from places in Ireland to places in Great Britain, are, by reason of the separate rates payable in each of those parts of the United Kingdom, charged to a higher amount upon the whole than letters conveyed the same distances in Great Britain would be charged; and whereas it is expedient that such difference of charge, affecting exclusively the correspondence between Great Britain and Ireland, should no longer exist;" it is enacted, "that from and after the 5th day of July, 1827, in lieu of all duties of postage granted and made payable under any act or acts in force in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, upon letters so conveyed from either of these parts of the United Kingdom to the other, there shall be levied and paid the like rates of postage, according to the distances which such letters are conveyed, as would be payable on the conveyance of letters from place to place in Great Britain, in addition to the separate rates of packet-postage now payable, and also to the several rates of duty payable under the acts for building the Menai and Conway bridges respectively; the whole being according to the schedule (A) to this act annexed."

All former packet postage between Great Britain and Ireland repealed.

Sect. 2. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1827, no other packet-postage shall in any case be demanded or paid, or payable, for letters or packets between Great Britain and Ireland, other than such as is specified and set forth in the schedule (A) to this act annexed; and that from and after the said 5th day of July, 1827, all rates or duties of packet-postage between Great Britain and Ireland, under any act or acts passed at any time before the passing of this act, shall cease and determine, and shall be and are hereby repealed, and shall no longer be paid or payable; any thing in any act or acts to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

54 Geo. 3, c. 119.

Sect. 3. "And whereas certain rates of postage upon letters and packets conveyed by the post to and from places within Ireland were granted by an act of the fifty-fourth year of his late majesty King George III., intituled, 'An Act to repeal certain Duties upon Letters and Packets sent by the Post within Ireland, and to grant other Duties in lieu thereof,' and such rates of postage were made payable in Irish currency; and whereas, by an act passed in the sixth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to provide for the Assimilation of the Currency and Monies of Account throughout the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,' certain provisions are made for the payment of sums under the amount of 12*d.* of the currency of Ireland, by an equivalent number of British pence, halfpence, and farthings, some of which are not generally in circulation in Ireland; and, in order to avoid the inconvenience of collecting the rates of postage in Ireland according to the directions of the said last recited act, it is expedient that such rates of postage should be in future charged and collected in the currency of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland: be it therefore enacted, that the several rates of postage upon letters and packets sent and conveyed to and from places within Ireland, Duties of postage in Ireland to be paid in British currency, according to schedule B.)

Sect. 3. "And whereas certain rates of postage upon letters and packets conveyed by the post to and from places within Ireland were granted by an act of the fifty-fourth year of his late majesty King George III., intituled, 'An Act to repeal certain Duties upon Letters and Packets sent by the Post within Ireland, and to grant other Duties in lieu thereof,' and such rates of postage were made payable in Irish currency; and whereas, by an act passed in the sixth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to provide for the Assimilation of the Currency and Monies of Account throughout the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,' certain provisions are made for the payment of sums under the amount of 12*d.* of the currency of Ireland, by an equivalent number of British pence, halfpence, and farthings, some of which are not generally in circulation in Ireland; and, in order to avoid the inconvenience of collecting the rates of postage in Ireland according to the directions of the said last recited act, it is expedient that such rates of postage should be in future charged and collected in the currency of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland: be it therefore enacted, that the several rates of postage upon letters and packets sent and conveyed to and from places within Ireland, which, by the said hereinbefore recited act of the fifty-fourth year of the reign of his said late majesty, are made payable, according to the several amounts thereof, in Irish currency, shall, from and after the said 5th day of July, be charged, levied, collected, and paid, and payable, according to the several amounts thereof, in the currency and lawful money of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, according to the schedule (B) to this act annexed."

Sec. 4. "That from and after the 5th day of July, 1827, it shall be lawful for his majesty's postmaster-general, and his deputy and deputies, to and for the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, to demand and receive for the conveyance of printed votes and proceedings in Parliament, by packet-boats, from Great Britain and Ireland to any of his majesty's colonies and possessions beyond the seas, after the rate of one penny-halfpenny, and no more, for every ounce weight thereof, and so in proportion, in lieu of any sum payable under any act or acts in force immediately before the passing of this act, any thing in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding; the same to be paid when the said printed votes and proceedings shall be put into the post-office: provided every such printed vote and proceeding shall be without a cover, or in a cover open at the sides, and that there be no writing thereon other than the superscription, and that there be no other paper or thing inclosed or concealed therein."

7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 21.

Parliamentary proceedings sent by packet to the colonies, shall be charged 1½d. per ounce.

Sec. 12. "That from and after the passing of this act, every printed newspaper, or other printed paper, liable to the stamp-duty, and for the conveyance of which any duty of postage is chargeable under any act or acts in force in Great Britain or Ireland, shall and may in all cases be put into the post-office, or receiving-office, of or for the town or place in Great Britain or Ireland in or at which such newspaper shall be published, on any day within seven days next after the day on which the same shall be published, the day of publication to be ascertained by the date of such paper, any thing in any act to the contrary notwithstanding; and, in case any such paper shall be put into any post-office at any time after the expiration of such seven days, such paper shall be charged with a rate of postage equal to that of a single letter sent by the post from the place where such paper was published to the place to which such paper shall be addressed."

Newspapers shall be sent by post within seven days after day of publication.

Sec. 13. "And whereas, by the laws in force, merchants' accounts, bills of exchange, invoices, bills of lading, and proceedings at law, written on one and the same piece of paper with a letter, and also several letters to several and distinct persons, written upon one and the same piece of paper, are liable to be rated, taxed, and paid for as so many several and distinct letters, and it is expedient that the laws in this respect should be altered: be it therefore enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, all merchants' accounts, bills of exchange, stamped receipts, invoices, bills of lading, and proceedings at law, written on one and the same piece of paper with a letter, shall be allowed and taken without rate in the price of the letter; and that any piece or sheet of paper upon which letters to several and distinct persons shall be written, shall not be charged or chargeable with any higher rate of postage in Great Britain or Ireland than if one letter only were written upon such sheet or piece of paper; any thing in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding."

Letters with merchants' accounts, &c., and letters to more than one person, on the same paper, shall be charged only as single letters.

Sec. 16. "That all the powers, provisions, privileges, advantages, disabilities, penalties, forfeitures, and distribution thereof, and all clauses and other matters and things contained in any act or acts in force at the time of the passing of this act, relating to the post-office, or any rates or duties payable on the port or conveyance of letters or packets in Great Britain and Ireland, and not repealed or altered by this act, shall, so far as the same are applicable, continue in force, and be applied and extended, and shall be construed to apply and extend, to this present act, and to the rates and duties hereby made payable, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same had been particularly repeated and re-enacted in the body of this act."

Powers of acts relating to the post-office extended to this act.

The stat. 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 21, then gives the following schedule:—

(5.) Postage for Conveyance by Packets.

39 Geo. 3, c. 76.
Letters may be conveyed by vessels not being packet-boats.

By the 39 Geo. III. c. 76, s. 1, the postmaster-general and his deputy may collect and receive letters and packets of letters, directed to places within his majesty's dominions, also to any the kingdoms and countries beyond the seas, and forward the same by any vessel that he shall think fit (although not a packet boat), and also take for every letter and packet delivered to him or them for conveyance as aforesaid, a sum not less than one-half of the rates payable by law for such respective letters and packets, if the same were conveyed by packet-boats; and where no rate of postage is already established, then for such letters and packet rates as near as may be equal to one-half of what is now paid for letters sent beyond the seas.

Sect. 2. 45 Geo. 3, c. 11.

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 92, (a) s. 5, the 8th section of the 35 Geo. III. c. 53,

(a) It having been found that the provisions of the statute for allowing soldiers to send and receive letters at a low rate of postage, were not yet perfectly understood, his late Royal Highness the Duke of York, the Commander-in-Chief, directed that the following instructions should be communicated to the army: as will appear in 3 Burn, J., 24 ed. 769.

"Letters from Soldiers.—Upon all single letters sent from soldiers, the name of the soldier, his rank (whether sergeant, corporal, drummer, trumpeter, fifer, or private, and the regiment, corps, or detachment, to which he belongs), are to be superscribed; all such single letters to be indorsed by the officer in the actual command of the regiment, corps, or detachment; his name, rank, and the regiment, corps, or detachment commanded by him, are to be written in his own handwriting. It is to be understood, that this indulgence is limited to single letters only. One penny must be paid at the time the letter is put into the post-office, or such letter will be liable to the full rate of postage.

"The act of Parliament alluded to directs, that if any officer, having the command of a regiment, corps, or detachment, shall wilfully write his name on any letter which is not from a soldier, and upon private concerns only, such officer shall forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.*; that a similar penalty shall attach to any person who shall obtain the signature of the officer commanding, to letters not on private concerns of soldiers; and further, that if any officer, not having at the time the command of the regiment, corps, or detachment, shall write his name upon a soldier's letter, he shall forfeit the sum of 5*l.*

"Letters to Soldiers.—In all cases of single letters addressed to soldiers, the rank, whether sergeant, corporal, trumpeter, drummer, fifer, or private, and the regiment, corps, or detachment, to which they belong, must be specified. One penny is to be paid by the writer or other person, on putting the letter into a post-office; the letter will otherwise be liable to the full rate of postage. The letter cannot be delivered to any person except the soldier to whom such letter is directed, or to some one appointed to receive the same by an authority in writing under the hand of an officer having the command of the regiment, corps, or detachment, to which such soldier belongs.

"The commander-in-chief is desirous that soldiers shall have the full benefit intended by the legislature; but in order to guard against any abuse of privilege, his royal highness feels it necessary to repeat what was declared in the general orders of the 28th of February, 1814, and 14th of June, 1814, that the indulgence of the conveyance of letters to non-commissioned officers and soldiers, free of expense, is applicable exclusively to letters intended for the persons to whom they are addressed, and that no explanation which may be offered for an abuse of this privilege, which is attached exclusively to the said non-commissioned officers and soldiers, will be deemed satisfactory, or will in the least degree exculpate any officer who may directly or indirectly aid or connive at is repealed. And by s. 6 of that act, it is enacted, that seamen, whilst actually employed in his majesty's service, may send single letters on their own private concerns only, at the rate of 1*d.* each, to be paid upon putting them into the post-office. Provided that the name of the writer and his class and description in the vessel to which he shall belong shall be superscribed; and also in the handwriting of, and signed by the officer at the time commanding the vessel, his name, and that of the vessel.

And by s. 7, such seamen may receive such letters free of postage, provided that 1*d.* for each shall be paid upon putting the same into the post-office; and the name of the vessel to which they belong shall be superscribed; provided also that such letters shall be delivered only to the seamen to whom directed, or to persons appointed to receive them by writing under the hand of the commanding officer of the vessel; commissioned officers, or warrant officers, midshipmen, or masters' mates, not included in this section.

By s. 8 and 9, the same provisions are extended to every sergeant, corporal, drummer, trumpeter, fifer, and private soldier in his majesty's regular forces, militia, fencible regiments, artillery, or royal marines, within any part of his majesty's dominions.

Seamen and soldiers serving in East Indies, to have privilege of sending and receiving letters free, on certain conditions.

III. c. 153, s. 25, it is enacted, "That from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every seaman employed in his majesty's navy within any part of the East Indies, and to and for every sergeant, corporal, drummer, trumpeter, fifer, and private soldier in his majesty's regular forces, militia, fencible regiments, artillery, or royal marines, whilst actually employed in his majesty's service in the East Indies, and also to and for every seaman, whilst actually employed in the service of the East-India Company, and to and for every sergeant, corporal, drummer, trumpeter, fifer, and private soldier in the service of the said company, whilst actually employed in the service of the said company, and not otherwise, to receive by the post, on his own private concerns only, free from postage, single letters; provided that the several regulations and restrictions contained in the said hereinbefore recited act shall be complied with; and likewise to send single letters by the post, on his own private concerns only, on payment of one penny upon putting the same into any post-office, under the several regulations and restrictions in the hereinbefore recited act contained."

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 10, s. 8 & 9 of that act are not to extend to commissioned officers or warrant officers.

Sect. 11. Any such commander wilfully and knowingly writing his name upon any letter that is not from such seaman, &c. shall forfeit 5*l.*

Sect. 12. A like penalty is imposed upon persons not being such commanders, writing their name upon any letter that it may be sent at a lower rate of postage than by law established.

Sect. 13. A like penalty is imposed upon those who knowingly address a letter to any such seaman, &c. which shall be intended for another person, or concerning the affairs of another person, for the purpose of evading legal postage.

Sect. 14. If any shall procure any such seaman, &c. to obtain the signature of his commanding officer to any letter to be sent by post which shall not be on the private concerns of such seaman, &c.: or if any such seaman, &c. shall himself obtain such signature upon any letter not from such seaman, &c., and upon his own private concerns only, in order to avoid the payment of legal postage, he shall forfeit 5*l.*

such deviation from the true intention and spirit in which this boon has been granted to soldiers, and that any non-commissioned officer or soldier who shall present to his officer a letter to be rendered free of postage, which is not his own, will be guilty of a fraud, for which it is his royal highness's express command that every offender shall be tried, and no alleviation of whatever punishment may be awarded must be expected.

"By command of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.

"HARRY CALVERT, Adjutant-General."

Sect. 13. Præmunire.

[27 Ed. 3, c. 1; 16 R. 2, c. 5; 5 El. c. 1.]

PRÆMUNIRE is so called from a word in the writ, præmunire facias præfatum A. B. quod tunc sit coram nobis, &c., where præmunire is used for præmonere, to warn the person to appear, as is directed in the 27 Edw. III. c. 1, hereafter following. 1 Inst. 129. What it is.

Notwithstanding that præmunire is not within the letter of the commission of the peace, yet inasmuch as it is against the peace of the king and of the realm, any justice of the peace may, either on his own knowledge, or the complaint of others, cause any person to be apprehended for such offence, and may take the examination of the person so apprehended, and the information of all who Power of justices of the peace.

can give material evidence against him, and put the same in writing, and bind over the witnesses to the King's Bench, or gaol delivery; and certify his proceedings to the same court to which he shall bind over such informers. 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 34; Hale's Sum. 168.

27 Geo. 3, c. 1.
Impeaching judgments in the king's court, a premunire.

By the 27 Edw. III. c. 1, called the Statute of Provisors, they who shall draw any out of the realm in plea whereof the cognizance pertaineth to the king's court, or which do sue in any other court, to defeat or impeach the judgments given in the king's court, shall have a day, containing the space of two months, by warning to be made to them, by the sheriffs or other officers, to appear to answer in their proper persons for the contempt; and if they come not at the said day, in their proper person, to be at law, they, their procurators, attorneys, executors, notaries, and maintainers, shall from that day forth be put out of the king's protection, and their lands, goods, and chattels forfeit to the king, and their bodies, wheresoever they may be found, shall be taken and imprisoned, and ransomed at the king's will. And upon the same a writ shall be made, to take their bodies, and to seize their lands, goods, and possessions, into the king's hands. And if it be returned that they be not found, they shall be put in exigent, and outlawed.

Suing out foreign process, a premunire.

And by the 16 Rich. II. c. 5, commonly called the Statute of Premunire, and to which the several subsequent statutes do refer, both those who pursue, or cause to be pursued, in the court of Rome, or elsewhere, any processes or instruments, or other things whatsoever, which touch the king, against him, his crown and regality, or his realm, and also those who shall bring, receive, notify, or execute them, and their faulters, and abettors, shall be out of the king's protection; and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, forfeit to the king; and they shall be attached by their bodies, if they may be found, and brought before the king and his council, there to answer; or process shall be made against them by premunire facias, in manner as it is ordained in other statutes of provisors.

And in these two statutes, as above recited, are contained the pains and penalties of what is called the premunire. They were intended chiefly to oppose the papal encroachments in this realm; but the penalties thereof, by several subsequent statutes, are extended to other cases, which have no relation to popery.

Persons guilty of a premunire, might formerly have been killed.

Out of the King's Protection—So odious was this offence formerly, that a man who was attainted on the same might have been slain by any one without danger of law; because it was provided by law, that a man might do to him as to the king's enemy, and a man may lawfully kill an enemy; and therefore by the 5 Eliz. c. 1, it is enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any one to slay any person attainted in or upon a premunire. 1 Inst. 130.

Are disabled to bring an action.

But he is so far out of the king's protection, that he is disabled to bring an action for any injury whatsoever. And no one knowing him guilty, can with safety give him aid, comfort, or relief. Inst. 129, 130; 1 Hawk. c. 19, s. 47.

Whether he may demand sureties.

And Mr. Hawkins says it has been questioned, whether he hath a right to demand surety of the peace. But Lambard and Dalton, which are the authorities he cites for it, incline to think that he hath such right. Lambard alleges for it the 5 Eliz. above mentioned; and Dalton asserts it without doubting. Lamb. 80; Dalt. 272; 1 Haw. c. 60, s. 3.

Lands and tenements.

Lands and Tenements, forfeited—Yet tenant in tail shall only forfeit lands during life; for albeit the statute enacteth that lands and tenements shall be forfeited, that must be understood of such an estate as he may lawfully forfeit, and that is during his own life. 1 Inst. 130.

Corruption of blood.

Attainder in premunire worketh no corruption of blood. Inst. 391.

Prosecutions, however, for a premunire are unheard of in our courts. The only instance of one to be found is in the State Trials; where the penalties of a premunire were inflicted on some persons for refusing to take the oath of allegiance in the reign of Char. II. See 6 Howell's St. Tr. 201, 210.

Presentment.

[7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 38.]

A PRESENTMENT may be that which the grand jury find and present to the court, without any indictment delivered to them; which is afterwards reduced into the form of an indictment, and in nothing else differs from an indictment. By grand jury.

The presentment is drawn up in English by the jury, in a short note, for instructions to draw the indictment by; upon which the officer of the court must afterwards frame an indictment, before the party presented can be put to answer it; and it differs from an indictment, in that an indictment is drawn up at large, and brought engrossed to the grand jury to find. 2 Lill. Abr. 353; 2 Inst. 739.

The grand jury may present any offence within their own knowledge, without a bill being sent before them at the instance of an individual prosecutor, if the offence be one of which they can legally take cognizance. 2 Hawk. c. 2, s. 51.

Justices of the peace are frequently empowered to make presentments, as by the "General Highway Act," 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 24, for which, and observations thereon, see Highways, Vol. III., p. 77, and the form of presentment provided by that act. Id. p. 110. By justices of the peace.

When a presentment is regularly made, the form of it, in describing the subject matter of the offence, is the same as in an indictment, for which see Indictment, Vol. III. Form of presentment.

There are other presentments of churchwardens, constables, and surveyors of the highways; all which may be seen under their proper titles. By constables, &c.

It seems from the cases of R. v. Bridgwater and Taunton Canal Company, 7 B. & Cres. 514, 1 M. & R. M. C. 81, S. C.; that presentments of constables are of no validity, unless the constable goes before the grand jury, and makes oath to the truth of the facts he presents.

Much annoyance and expense having arisen from presentments by constables, the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 38, was passed, whereby, after reciting that "in some parts of England the petty constables of the several parishes have, from a very remote period, been required to appear at a petty session held previously to every general gaol delivery and quarter session for the county in which such parishes are situate, and to make and sign before the justice or justices of the peace attending such petty session certain presentments of various indictable and other offences: and whereas the said presentments are attended with considerable expense and loss of time, and have, in consequence of modern legislative provisions, become useless and improper;" it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, no petty constable shall be required at any petty session or elsewhere to make, nor shall any high constable be required at any general gaol delivery, great session, or general or quarter session of the peace in England, to deliver any presentment respecting popish recusants, persons absenting themselves from their parish church or any other place of religious worship licensed by authority, rogues and vagabonds, inmates, retailers of brandy, ingrossers, forestallers, regraters, profane swearers and cursers, servants out of service, felonies and robberies, unlicensed or disorderly ale-houses, false weights and measures, highways and bridges, riots, routs, and unlawful assemblies, and whether the poor are well provided for, and the constables are legally chosen and sworn." No constable shall be required to make presentments respecting the offences herein mentioned

The following is a form of presentment by a grand jury:—

Printers.

[38 Geo. 3, c. 78; 39 Geo. 3, c. 79; 51 Geo. 3, c. 65.]

THE 38 Geo. III. c. 78, contains a variety of regulations as to the printing and publishing of newspapers and papers of the like kind, and for which see Newspapers, Vol. III.

Persons of every rank shall give a notice, in the form to the printed subscription, to the clerk of the peace, who shall grant a certificate, and file the notice, and transmit an attested copy to the secretary of state.

By the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, s. 23, intituled, "An Act for the more effectual Suppression of Societies established for Seditious and Treasonable Purposes; and for better preventing Treasonable and Seditious Practices," after reciting "Whereas many societies, established of late years for treasonable and seditious purposes, and especially the said societies of 'United Englishmen,' 'United Scotsmen,' 'United Irishmen,' and 'United Britons,' and the said society called the 'London Corresponding Society,' and other corresponding societies, have at various times caused to be published, in great quantities, divers printed papers of an irreligious, treasonable, and seditious nature, tending to revile our holy religion, and to bring the profession and worship thereof into contempt among the ignorant, and also to excite hatred and contempt of his majesty's royal person, government, and laws, and of the happy constitution of these realms, as by law established, and utterly to eradicate all principles of religion and morality; and such societies have dispersed such printed papers among the lower classes of the community, either gratis, or at very low prices, and with an activity and profusion beyond all former example: and whereas all persons printing or publishing any papers or writings are by law answerable for the contents thereof, but such responsibility hath of late been in a great degree eluded by the secret printing and publication of such seditious, immoral, and irreligious papers or writings as aforesaid, and it is therefore highly important to the public peace that it should in future be known by whom any such papers shall be printed;" it is enacted "that, from and after the expiration of forty days from the day of passing this act, every person having any printing-press, or types for printing, shall cause &c.

in the presence of, and attested by one witness, to be of the peace acting for the county, stewardry, riding, town, or place, where the same shall be intended to be put to the form practised in the schedule hereunto annexed, or deputy respectively, shall, and he is authorized to grant a certificate (b) in the form prescribed in the schedule, which such clerk of the peace, or deputy, shall, and no more, and such clerk of the peace, shall, and transmit an attested copy thereof to the secretaries of state; and every person who, not being a clerk of the peace, and obtained such certificate as aforesaid, shall, within the space of forty days next after the passing of this act, or having delivered such certificate as aforesaid, shall use any printing-press for printing, in any other place than the place expressed in such certificate, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 24. "That nothing herein contained shall extend to his majesty's printers for England and Scotland, or to the public presses belonging to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge respectively."

Sect. 25. "That, from and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, every person carrying on the business of a letter-founder, or maker or seller of types for printing, or of printing-presses, shall cause notice of his or her intention to carry on such business to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county, stewardry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where such person shall propose to carry on such business, or his deputy, in the form prescribed in the schedule to this act annexed (c); and such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required thereupon to grant a certificate in the form (d) also prescribed in the said schedule, for which such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall receive a fee of 1*s*. and no more, and shall file such notice, and transmit an attested copy thereof to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and every person who shall, after the expiration of the said forty days, carry on such business, or make or sell any type for printing, or printing-press, without having given such notice, and obtained such certificate, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 26. Printers of newspapers.

THE 38 Geo. III. c. 78, contains a variety of regulations as to the printing and publishing of newspapers and papers of the like kind, and for which see Newspapers, Vol. III.

Printers shall give a notice, in the form in the annexed schedule, to the clerk of the peace, who shall grant a certificate, and file the notice, and transmit an attested copy to the secretary of state.

By the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, s. 23, intituled, "An Act for the more effectual Suppression of Societies established for Seditious and Treasonable Purposes; and for better preventing Treasonable and Seditious Practices," after reciting "Whereas many societies, established of late years for treasonable and seditious purposes, and especially the said societies of 'United Englishmen,' 'United Scotsmen,' 'United Irishmen,' and 'United Britons,' and the said society called the 'London Corresponding Society,' and other corresponding societies, have at various times caused to be published, in great quantities, divers printed papers of an irreligious, treasonable, and seditious nature, tending to revile our holy religion, and to bring the profession and worship thereof into contempt among the ignorant, and also to excite hatred and contempt of his majesty's royal person, government, and laws, and of the happy constitution of these realms, as by law established, and utterly to eradicate all principles of religion and morality; and such societies have dispersed such printed papers among the lower classes of the community, either gratis, or at very low prices, and with an activity and profusion beyond all former example: and whereas all persons printing or publishing any papers or writings are by law answerable for the contents thereof, but such responsibility hath of late been in a great degree eluded by the secret printing and publication of such seditious, immoral, and irreligious papers or writings as aforesaid, and it is therefore highly important to the public peace that it should in future be known by whom any such papers shall be printed;" it is enacted, "that, from and after the expiration of forty days from the day of passing this act, every person having any printing-press, or types for printing, shall cause a notice (a) thereof, signed in the presence of, and attested by one witness, to be delivered to the clerk of the peace acting for the county, stewardry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where the same shall be intended to be used, or his deputy, according to the form practised in the schedule hereunto annexed; and such clerk of the peace, or deputy respectively, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required to grant a certificate (b) in the form prescribed in the schedule hereunto annexed, for which such clerk of the peace, or deputy, shall receive the fee of one shilling, and no more, and such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall file such notice, and transmit an attested copy thereof to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and every person who, not having delivered such notice, and obtained such certificate as aforesaid, shall, from and after the expiration of forty days next after the passing of this act, keep or use any printing-press or types for printing, or having delivered such notice, and obtained such certificate as aforesaid, shall use any printing-press or types for printing, in any other place than the place expressed in such notice, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 24. "That nothing herein contained shall extend to his majesty's printers for England and Scotland, or to the public presses belonging to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge respectively."

Sect. 25. "That, from and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, every person carrying on the business of a letter-founder, or maker or seller of types for printing, or of printing-presses, shall cause notice of his or her intention to carry on such business to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county, stewardry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where such person shall propose to carry on such business, or his deputy, in the form prescribed in the schedule to this act annexed (c); and such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required thereupon to grant a certificate in the form (d) also prescribed in the said schedule, for which such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall receive a fee of 1*s*. and no more, and shall file such notice, and transmit an attested copy thereof to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and every person who shall, after the expiration of the said forty days, carry on such business, or make or sell any type for printing, or printing-press, without having given such notice, and obtained such certificate, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 26. "That every person who shall sell types for printing, or printing-presses, as aforesaid, shall keep a fair account in writing, of all persons to whom any such types or presses shall be sold, and shall produce such accounts to any justice of the peace who shall require the same; and if such person shall neglect to keep such account, or shall refuse to produce the same to any such justice, on demand in writing to inspect the same, such person shall forfeit and lose, for such offence, the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 27. "That, from and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, every person who shall print any paper or book whatsoever, which shall be meant or intended to be published or dispersed, whether the same shall be sold or given away, shall print upon the front of every such paper, if the same shall be printed on one side only, and upon the first and last leaves of every paper or book which shall consist of more than one leaf, in legible characters, his or her name, and the name of the city, town, parish, or place, and also the name (if any) of the square, street, lane, court, or place, in which his or her dwelling-house or usual place of abode shall be; and every person who

Not to extend to papers printed by authority of Parliament.

Penalty of 20*l*. for neglect, or refusing to produce the copy within six months.

Persons selling, &c., any paper, without the name and abode of the printer, may be taken before a justice, to determine whether they have offended against this act.

nor to alter any provisions respecting newspapers. (f)

A justice may empower a peace officer to search for presses and types he suspects to be illegally used, and to seize them and the printed papers found.

Sect. 28. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any papers printed by the authority and for the use of either house of Parliament."

Sect. 29. "That every person, who, from and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, shall print any paper for hire, reward, gain, or profit, shall carefully preserve and keep one copy (at least) of every paper so printed by him or her, on which he or she shall write, or cause to be written or printed, in fair and legible characters, the name and place of abode of the person or persons by whom he or she shall be employed to print the same; and every person printing any paper for hire, reward, gain, or profit, who shall omit or neglect to write, or cause to be written or printed, as aforesaid, the name and place of his or her employer on one of such printed papers, or to keep or preserve the same for the space of six calendar months next after the printing thereof, or to produce and show the same to any justice of the peace, who, within the said space of six calendar months, shall require to see the same, shall, for every such omission, neglect, or refusal, forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 30. "That it shall be lawful for any person, to whom, or in whose presence, any printed paper, not having the name and place of abode of any person printed thereon, in manner hereinbefore directed, or having a fictitious or false name or place of abode printed thereon, shall be sold, or offered for sale, or shall be delivered gratis, or offered so to be, or shall be pasted, fixed, or left in any public place, or in any other manner exposed to public view, to seize and detain the persons so selling or offering to sell, or delivering or offering to deliver, or pasting, fixing, or leaving, in any public place, or in any other manner exposing to public view, any such printed paper, as aforesaid, and forthwith to take and convey him or her before some justice of the peace for the county, stewardry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where such person shall be seized, or to deliver him or her to some constable, or other peace officer, to be taken and conveyed before such justice, as aforesaid, to the intent that such justice may hear and determine whether such person hath been guilty of any offence against this act."

Sect. 31. "That nothing herein contained shall extend to the impression of any engraving, or to the printing by letter-press, of the name, or the name and address, or business or profession, of any person, and the articles in which he deals, or to any papers for the sale of estates or goods by auction, or otherwise."

Sect. 32. "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to alter or vary any rule, regulation, or provision contained in any act of Parliament now in force respecting the printing, publishing, or distributing any printed newspaper, or other printed paper."

Sect. 34. "That no person shall be prosecuted or sued for any penalty imposed by this act, unless such prosecution shall be commenced, or such action shall be brought, within three calendar months next after such penalty shall have been incurred."

Prosecutions to be commenced within three months after penalty incurred.

Recovery of penalties.

Sect. 35. "That any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, exceeding the sum of 20*l.*, may be sued for and recovered, by any person who will sue for the same, by action of debt, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, if such penalty shall have been incurred in England or Wales, or the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and in his majesty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, if such penalty shall have been incurred in Scotland; in which action it shall be sufficient to declare or allege that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of 20*l.* (being the sum demanded by such action), being forfeited by an act made and passed in the thirty-ninth year of the reign of his majesty King George III., intituled, 'An Act' [here set forth the title of the act]; (a) and the plaintiff, if he shall recover in any such action, shall have his full costs; and any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, and not exceeding the sum of 20*l.*, and for the recovery whereof no provision is hereinbefore contained, shall and may be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, stewardry, riding, division, city, town, or place, in which the same shall be incurred, or the person having incurred the same shall happen to be, in a summary way; and, in case such last-mentioned penalty shall not be forthwith paid, such justice or justices shall, by warrant under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, and directed to any constable or other peace officer, cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, together with all costs and charges attending such distress and sale; and, in case no sufficient distress can be had or made, such justice or justices shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for such county, stewardry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding six calendar months, nor less than three calendar months."

Sect. 36. "That all pecuniary penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act shall, when recovered, either by action in any court, or in a summary way before any justice, be applied and disposed of in manner hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, one moiety thereof to the plaintiff in any such action, or the informer

Application of penalties.

(a) See the title of the act, ante, p. 222. Fleming v. Bailey, 5 East, 313. The declaration, which was framed on the above 39 Geo. III. c. 79, stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 60*l.*; and then contained three counts, in each of which the plaintiff went for a penalty of 20*l.*, under the statute, for printing a certain paper meant to be published and dispersed, and omitting the printer's name and place of abode, as required by s. 27. After verdict for the plaintiff, Lawes moved in arrest of judgment, that no action lay by a common informer to recover penalties not exceeding 20*l.* under this statute; and, in support of the motion, s. 35 was cited. Birch showed cause, and, amongst other things, contended, that the jurisdiction of the superior courts could not be ousted without express words, or by necessary implication; and that here no such words or necessity existed: he cited Hill v. Dechair, 5 Sty. 381; Shipman v. Henbest, 4

T.R. 109; R. v. Moreley, 2 Burr. 1040; Cates q. t. v. Knight, 3 T.R. 442, and 2 Haw. c. 26, s. 26, 30. But, per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., a common informer can have no right to sue for any penalty, but where power is given to him for that purpose by the statute. Now, the statute in question only says, that a common informer may sue in any court of record for any pecuniary penalty imposed by the act exceeding 20*l.* The penalty given for this offence, each of which must be taken by itself, and cannot be reckoned accumulatively, does not exceed 20*l.*; and, therefore, it is not within the provisions of the 35th clause, which give an action. And the sense of that clause requires that the form of the declaration there afterwards given should be read the same as if the sum to be recovered were left in blank; for how otherwise can the penalty of 100*l.* given by the 15th section be recovered? Per Cur.—Judgment arrested.

before any justice, and the other moiety thereof to his majesty, his heirs and successors."

Limitation of actions.

Sect. 37. "That every action and suit which shall be brought or commenced against any justice or justices of the peace, constable, peace officer, or other person or persons, for anything done or acted in pursuance of this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards; and the venue in every such action or suit shall be laid in the proper county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if such action or suit shall be brought or commenced after the time limited for bringing the same, or the venue shall be laid in any other place than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants; and, in such case, or if the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants upon the merits, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his, her, or their action after appearance, or if, upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have double costs; which he or they shall and may recover in such and the same manner as any defendant can by law in other cases."

Double costs.

Convictions, &c., to be in the forms in the annexed schedule, Nos. 1, 2, 3.

Sect. 38. "That convictions (a) by any justice or justices of the peace for offences against this act, and adjudications of forfeitures of licenses to be made in pursuance of this act, and notices and certificates (a) delivered and granted in pursuance of this act, shall or may be in the several forms set forth for such purposes respectively in the schedule to this act annexed."

51 Geo. 3, c. 61.

By the 51 Geo. III. c. 65, to explain and amend the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, so far as respects certain penalties on printers and publishers:

Printing papers or books contrary to recited act.

Sect. 1, reciting the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, s. 27, 35, it is enacted, "that nothing in the twenty-seventh section of the said act contained shall extend to make any person or persons offending against the same liable to more than twenty-five forfeitures or penalties for printing or publishing, or dispersing, or assisting in publishing or dispersing, any number of copies of one and the same paper or book, contrary to the said section of the said act."

Penalties.

Justices may mitigate penalties.

Sect. 2. "That if any justice or other magistrate, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence or offences against the provisions of the before-mentioned act, shall see cause to mitigate such penalty or penalties, it shall be lawful for such justice or other magistrate to mitigate or lessen the same to any sum not less than 5*l.*, over and above all reasonable costs and charges expended or incurred in the prosecution."

Name and residence of printers not required to be put to bank-notes, bills, &c., or to any paper printed by authority of any public board or public office.

Sect. 3, reciting that "doubts have arisen whether the provisions contained in the said act may not be considered as extending to notes and post bills of the governor and company of the Bank of England, and to bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, and other securities for payment of money, bills of lading, policies of insurance, letters of attorney, transfers or assignments of public stocks, funds, and other securities, and to dividend warrants, receipts for money or goods, deeds, or other instruments, proceedings in the courts of law and equity, and other inferior courts, warrants, orders, and other papers, printed by the authority of any public board or public officer, in the execution of the duties of their respective offices, many of which securities, instruments, proceedings, and other matters aforesaid, are usually wholly or in part printed;" enacts, "that nothing in the said recited act or in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to require the name and residence of the printer to be printed upon any such bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, or promissory note, or upon any bond or other security for payment of money, or upon any bill of lading, policy of insurance, letter of attorney, deed, or agreement, or upon any transfer or assignment of any public stocks, funds, or other securities, or upon any transfer or assignment of the stocks of any public corporation or company, authorized or sanctioned by act of Parliament, or upon any dividend warrant or for any such public or other stocks, funds, or securities, or upon any receipt for money or goods, or upon any proceeding in any court of law or equity, or in any inferior court, warrant, order, or other papers, printed by the authority of any public board or public officer, in the execution of the duties of their respective offices, notwithstanding the whole or any part of the said several securities, instruments, proceedings, matters, and things aforesaid, shall have been or shall be printed; any thing herein or in the said recited act contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

Sect. 4. "That if any person or persons shall think himself, herself, or themselves aggrieved by any conviction, judgment, or determination, of any justice or justices, relating to any matter or thing in the before-mentioned act contained, then and in that case he, she, or they may appeal to the justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions to be holden in and for the county, city, or place where such conviction, judgment, or determination shall have been made, next after the expiration of twenty days from the making thereof, first giving six days' notice of such appeal to the person or persons prosecuting for such penalty or penalties; and the said justices shall hear and determine the said appeal at such general quarter sessions, or, if they think proper, adjourn the hearing thereof until the next general quarter sessions, to be holden for such county, town, or place; and the said justices may, in like manner, if they see cause, mitigate any penalty or penalties, and may order any money to be returned which shall have been paid or levied under any conviction, as aforesaid, and may also order and award such costs to be paid by either party to the other, as they shall think and judge reasonable."

Prison-Breaking.

[3 Ed. I. c. 15; 1 Ed. II. st. 2; 4 Geo. IV. c. 64; 9 Geo. 4, c. 31.]

FOR the law relative to escapes where there is no actual breaking of the prison, see Escape, Vol. I.; and as to Rescues, see Rescue, post.

It seemeth that, at the common law, all prison-breaches were felonies, if the party were lawfully in custody for any cause whatsoever. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 1. At common law.

But by the following statute, which is called the statute de frangentibus prisonam, the severity of the common law is moderated; in the explication of which statute will be contained the whole learning relating to this subject. By statute.

The statute is this: concerning prisoners which break prison, the king will-eth and commandeth that none that breaketh prison shall have judgment of life or member for breaking of prison only, except the cause for which he was taken and imprisoned did require such judgment, if he had been convict there-upon, according to the law and custom of the realm.

Concerning Prisoners which Break—Therefore, if the prison be broken by a stranger, and not by the prisoner, or by his procurement, this is no felony in the prisoner. Hale's Sum. 108. Prison broken by a stranger.

Which Break Prison—It seems clear that any place whatsoever wherein a person under a lawful arrest for a supposed crime is restrained of his liberty, whether in the stocks, or street, or in the common gaol, or the house of a constable or private person, is properly a prison within this statute; for imprisonment is nothing else but a restraint of liberty. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 4. What shall be deemed a prison.

And therefore this extendeth as well to a prison in law as a prison in deed. 2 Inst. 589.

But there must be an actual breaking; for if the door be open and he goes out, it is not felony, but a misdemeanor only. 2 Inst. 589; 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 9. Must be an actual breaking.

But if the prison be fired without the privity of the prisoner, he may lawfully break, to save his life. Hale's Sum. 108.

Also, it seems that no breach of prison will amount to felony, unless the prisoner escape. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 12.

But there need not, it seems, be any actual intent to break, to constitute the offence. Where, therefore, it appeared that the prisoner made his escape from the house of correction, by tying two ladders together and placing them against the wall of the yard, and, in making his escape, had thrown down some of the bricks of the wall, this was held to be a sufficient breaking. R. v. Haswell, R. & R. 458.

That none that Breaketh Prison shall have Judgment of Life or Member—That, shall be guilty of felony. But, nevertheless, he is still punishable as for a high misprision, by fine and imprisonment; for it cannot be thought the meaning of the statute, in ordaining that such offences shall not be punished as capital ones, to intend that they shall not be punished at all. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 21. How punishable.

Except the Cause for which he was Taken and Imprisoned did require such Party must be lawfully in prison.

Judgment]—This is to be intended of a lawful cause; and therefore false imprisonment is not within this act. 2 Inst. 590.

Imprisonment, what.

Imprisonment is a restraint of a man's liberty under the custody of another, by lawful warrant, in deed or in law. Lawful warrant is either when the offence appeareth by matter of record, as when the party is taken upon an indictment; or when it doth not appear by matter of record, as when a felony is done, and the offender, by a lawful mittimus, is committed to gaol for the same: but between these two cases there is a great diversity; for in the first case, whether any felony were committed or no, if the offender be taken by force of a capias, the warrant is lawful, and if he break prison, it is felony, although no felony were committed; but in the other case, if no felony be done at all, and yet he be committed to prison for a supposed felony, and break prison, this is no felony, for there is no cause. 2 Inst. 590.

For what.

So that the cause must be just and not feigned, for things feigned require no judgment: thus, if a man give another a mortal wound, for which he is committed to prison, and breaketh prison, and the other dieth of the wound within the year, this death hath relation to the stroke; but because relations are but fictions in law, and fictions are not here intended, this prison-breaking is not felony. 2 Inst. 591; Cole's case, Plowd. Com. 401.

So that the offence for which the party was imprisoned must be a capital one at the time of the offence, and not become such by a matter subsequent. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 14.

And the cause must be expressed in the mittimus, although not so certainly as in an indictment; yet with such a convenient certainty as it may appear judicially that the offence requireth such judgment; as, not for felony generally, but for felony in stealing such a horse, and the like. 2 Inst. 591.

But if the offence for which the party is committed be supposed in the mittimus to be of such a nature as requires a capital judgment; yet if, in the event, it be found to be of an inferior nature, and not to require such a judgment, it seems difficult to maintain that the breaking of the prison, on a commitment for it, can be felony; for the words of the statute are, except the cause for which he was taken and imprisoned did require such judgment; and here it appears that the offence, which is the cause of his imprisonment, doth not require such a judgment. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 15.

Suspicion, &c.

But if a man be committed by lawful warrant for suspicion of felony done, if he break prison he may be indicted for that escape, albeit the commitment be for suspicion of felony, and yet no judgment can be given against him for suspicion, but for the felony itself, whereof he is suspected. 2 Inst. 592.

And an indictment that such a person feloniously broke the prison, generally, is not good; but it ought to rehearse the specialty of the matter, that he, being imprisoned for such or such felony, broke the prison. 2 Inst. 591.

But if the party be only arrested for and in his mittimus charged with a crime which doth not require judgment of life or member, as petit larceny, or homicide by self-defence or by misadventure, and the offence be in truth no greater than the mittimus doth suppose it to be, it is clear, from the express words of the statute, that the breaking of the prison cannot amount to felony. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 15.

But if a felony be made by a subsequent statute, and an offender is committed thereupon, if he break prison, it is felony; for, since all breaches of prison were felonies by the common law, which is restrained by this statute in respect only of imprisonment for offences not capital, when an offence becomes capital, it is as much out of the benefit of the statute as if it had always been so. Hale's Sum. 108.

Also, it is said that the party may be arraigned for prison-breaking, before he be convicted of the crime for which he was imprisoned; for that it is not material whether he were guilty of such crime or not; for the words of the statute are, for which he was taken and imprisoned. 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 16.

But if he be first indicted and acquitted of the principal felony, he shall not be indicted for the breach of prison afterwards; for it being clear that he was not guilty of the felony, he is in law as a person never committed for felony, and so his breach of prison is no felony. 1 Hale, 612.

But the gaoler shall not be punished as a felon for the party's breach of prison, unless he voluntarily consented to it: but it seems to be a negligent escape in the gaoler, for which he may be punished by fine and imprisonment, because there wanted either that due strength in the gaol, or that due vigilance in the gaoler or his officers, that should have prevented it; and if gaolers might not be punished for this as a negligent escape, they would be careless either to secure their prisoners or to retake them that escape. 1 Hale, 601.

Voluntary or negligent gaoler.

And therefore if a criminal, endeavouring to break the gaol, assault his gaoler, he may be lawfully killed by him in the affray. 1 Haw. c. 28, s. 12.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 44, "to the intent that prosecution for escapes, breaches of prison, and rescues, may be carried on with as little trouble and expense as is possible," it is enacted, "that any offender escaping, breaking prison, or being rescued therefrom, may be tried either in the jurisdiction where the offence was committed, or in that where he or she shall be apprehended and retaken; and in case of any prosecution for any such escape, attempt to escape, breach of prison, or rescue, either against the offender escaping or attempting to escape, or having broken prison, or having been rescued, or against any other person or persons concerned therein, or aiding, abetting, or assisting the same, a certificate given by the clerk of the assize, or other clerk of the court in which such offender shall have been convicted, shall, together with due proof of the identity of the person, be sufficient evidence to the court and jury of the nature and fact of the conviction, and of the species and period of confinement to which such person was sentenced." See the forty-third section, Escape, Vol. II. p. 11.

Method of trial and conviction of offenders making escapes.

By the Mutiny Act, it is usually enacted, that if any offender, under sentence of death by a court-martial as aforesaid, shall obtain his majesty's conditional pardon as aforesaid, all and every the laws now in force touching the escape of felons under sentence of death, shall apply to such offender and to all persons aiding, abetting, or assisting in any escape or intended escape of any such offender, or contriving any such escape, from the time when such order shall be made by such justice or baron as aforesaid, and during all the several proceedings which shall be had for the purposes aforesaid.

I. To compel an Appearance in a Court of Record. (a)

[3 Edw. I. c. 14 ; 1 Edw. IV. c. 2 ; 8 Hen. VI. c. 10 ; 31 Eliz. c. 3 ; 21 Jac. I. c. 4 ; 29 Car. II. c. 7 ; 48 Geo. III. c. 58.]

By the commission of the peace, the justices in sessions have power to make ^{Process by the} and continue processes upon indictments against the persons indicted, until ^{commission.} they can be taken, surrender themselves, or be outlawed.

(a) As to this kind of process in general, see 1 Chit. C. L. 337 to 347 ; Com. Dig. Process ; also, Mr. Cude's useful work on the subject.

Process on indictments taken in the tourn.

And by the 1 Edw. IV. c. 2, indictments and presentments taken in the sheriff's tourn shall be delivered to the next sessions, who may award process thereupon in like form as if they had been taken before themselves.

Process by justices out of sessions.

And the law also in several cases in express words directs process to be made by justices out of sessions; and in other cases by necessary implication; and where a statute doth give power to justices out of sessions to inquire, hear, and determine, there they may make process to cause the party to come and answer, otherwise they cannot proceed to hear and determine; and this may be either before or after presentment or indictment, as the several statutes do require: before presentment or indictment, it is called a warrant; after presentment or indictment, it is properly called process. Dalt. c. 193, p. 471.

Process, what.

Commonly, an indictment, being but an accusation against a man, is of no force but only to put him to answer unto it. And hereof all process hath the name, because it proceedeth, or goeth out, upon former matter, either original or judicial. Lamb. 519.

No need of, if party be present.

And it seemeth plain, from the nature of the thing, that there can be no need of process where the defendant is present in court, but only where he is absent. 2 Haw. c. 27; 1 Chit. C. L. 338.

To be in the king's name.

The process ought to be in the name of the king. And if it issue from the King's Bench, it ought to be under the teste of the chief justice. If it issue from any other court, there seems to be the same reason that it ought to be under the teste of the first in the commission. 2 Haw. c. 27. s. 8; 1 Chit. C. L. 339.

When returnable.

Upon an indictment in sessions, (for a misdemeanor, not being a felony,) there must be fifteen days between the teste and return of the venire; but if the entry be by consent of parties, the venire may be returnable immediatē, and the trial be the same day. 3 Salk. 371.

Process for felony.

Process on an indictment for felony, by the 25 Edw. III. c. 14, is two capias's, and then an exigent. Hale's Sum. 209; 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 115.

Process for misdemeanors, &c.

The ordinary processes upon all indictments of trespass against the peace, or of other offences against penal statutes, not being felony, or a greater offence, are as follow: first, if the offender be absent, a venire facias, which is but in the nature of a summons to cause the party to appear, shall be awarded, except where other process is directed by some statute. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 9.

If it appear by the return of such venire, that the party hath lands in the county, whereby he may be distrained, the distress infinite shall be awarded from time to time till he do appear, and by force thereof he shall forfeit on every default so much as the sheriff shall return upon him in issues. But if a nihil be returned on such a venire, then three capias's, that is, a capias, alias, and pluries, shall issue. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 10.

Where the inhabitants of a parish are indicted or presented, the process is, first, a venire, then a distringas.

And see further, as to the different kinds of process, 1 Chit. C. L. 338.

Process on informations.

By the 21 Jac. I. c. 4, by which all popular actions on penal statutes are restrained to their proper counties, the like process in every popular action, bill, plaint, suit, or information on a penal statute, before the quarter sessions (or higher courts), shall be awarded as in an action of trespass vi et armis, at the common law.

And, consequently, the process in all such suits must be by attachment or pone per vadios; and afterwards by distress infinite, where by the return the party appears to be sufficient, otherwise by capias. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 13.

When any person is charged with any offence (not being treason or felony) for which he may be prosecuted by indictment or information in King's Bench;

The 48 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 1, enacts, "That whenever any person shall be charged with any offence for which he or she may be prosecuted by indictment or information in his majesty's court of King's Bench, not being treason or felony, and the same shall be made appear to any judge of the same court by affidavit, or by certificate of an indictment or information being filed against such person in the said court for such offence, it shall and may be lawful for such judge to issue his warrant under his hand and seal, and thereby to cause such person to be apprehended and brought before him or some other judge of the same court, or before some one of his majesty's justices of the peace, in order to his or her being bound to the king's majesty with two sufficient sureties, in such sum as in the said warrant shall be expressed, with condition to appear in the said court at the time mentioned in such warrant, and to answer to all and singular indictments or informations for any such offence; and in case any such person shall neglect or refuse to become bound as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such judge or justice respectively to commit such person to the common gaol of the county, city, or place where the offence shall have been committed, or where he or she shall have been apprehended, there to remain until he or she shall become bound as aforesaid, or shall be discharged by order of the said court in term time, or of one of the judges of the said court in vacation; and the recognizance to be thereupon taken shall be returned and filed in the said court, and shall continue in force until such person shall have been acquitted of such offence, or in case of conviction, shall have received judgment for the same, unless sooner ordered by the said court to be discharged; and that where any person, either by virtue of such warrant of commitment as aforesaid, or by virtue of any writ of capias ad respondendum issued out of the said court, is now detained, or shall hereafter be committed to, and detained in any gaol for want of bail, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information to cause a copy thereof to be delivered to such person, or to the gaoler, keeper, or turnkey of the gaol wherein such person is or shall be so detained, with a notice thereon indorsed, that unless such person shall, within eight days from the time of such delivery of a copy of the indictment or information as aforesaid, cause an appearance, and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the said court to such indictment or information, an appearance and the plea of not guilty will be entered thereto in the name of such person; and in case he or she shall thereupon, for the said space of eight days after such delivery of a copy of the indictment or information as aforesaid, neglect to cause an appearance, and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the said court to such indictment or information, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information, upon an affidavit being made and filed in the said court, of the delivery of a copy of such indictment or information, with such notice indorsed thereon as aforesaid, to such person, or to such gaoler, keeper, or turnkey, as the case may be, which affidavit may be made before any judge or commissioner of the said court authorized to take affidavits in the said court, to cause an appearance and the plea of not guilty to be entered in the said court to such indictment or information, for such person, and such proceedings shall be had thereupon as if the defendant in such indictment or information had appeared and pleaded not guilty, according to the usual course of the said court; and that if, upon the trial of such indictment or information, any defendant so committed and detained as aforesaid, shall be acquitted of all the offences therein charged upon him or her, it shall be lawful for the judge before whom such trial shall be had, although he may not be one of the judges of the said court of King's Bench, to order that such defendant shall be forthwith discharged out of custody as to his or her commitment as aforesaid, and such defendant shall be thereupon discharged accordingly."

upon affidavit thereof, or on certificate of indictment, &c., being filed, any judge of the court may issue his warrant to apprehend the party; who shall be thereupon held to bail to answer the charge, or on failure of bail shall be committed; and if any person in custody for want of bail shall not plead in eight days after copy of indictment, &c., and notice to plead, are delivered at the gaol, the prosecutor may enter the plea of not guilty, and proceed to trial.

Party acquitted may be discharged.

It appears now to be the established practice, independently of this statute, upon an indictment found for a misdemeanor at the assizes or sessions, to issue a bench warrant, signed by a judge or justices of the peace, or two of the latter, to apprehend the defendant; and, when the assizes and sessions are over, the clerk of assize, and clerk of the peace respectively, will, on the application of the prosecutor, grant a certificate of the indictment having been found, upon which any judge of the King's Bench, or justice of the peace of the proper county, will grant a warrant for apprehending the defendant, and will oblige him to enter into recognizance to answer, or for want of sureties will commit him. reign country.

By the 8 Hen. VI. c. 10, on indictments for treason, felony, or trespass against persons dwelling in other counties than where the indictment is taken, before any exigent awarded, presently after the first writ of capias awarded and returned, another writ of capias shall be awarded, directed to the sheriff of the county whereof the person indicted was supposed to be conversant by the same indictment, returnable before the same justices or others before whom he is indicted, at a certain day continuing the space of three months from the date of the said last writ, where the counties are holden from month to month; and where they are holden from six weeks to six weeks he shall have four months, until the return of the same writ; by which writ of second capias it shall be commanded to the same sheriff to take the person indicted by his body, if he can be found within his bailiwick; and if he cannot be found within his bailiwick, that the said sheriff shall make proclamation in two counties before the return of the same writ, that he which is so indicted shall appear before the said justices or others in the county, liberty, or franchise where he is indicted, at the day contained in the said last writ of capias, to answer to the king of the felony, treason, or trespass, whereof he is so indicted; after which second writ of capias so served and returned, if he which is so indicted come not at the day of the same writ of capias returned, the exigent shall be awarded. And every exigent and outlawry otherwise awarded or pronounced shall be void.

And if any such indictment shall be removed by certiorari, then before the exigent awarded, presently after such first capias returned, another writ of capias shall be directed as before, returnable before the king in his bench.

But this shall not extend to indictments taken in the county of Chester.

Also, if any person be indicted of felony or treason, and at the time of the same felony or treason supposed was conversant within the county whereof the indictment maketh mention, the like process shall be made against the person so indicted, as hath formerly been used; that is, without sending process into the other county.

But every person indicted in the form aforesaid, after he is duly acquit by verdict, shall have an action upon his case, against the procurer of such indictment; and if such procurer be attained thereof, the plaintiff shall recover treble damages. Which seemeth to be upon account of the distance at which he is supposed to live from the place where he is indicted, and consequently his extraordinary trouble in that behalf.

Dwelling in other Counties—If the defendant be named of B. and late of C., there is no need of any capias to the sheriff of the county where C. lies, because it appears that the defendant is at present conversant at B. But if a defendant be named of no certain place at present, but only late of B. and late of C. and late of D., being all of them in counties different from that wherein the prosecution is commenced, a capias shall go to the sheriff of every one of those counties. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 126.

Shall be void—Not utterly void, but only voidable by writ of error. Id.

County of Chester—But it may be awarded into the counties palatine of Lancaster and Durham; and it seems that it shall be directed to and returned by the Chancellor of Lancaster or Bishop of Durham; and it hath been said that, if he will not return it, the exigent may be awarded as well as if he had returned it; because the court (of the sessions at least) cannot compel him to return it, and the prosecution might be unreasonably delayed, if the proceedings were to be stayed till he should return it. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 125; Hale's Sum. 209, 210.

Mr. Marrow saith that, by the equity of this statute, if a person indicted in one county is imprisoned in another, the justices may award an habeas corpus to remove him before themselves. Lamb. 526.

To be executed by the sheriff.

Concerning the execution of the process, it is laid down as a general rule, that wherever the king is a party to the suit (as he certainly is to all informations and indictments), the process ought to be executed by the sheriff himself, and not by the bailiff of any franchise, whether it have the clause non omittas or not, and whether the defendant be within a franchise or in the county at large; for the king's prerogative shall be preferred to any franchise: but it is said, that this is to be intended only where in the grant of the franchise no mention is made of causes to which the king is a party. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 17; and see further as to the execution of process, post, Exarant.

And if the party be in a house, if the doors be shut, and the sheriff (having given notice of his process) demand admittance, and the doors be not opened, he may break open the doors, and enter to take the offender. 2 Hale, 202; and see, further, post, Exarant.

In the execution of process against any man in the case of a misdemeanor, it is necessary to demand admittance, before the breaking of the outer door of the house can be legally justified; but quare, if it be so in the case of felony.

Lamock v. Brown, 2 B. & A. 592. Trespass for breaking and entering plaintiff's dwelling-house and seizing a gun. Plea, not guilty. At the trial before Holroyd, J., the defendants, two of whom were constables, and the third the gamekeeper of the manor where the plaintiff resided, justified the trespass under a warrant granted by virtue of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, which empowers gamekeepers and other persons, authorized by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace for the county, in the day-time, to search the houses of unqualified persons suspected of having in their custody guns, &c., for the purpose of destroying game, and to seize, detain, and keep the same, to and for the use of the lord of the manor, or to cut to pieces and destroy them. The plaintiff was proved to be an unqualified person, but, on the warrant being produced, several objections were taken to it as being informal. And it further appearing that the outer door of the plaintiff's house had been broken open without his having been previously requested to open it, the learned judge was of opinion that the justification was not sufficiently made out, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict. And now, on a motion for a rule to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered, it was contended that the defendants were justified in obeying the warrant; and that, if the warrant was informal, the proper remedy of the plaintiff was not against them, but against the magistrate who had granted it. Then, as to the other objection, that the outer door was broken open, he contended that here there appeared to have been a misdemeanor on the part of the plaintiff; and that, in the execution of criminal process, the outer door may be lawfully broken open. If a previous request be held to be necessary, it will be very inconvenient; for in many criminal cases—as, for instance, felony, it will give the party accused notice that he may make his escape.—Abbott, C. J. I am of opinion that, in this case, the verdict is right. It is not at present necessary for us to decide how far, in the case of a person charged with felony, it would be necessary to make a previous demand of admittance before you could justify breaking open the outer door of his house; because I am clearly of opinion that, in the case of a misdemeanor, such previous demand is requisite; and that is sufficient for the determination of the present case. It is reasonable that the law should be so; for if no previous demand is made, how is it possible for a party to know what the object of the person breaking open the door may be? He has a right to consider it as an aggression on his private property, which he will be justified in resisting to the utmost.—Bayley, J. The present verdict is quite right, because, even in the execution of criminal process, you must demand admittance before you can justify breaking open the outer door. That point was mentioned in the judgment of the court, in the case of Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 163. Holroyd and Best, Js. concurred. R. R.

But by the 29 Car. II. c. 7, s. 6, no person on the Lord's day shall serve or cause to be served any writ, process, or warrant, order or judgment (except in cases of treason, felony, or breach of the peace); but the service thereof shall be void, and the person serving the same shall be liable to answer damages to the party grieved, in the same manner as if he had done it without any writ, process, warrant, order, or judgment at all. See Lord's Day, Vol. III.

Process on a Sunday.

It seems to be agreed that every suit, whether civil or criminal, and also every process in such suit against jurors, ought to be properly continued from day to day from its commencement to its conclusion, without any the least gap or chasm; the suffering any such gap or chasm is properly called a discontinuance; and the continuing the suit by improper process (as by a capias instead of a distringas), or by giving the parties an illegal day, is properly called a miscontinuance; and if the justices before whom the matter is depending do not come on the day to which it is continued, it is said to be put without day, and cannot be revived without a re-summmons on re-attachment. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 89, et seq.

Now, process may be discontinued several ways. As, 1. Where the second is not tested on the very same day on which the first is returnable. 2. Where there is a sessions intervening between the teste and the return of a capias, that the defendant may not be imprisoned an unreasonable time. But it is no objection to an exigent that it is not returnable the next sessions, because it must allow time for five county courts to be holden between its teste and return. 3. Where, after issue or demurrer, the court gives the party a day to a distant sessions, without making any continuance to that immediately following. 4. Where the sessions to which the suit is continued is adjourned, and the suit is not adjourned accordingly. 5. Where any of the parties are described in any continuance of the suit, whether on the roll, or by process by a name or addition variant from those in the original, though only in one letter. 6. Where a venire or distringas is issued, without any award on the roll to warrant them. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 90, et seq.

And it seems generally to be taken as an undoubted principle, that a discontinuance by suffering a total chasm in the proceedings, whether on the roll or in the process, by not giving a fresh continuance instantly upon the determination of the precedent, shall never be aided by any appearance of pleading over; but it is holden by the greater number of authorities that if the original be good, and the defendant present in court, he shall be compelled to answer to such original, let the process whereon he came in, or the execution of it, be never so erroneous or defective, so that it never were discontinued; for the end of process is to compel an appearance, and the end being served, and a legal charge appearing against the defendant no way discontinued, the law will not so far regard a slip in the process, as to let the defendant out of court, in order only to have him brought in again in better form. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 107.

Process stayed by putting in bail.

The processes (as well of capias as of outlawry) may be stayed by a supersedeas issuing from other justices (out of sessions), testifying that the party hath come before them, and hath found sureties for his appearance to answer to the indictment, or to pay his fine. Dalt. c. 193.

And it seemeth that even any one justice may bail persons indicted at the sessions for any offence under the degree of felony; for that the statutes relating specially to the power of justices in granting bail do not in this case seem to take away the power which one justice had before the making of the said statutes. 2 Haw. c. 15, s. 54; and see further as to bail, Bail, Vol. I.

II. Of Outlawry for Non-Appearance. (a)

[31 Eliz. c. 3; 3 & 4 Wil. c. 9; 4 & 5 Wil. c. 18, c. 22.]

Process of outlawry.

Judgment of outlawry is given by the coroner, at the fifth county court, upon the party's not appearing to the exigent, which is a writ commanding the sheriff to cause the defendant (exigi) to be demanded from county court to county court until he be outlawed: and such judgment is entered thus: "Therefore, by the judgment of the coroners of our lord the king of the county aforesaid, he is outlawed." 2 Haw. c. 48, s. 21.

(a) See the law of outlawry and process fully stated in 1 Chit. C. L. 347 to 370; Tidd's Pract. 9th ed.

The word outlaw (utlaghe), utlagatus, cometh not immediately from the Latin lex, but is derived to us through the Saxon laga, which signifieth law. And a person outlawed signifies one that is out of the protection of the king, and out of the aid of the law.

Meaning of the word outlaw.

And a man which is outlawed is called outlawed; but a woman which is outlawed is called waved, and not utlagata; for that women are not sworn in leets or tornes, as men at the age of twelve or more are; and therefore men may be called utlagati—that is, extra legem positi, but women are wavate—that is, derelictæ, left out or not regarded, because they were not sworn to the law; wherein it is to be noted, that of ancient time a man was not said to be within the law that was not sworn to the law, which is intended of the oath of allegiance in the leet. 1 Inst. 122.

A woman outlawed.

Hence it is, that a man under the age of twelve years cannot be outlawed. 1 Inst. 122.

Process of outlawry lies in all indictments of treason or felony, and on all returns of rescous; and also on all indictments of trespass with force and arms: and it seems probable that it lies on an indictment of conspiracy or deceit, or any other crime of a higher nature than a trespass with force and arms; but not on any indictment for a crime of an inferior nature. And it seems agreed that it lies not on any action on a statute, unless it be given by such statute, either expressly, as in the case of a præmunire, or impliedly, as where a recovery is given by an action wherein such process lay before, as on a writ of trespass for a forcible entry, on the 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, because the statute expressly gives a recovery by such a writ, and such process lies on it by the common law. 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 113.

For what outlawry may be.

By the 31 Eliz. c. 3, in every action personal, wherein any exigent shall be awarded out of any court, one writ of proclamation shall be awarded out of the same court, having day of teste and return as the writ of exigent shall have, directed and delivered of record to the sheriff where the defendant dwells; which writ of proclamation shall contain the effect of the action; and the sheriff shall make one proclamation in the open county court, and another at the general quarter sessions where the defendant dwells, and another a month at least before the quinto exactus, by virtue of the said writ of exigent, at or near the most usual door of the church or chapel where the defendant shall be dwelling at the time of the exigent awarded, upon a Sunday, immediately after divine service.

Outlawry proclaimed at the sessions.

Also, by the 4 & 5 Wil. III. c. 22, s. 4, upon issuing any exigent out of any of the king's courts against any person for a criminal matter, before judgment or conviction, there shall also issue a writ of proclamation, bearing the same teste and return, where the person in the record of proceeding is mentioned to inhabit, according to the form of the 31 Eliz. c. 3, which writ of proclamation shall be delivered to the sheriff three months before the return of the same.

If there are two coroners in a county, or more, one may execute the writ, as in case of an exigent, but the return must be in the name of the coroners. 2 Hale, 56.

Return of the outlawry.

And the return of the outlawry must be certain: it must show where the county court was held, and in what county; and must return the day, and year of the king, to every exactus. 2 Hale, 203.

Also, the sheriff's name and office must be subscribed to the return of the exigent. 2 Hale, 204.

It is said that the justices in sessions cannot issue a capias utlagatum, but must return the record of the outlawry into the King's Bench, and the process of capias utlagatum shall issue. 2 Hale, 52.

Capias utlagatum.

But in T. 10 J. 1, the opinion of all the court of Common Pleas was, that if one be outlawed before the justices of the peace on an indictment of felony, they may award a capias utlagatum, and so was the opinion of Periam, chief baron, and all the court of Exchequer; for they that have power to award process of outlawry have also power to award a capias utlagatum, as incident to their authority and jurisdiction. 12 Rep. 103.

Consequences of outlawry.

If a person be outlawed at the suit of one man, all men shall take advantage of this personal disability. 1 Inst. 128.

But such disability abateth not the writ, but only disableth the plaintiff, until he obtain a charter of pardon. 1 Inst. 128.

For treason or felony.

Upon outlawry in treason or felony, the offender shall lose and forfeit as much as if he had appeared and judgment had been given against him, as long as the outlawry is in force. 2 Haw. c. 48, s. 22.

For an inferior offence.

But the outlawry for a misdemeanor doth not inure as a conviction for the offence, as it doth in cases of treason and felony; but as a conviction of the contempt for not answering, which contempt is therefore punished, not by fine as a conviction for the offence, but by forfeiture of goods and chattels for the contempt. R. v. Tippen, 2 Salk. 494; see 1 Mac. & Y. 196; 1 Chit. C. L. 366.

Goods forfeited from the time of issuing the exigent.

The very issuing of the exigent, in case of treason or felony, gives to the king the forfeiture of the goods of the party from the time of the teste of the writ of exigent: and the forfeiture by the exigent awarded stands, although the indictment be quashed, until there be a judgment of reversal on a writ of error; because the king's title, being of record, must be awarded by a record. 2 Hale, 204, 205.

Lands forfeited from the time of the outlawry.

And as the award of the exigent gives the forfeiture of the goods, so the outlawry gives the forfeiture or loss of the lands of the party outlawed; to wit, in case of outlawry of treason, his lands are forfeited to the king, of whomsoever they are held; and, in case of outlawry of felony, to the lord by escheat of whom they are immediately holden. 2 Hale, 206.

But the outlawry must be first returned.

But it must be remembered, that the bare judgment of outlawry by the coroner, without the return thereof of record, is no attainder, nor gives any escheat; but it must be returned by the sheriff, with the writ of exigi facias, and the return indorsed. 2 Hale, 206. Or else it must be removed by certiorari; for the judgment given by the coroner in the county court is not matter of record, that court not being a court of record. 1 Inst. 288.

And after inquisition found.

And by the outlawry all personal chattels are vested in the king by forfeiture; but real chattels, or freehold estates, are not vested in the king till after inquisition found. 3 Salk. 262.

Whether it is lawful to kill an outlaw.

In ancient times no man could have been outlawed but for felony, the punishment whereof was death; and upon this account an outlawed man was called wolfeshead, because he might be put to death by any man, as a wolf, that hateful beast, might. But in the beginning of the reign of King Edward the Third, it was resolved by the judges, for avoiding of inhumanity and of effusion of Christian blood, that it should not be lawful for any man but the sheriff, having lawful warrant, to put to death any man outlawed, though it were for felony; and, if he did, he shall undergo such pain of death as if he had killed any other man: and so the law continues to this day. 1 Inst. 28.

Judges of assize may award execution of persons outlawed before justices of the peace.

If a man be indicted before justices of the peace, and thereupon outlawed, and is taken and committed to prison, the justices of gaol-delivery may award execution of this prisoner; for they are constituted to deliver the gaol. 4 Inst. 166; Hale's Sum. 158; 2 Hale, 35.

Clergy in cases of outlawry.

Where clergy is allowable, it shall be as much allowed to one who is outlawed as to one who is convicted by verdict or confession. 2 Haw. c. 33, s. 27.

But a statute taking the benefit of clergy from those who shall be found guilty doth not thereby take it from those who are outlawed. 2 Haw. c. 33, s. 28.

But by the 3 & 4 Wil. III. c. 9, s. 2, if any person be indicted of any offence, for which, by any former statute, he is excluded from clergy upon conviction, if he shall be outlawed thereupon, he shall not have his clergy. (d)

By any former Statute—Hereby it appears that this extends not to offences made felonies by statutes subsequent to this statute. 2 Haw. c. 33, s. 49.

Person outlawed cannot be a plaintiff.

Where a person is outlawed, the defendant may show all the matter and outlawry returned of record, and demand judgment if he shall be answered, because he is out of the law, to sue an action during the time that he is outlawed. 1 Inst. 128. OUTLAWRY.

(a) See now as to Clergy, ante, Vol. I. tit. Clergy.

It seems to be a good challenge of a juror, that he is outlawed either for a criminal matter, or, as some say, in a personal action; but not a principal challenge, but only to the favour, unless the record of the outlawry be produced. 2 Haw. c. 25, s. 16; c. 43, s. 25. Cannot be a juror.

But it seems clear that outlawry, in a personal action, is not a good exception against a witness, as it is against a juror. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 21. May be a witness.

An outlawed person may make a will, and have executors or administrators. Cro. El. 575. May make a will.

And an executor may reverse the outlawry of the testator, where he was not lawfully outlawed. 1 Leon. 325.

Outlawry may be reversed several ways: as, by procuring a supersedeas, and delivering it to the sheriff before the quinto exactus; or by showing any matter apparent on record which makes the outlawry erroneous, as the want of an original; or the omission of process, or want of form in a writ of proclamation, or a return by a person appearing not to be sheriff, or a variance between the original and exigent, or other process, or by a misnomer or want of addition. 2 Haw. c. 50. Reversing outlawry.

And upon a writ of error upon an outlawry in felony, the party outlawed must render himself in custody, and pray the allowance of the writ of error in person; and if the outlawry be reversed, he shall be put to answer the indictment. 2 Hale, 209. In what case the party must appear personally to reverse it.

But by the 4 & 5 Wil. III. c. 18, one outlawed, except for treason or felony, need not appear in person to reverse an outlawry, but may appear by attorney. 4 & 5 W. 3, c. 18. 2 Salk. 498. See 3 D. & R. 55.

There is another kind of process out of a court of record against offenders, called attachment, which is generally for contempt; which belongs to title Attachment, Vol. I. Other kinds of process.

BY the 15 Geo. III. c. 51, various provisions were made to restrain the negotiation of promissory notes and inland bills of exchange, under a limited sum, in England; but doubts have arisen as to the power of justices of the peace to hear and determine offences under that act.

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 1, the said act of 15 Geo. III. is repealed, and by sect. 2, it is enacted, "that all promissory or other notes, bills of exchange, or drafts, or undertakings in writing, being negotiable or transferable for the payment of any sum or sums of money, or any orders, notes, or undertakings in writing, being negotiable or transferable for the delivery of any goods, specifying their value in money, less than the sum of 20s. in the whole, heretofore made or issued, or which shall hereafter be made or issued, shall, from and after the first day of October, 1808, be and the same are hereby declared to be absolutely void and of no effect; any law, statute, usage, or custom, to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Promissory notes for less than 20s. declared void.

Prophecies.

[5 Eliz. c. 15.]

BY the 5 Eliz. c. 15, if any person shall advisedly and directly advance, 5 Eliz. c. 15. publish, and set forth by writing, printing, signing, or any other open speech or deed, any fond, fantastical, or false prophecy, upon or by the occasion of any arms, fields, beasts, badges, or such other like things accustomed in arms, cognizances, or signets, or upon or by reason of any time, year, or day, name, bloodshed, or war, to the intent thereby to make any rebellion, insurrection, disension, loss of life, or other disturbance in the realm; and shall be convicted thereof before a judge of assize, or justice of the peace, within six months after the offence committed, he shall for the first offence be imprisoned for a year, and forfeit 10*l.*; and for the second offence shall be imprisoned for life, and forfeit his goods: half the forfeitures to the king, and half to him who shall sue for them in any court of record.

The intent of this act was, to abolish certain foolish and superstitious notions which prevailed in the times of ignorance, as were set forth in a statute made in the 33 Hen. VIII. c. 14, reciting—Where divers and sundry persons, making their foundation by prophecies, have taken upon them a PROPHECIES. knowledge (as it were) what shall become of them which bear in their arms, cognizance, or badge, fields, beasts, fowls, or any other thing which hath been used or accustomed to be put in any of the same, or in and upon the letters of their names, have devised, descanted, and practised, to make folk think, that by their untrue guesses it might be known what good or evil things should come, happen, or be done, by or to such persons as bore or had such badges or cognizances, or had such letters in their names, to the great terror and destruction of such noble personages, of whom such false prophecies have or should hereafter be set forth, whereby, in times past, many noblemen have suffered, and (if their prince would give any ear thereto) might hap to do hereafter; and therefore enacted, that he who should do so, should be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.

This statute was wholly repealed by the 1 Ed. VI. c. 12, which repealed all statutes making any offences felony from the first year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth. And the substance thereof was re-enacted, with a mitigation of the penalty, by the 3 & 4 Ed. VI. c. 15. Which statute expiring, the 5 El. c. 15, was enacted as above.

Purveyors.

[12 Car. II. c. 24.]

ANCIENTLY, the king's court was supplied with necessaries from the ancient demesnes of the crown; and in respect thereof the tenants of those lands had many privileges, which they still enjoy: but this method, being found to be troublesome and inconvenient, was by degrees disused; and, afterwards, the king was wont to appoint certain officers to buy in provisions for his household, who were called purveyors, and claimed many privileges by the prerogative of the crown. 2 Inst. 542; 1 Haw. c. 47, s. 1.

Abuses of purveyors.

The several laws which restrained the exorbitance of these purveyors made up a pretty large title in the old books; but these laws proving ineffectual to remedy the evil complained of, at length, by the 12 Car. II. c. 24, purveyance was entirely taken away; by which it is enacted, that no sum of money, or other thing, shall be taken for any provision, carriages, or purveyances for the king.

Purveyance taken away.

12 Car. 2, c. 24.

And that no person, under colour of purveyance, shall take any timber, fuel, cattle, corn, grain, malt, hay, straw, victual, cart, carriage, or other thing, without consent of the owner; nor shall require any to furnish any horses, oxen, or other cattle, carts, ploughs, wains, or other carriages, for the use of the king or his household, without the owner's consent.

On pain of being committed to gaol by a justice of the peace, and the constable, until the next sessions, to be there indicted; and also of paying to the party treble damages and treble costs on an action at law.

Quo Warranto.

A Writ of Quo-warranto is in the nature of a writ of right for the king, against him who claims or usurps any office, franchise, or liberty, to inquire by what authority (quo-warranto) he supports his claim, in order to determine the right: Finch. Law, 322; 2 Inst. 282.

It lies also, in case of nonuser (or long neglect of a franchise), or misuser (or abuse of it), being a writ commanding the defendant to show by what warrant he exercises such a franchise, having never had any grant of it, or having forfeited it by neglect or abuse: 3 Bla. Com. 263.

Rape, what.

RAPE is, when a man hath carnal knowledge of a woman by force, and against her will. 2 Inst. 180; 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 1.

Penetration.

Penetration without emission is now sufficient to constitute the offence. R. v. Jennings, 4 C. & P. 249; see the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 18, post, 259.

It was held, in Russen's case, 1 East's P. C. 438; 1 Russell, 803, that the least degree of penetration was sufficient, though not attended with the deprivation of the marks of virginity. In that case it was proved, that the parts of the injured party were so narrow, that a finger could not be introduced, and that the hymen was whole and unbroken; and yet this was held a sufficient penetration to constitute the offence (emission having also been proved, which was necessary as the law stood at that time). See R. v. Hodgson, and R. v. Clarke, Buggery, Vol. I.

A boy under the age of fourteen years is presumed by law incapable to commit a rape. 1 Hale, 631.

But, in both these cases, they may be principals in the second degree, and punished for being present, aiding and abetting. Id. 629, 630; Lord Audley's case, 3 How. St. Tr. 419.

Having carnal knowledge of a married woman under circumstances which induce her to suppose it is her husband, is not a rape. R. v. Jackson, R. & R. C. C. 487.

Using deceit.

The offence of a rape is no way mitigated by showing that the woman at last yielded to the violence, if such her consent were forced by fear of death or of duress. 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 2.

Consenting at last.

Also, it is not a sufficient excuse in the ravisher to prove that the woman is a common strumpet; for she is still under the protection of the law, and may not be forced. 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 2.

Ravishing a common strumpet.

Nor is it any excuse that the woman consented after the fact. 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 2.

Consenting after the fact.

It is said by Mr. Dalton (c. 160), that if a woman, at the time of the supposed rape, do conceive with child by the ravisher, this is no rape: "for (he says) a woman cannot conceive except she doth consent." But Mr. Hawkins observes, that this opinion seems very questionable; not only because the previous violence is no way extenuated by such a subsequent consent, but also because, if it were necessary to show that the woman did not conceive, the offender could not be tried till such time as it might appear whether she did or not; and likewise because the philosophy of this notion may be very well doubted of. 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 9. And Lord Hale says, this opinion in Dalton seems to be no law. 1 Hale, 631.

Woman ravished
conceiving.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 16, it is enacted, "that every person convicted of the crime of rape shall suffer death as a felon."

Punishment of death.

Sect. 17 enacts, "that if any person shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl under the age of ten years, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon. And if any person shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl, being above the age of ten years, and under the age of twelve years, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common goal or house of correction, for such term as the court shall award." See, further, Children, Vol. I.

9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

ledge of a girl under ten; the like of a girl
below twelve.

Sect. 18. "And whereas, upon trials for the crimes of buggery, and of rape, and of carnally abusing girls under the respective ages hereinbefore mentioned, offenders frequently escape by reason of the difficulty of the proof which has been required of the completion of those several crimes; for remedy thereof be it enacted, that it shall not be necessary, in any of those cases, to prove the actual emission of seed in order to constitute a carnal knowledge, but that the carnal knowledge shall be deemed complete upon proof of penetration only."

What shall be sufficient proof of carnal knowledge in the four preceding cases.

See the general clauses of this act, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This provision of sect. 18 makes a most important alteration, and avoids all the former difficulty respecting the proof of emission. As to what is a sufficient penetration, see ante, 258.

cessary.

II. Evidence on an Indictment of Rape.

We have already seen as to what will constitute the offence, and the proofs must be adduced accordingly.

RAPE, EVIDENCE OF.
The woman's oath.

Circumstances in favour of it.

Circumstances in disfavour of it.

Bad character of woman.

Infant a witness.

The party ravished may give evidence on oath, and is in law a competent witness; but the credibility of her testimony, and how far forth she is to be believed, must be left to the jury, and is more or less credible according to the circumstances of fact that concur in that testimony. 1 Hale, 633.

For instance: if the witness be of good fame; if she presently discovered the offence, and made pursuit after the offender; have shown circumstances and signs of the injury, whereof many are of that nature that only women are the most proper examiners and inspectors; if the place wherein the fact was done were remote from people, inhabitants, or passengers; if the offender fled for it. These and the like are concurring evidences to give greater probability to her testimony, when proved by others as well as herself. Id.

But, on the other side, if she concealed the injury for any considerable time after she had opportunity to complain; if the place where the fact was supposed to be committed were near to inhabitants, or common recourse or passage of passengers, and she made no outcry when the fact was supposed to be done, when and where, it is probable, she might be heard by others; or if a man prove himself to be in another place, or in other company, at the time she charges him with the fact; or if she be wrong in the description of the place; or swear the fact to be done in a place where it was impossible the man could have access to her at that time, as if the room were locked up, and the key in the custody of another person; these and the like circumstances carry a strong presumption that her testimony is false or feigned. Id.

The defendant may give evidence of the woman's notoriously bad character for want of chastity or common decency, or that she had before been connected with the prisoner himself; but he cannot give evidence of any other particular facts to impeach her chastity. R. v. Hodgson, 1 Phil. Ev. 190; R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 243. So, what she herself said so recently after the fact as to preclude the possibility of her being practised on, has been holden to be admissible in evidence as a part of the transaction; but the particulars of her complaint are not evidence of the truth of her statement. R. v. Brazier, 1 East's P. C. 444; R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 241. The woman, however, is not compellable to answer whether she has not had connexion with other men, or with a particular person named; nor is evidence of her having had such connexion admissible. R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. 211; Arch. C. L. 287. In a late case on the trial of an indictment for a rape, it was held that the prisoner's counsel might ask the prosecutrix the following questions, with a view to contradict her: "Were you not, on, &c. (since the time of the alleged offence), walking in the High Street at Oxford to look out for men?" "Were you not, on, &c. (since the time of the alleged offence), walking in High Street with a woman reputed to be a common prostitute?" It was also held, that evidence might be adduced by the prisoner to show the general light character of the prosecutrix, and that general evidence might be given of her being a street-walker; but scilicet, that evidence of specific acts of criminality by her would not be admissible. R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589.

It has been made a doubt, at different periods in the history of our courts of law, at what particular age an infant could be sworn to prove a rape, or an assault with intent to ravish her; and at one time a rule appears to have prevailed, that no child could be admitted as a witness under the age of nine years, and very few under ten. R. v. Travers, 1 Str. 700; R. v. Dannel, 1 East's P. C. 442. But it appears now to be well established, that a child of any age, if capable of distinguishing between good and evil, may be examined upon oath; but that, whatever may be its age, it cannot be examined unless sworn. Brazier's case, Reading Spr. Ass. 1779; 1 East's P. C. 443, 444. By such capability of distinguishing between good and evil, must be understood a belief in God, or in a future state of rewards and punishments; from which the court may be satisfied that the witness entertains a proper sense of the danger and impiety of falsehood. White's case, 1 Leach, 430. See title Infant, Vol. III.

It appears to have been allowed, that the fact of the child's having complained of the injury recently after it was received, is confirmatory evidence; but where the child is not fit to be sworn, it is clear that any account which it may have given to others ought not to be received. 1 Russ. 812, citing Bra- zier's case, supra. See 1 Phil. Ev. 19, 222, 6 ed. Thus, on an indictment for a rape on a child of five years of age, where the child was not examined, but an account of what she had told her mother about three weeks after the transaction, was given in evidence by the mother, and the jury convicted the prisoner, principally, as was supposed, on that evidence, the judges, on a case reserved for their opinion, thought the evidence clearly inadmissible; and the prisoner was accordingly pardoned. Tucker's case, Exeter Spr. Ass. 1808, cor. Marshall, Sergt.; MS. C. C. R.; 5 Burn's J., 24 ed. 3; ante, Infant, Vol. III.

RAPE, EVIDENCE OF.

When the child has appeared not sufficiently to understand the nature and obligation of an oath, judges have often thought it necessary, for the purposes of justice, to put off the trial of a prisoner, directing that the child in the meantime should be properly instructed. Thus, in a criminal prosecution that was coming on to be tried before Rooke, J., at Gloucester, finding that the principal witness was an infant, who was wholly incompetent to take an oath, he postponed the trial till the following assizes, and ordered the child to be instructed in the meantime by a clergyman in the principles of her duty, and the nature and obligation of an oath. At the next assizes, the prisoner was put upon his trial, and the girl being found by the court, on examination, to have a proper sense of the nature of an oath, was sworn, and upon her testimony the prisoner was convicted, and afterwards executed. Mr. J. Rooke mentioned this at the Old Bailey in 1795, in the case of Patrick Murphy, who was indicted for a rape on a child of seven years old; and the learned judge added, that upon a conference with the other judges, upon his return from the circuit, they unanimously approved of what he had done. Vide 2 Bac. Abr. 577 (n); 1 Leach, 430 (n).

In a case where the party ravished had died before the trial, her deposition, corroborated by other evidence of actual force and penetration, was held sufficient to warrant a conviction, though there did not appear to be any direct evidence of emission. It was left to the jury to determine whether the crime had been completed by penetration and emission; and they were directed that they might collect the fact of emission from the evidence, though the unfortunate girl was dead, and could not therefore give any further account of the transaction, than that which was contained in her deposition before the magistrate. R. v. Fleming and Windham, 2 Leach, 854.

Where the evidence of children is admitted, it is much to be wished, in order to render their evidence credible, that there should be some concurrent testimony of time, place, and circumstances, in order to make out the fact; and that the conviction should not be grounded singly on the unsupported accusation of an infant under years of discretion. There may be, therefore, in many cases of this nature, witnesses who are competent,—that is, who may be admitted to be heard; and yet, after being heard, may prove not to be credible, or such as the jury is bound to believe. For one excellence of the trial by jury is, that the jury are triers of the credit of the witnesses as well as of the truth of the fact. 4 Bla. Com. 214; 1 Phil. Ev. 19, 6 ed.

The party grieved is so much considered as a witness of necessity in this, as Wife. in other personal injuries, that if one assist another man to ravish his own wife, she is admissible as a witness against him. Lord Audley's case, 3 Howell's St. Tr. 419, cited in 1 East's P. C. 444.

"It is true," says Lord Hale, "that rape is a most detestable crime, and therefore ought severely and impartially to be punished with death: but it must be remembered, it is an accusation easily to be made, and hard to be proved, and harder to be defended by the party accused, though never so innocent." He then mentions two remarkable cases of malicious prosecution for this crime, that had come within his knowledge; and concludes, "I mention these instances that we may be more cautious upon trials of offences of this nature, wherein the court and jury may, with so much ease, be imposed upon, without great care and vigilance; the heinousness of the offence many times transporting the judge and jury with so much indignation, that they are over-hastily carried to the conviction of the person accused thereof, by the confident testimony, sometimes, of malicious and false witnesses." 1 Hale, 635, 636; 4 Bla. Com. 214.

General caution.

III. Punishment of Rape.

Death.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 16, the punishment for this offence is death. See the general clauses, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

IV. Principal and Accessary.

Persons present and aiding are principals.

Mr. Hawkins says, all who are present, and actually assist a man to commit a rape, may be indicted as principal offenders, whether they be men or women. 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 6.

So one woman may be a principal to the ravishment of another.

In R. v. Burgess and others, Chester Spr. Ass. 1813, upon an indictment charging three persons jointly with the commission of a rape, an objection was taken, that three persons could not be guilty of the same joint act; but it was overruled, upon the ground that the legal construction of the averment was only that they had done such acts as subjected them to be punished as principals in the offence. The execution was, however, respited, probably with a view to enable the learned judges to consult other authorities on the accuracy of their opinion: but the prisoners were afterwards executed. 5 Ev. Col. Stat. Cl. 6, p. 244, note (17), 2 ed.; and see 1 Russ. 301.

RECOGNIZANCE is a bond of record, testifying the recognizor to owe a certain sum of money to some other; and the acknowledging of the same is to remain of record; and none can take it but only a judge or officer of record. Dalt. c. 186; 2 Bla. Com. 341. What it is.

These recognizances, in some cases, the justices of the peace are enabled to take by the express words of certain statutes; and in other cases (as for the peace and good behaviour, and the like), it is rather in congruity, and by reasonable intendment of law, than by any express authority given them, either by their commission, or by the statute law. Crom. 125; Dalt. c. 168. In what cases it may be taken.

Whosoever any statute giveth them power to take a bond of any man, or to bind over any man to appear at the assizes or sessions, or to take sureties for any matter or cause, they may take a recognizance. Yea, whosoever they have authority given them to cause a man to do a thing, there it seemeth they have, in congruity, power given them to bind the party by recognizance to do it; and if the party shall refuse to be bound, the justice may send him to gaol. Dalt. c. 168.

But he can take no recognizance but only of such matters as concern his office; and if he doth, it seemeth to be void. Dalt. c. 168.

As regards the power and duty of justices to bind by recognizances to prosecute or give evidence in felonies, the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, reciting the expediency of amending and extending the provisions of the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, and 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 10, enacts, "that the two justices of the peace, before they shall admit to bail, and the justice or justices, before he or they shall commit to prison, any person arrested for felony, or on suspicion of felony, shall take the examination of such person, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing; and Recognizance to prosecute and give evidence in felonies.

RECOGNIZANCE.	the two justices shall certify such bailment in writing; and every such justice shall have authority to bind by recognizance all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching any such felony or suspicion of felony, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions † or sessions of the peace, at which the trial thereof is intended to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the party accused; and such justices and justice respectively shall subscribe all such examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances, and deliver or cause the same to be delivered to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court." Recognizances to prosecute or give evidence in misdemeanors.	As regards the power and duty of justices to bind by recognizances to prosecute or give evidence in misdemeanors , the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 3, enacts, "that every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be taken on a charge of misdemeanor, or suspicion thereof, shall take the examination of the person charged, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing, before he shall commit to prison or require bail from the person so charged; and, in every case of bailment, shall certify the bailment in writing; and shall have authority to bind all persons by recognizance to appear to prosecute or give evidence against the party accused, in like manner as in cases of felony; and shall subscribe all examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances, † deliver or cause the same to be delivered to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court, in like manner as in cases of felony."

Infancy.	As to the recognizances on appeal or certiorari, &c., see those titles.
Feme covert.	A recognizance to prosecute or give evidence seems binding on an infant. See Exp. Williams , 13 Price, 670; M'Clel . 493: it was there held that infancy was no ground for discharging a forfeited recognizance to appear at the assizes to prosecute for felony.
Sureties.	A feme covert must enter into a recognizance, by sureties or otherwise, to appear as a witness: 3 M. & S. 1, post , 265; 1 Chit. C. L. 91.
	But, in general, the parties' own recognizance, without sureties, is all that can be insisted on. Ante , Vol. II. p. 102.
	Where a defendant , indicted at the quarter sessions for a conspiracy, had entered into insufficient recognizances, it was holden, that the Court of King's Bench, on a removal by certiorari , might discharge them on motion, and compel him to enter into better securities: R. v. Hooper and others , 1 Chit. C. L. 491.

II. Refusing to enter into.

If the party improperly refuse to enter into the recognizance to prosecute or give evidence, the magistrate, it seems, has power to commit him, this power being virtually included in his commission, and, by necessary consequence from the above, the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64. See 1 Hale, 586; 2 Hale, 52. And in a case where a married woman refused to enter into a recognizance for her appearance at sessions, to give evidence against a felon, and the magistrate committed her, the Court of King's Bench held that the commitment was legal. Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1. But in a late case it was made a question whether a magistrate has power to commit a person for contemptuously refusing to take an oath and give evidence touching a charge of riot alleged to have been committed by a person then under examination. Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R., M. C. 42. And in the same case, where the plaintiff was committed by a justice for refusing to give evidence before him, touching a certain riot and disturbance, without showing that there had been a person charged before the justices, and that the plaintiff was apprized of the existence of such a charge, with respect to which he was required to be examined as a witness, it was held the warrant of commitment was no justification of the magistrate, in an action of trespass.

Refusing to enter into.
Commitment.

III. Form, &c. of.

Every obligation and recognizance, taken by justices of the peace, must be made to our lord the king: on pain of imprisonment of any person that shall take it otherwise. Dalt. c. 168.

Form of recognizance.

It must also contain the name, place of abode, and trade or calling, both of principal and sureties, and the sums in which they are bound. Barl. Recog. p. 454.

And it is most commonly subject to a condition, which is either indorsed or underwritten, or contained within the body of it, upon the performance of which the recognizance shall be void. Barl. Recog. p. 454.

Condition.

When the parties are to enter into recognizance, call them by their names, thus:—

Manner of taking it.

"You, A. B., acknowledge to owe to our sovereign lord the king the sum of _____, and you, C. D., acknowledge to owe to our sovereign lord the king the sum of _____; to be levied of your respective goods and chattels, lands and tenements, for the use of our said lord the king, his heirs and successors, if default shall be made in the condition following; that is to say, if you, the said A. B., shall make default in appearing," &c.

But the parties need not to sign it. Barl. Recog. p. 454.

And it is usual for the justices to mark at the foot of the examination, A. B., in 40*l*. to appear, &c. And from such short note make out a record afterwards. Barl. Recog. p. 454.

Marking of.

Yet the recognizance is a matter of record presently so soon as it is taken and acknowledged, although it be not made up. Dalt. c. 168; sed vide Glynn v. Thorpe, 1 B. & Ald. 153, where it was considered that a recognizance was not a record until enrolled.

A record.

Lord Coke (1 Inst. 260) says that a record is a memorial or remembrance in rolls of parchment, &c. From whence it seemeth that a recognizance ought to be ingrossed on parchment—perhaps, for this reason, because parchment is more durable than paper: but since there is no law which prohibits it to be ingrossed on paper, it seemeth that, if it shall be on paper only, and not on parchment, it is good in law.

On parchment.

And when it is made up, if the justice shall only subscribe his name without his seal to it, this is well enough; and that may be in either of these sorts: "Acknowledged before me, J. P.," or only to subscribe his name thus—"J. P." Dalt. c. 176.

To be subscribed.

Recognizances before justices to state certain particulars.

Notice to be given on entering into a recognizance.

Only applies to recognizances to appear at sessions.

Certifying recognizances.

By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, s. 4, it is enacted, that each and every justice of the peace, before whom any recognizance (see infra) shall be entered into or taken, shall and is hereby required to give, or cause to be given, at the time of entering into such recognizance, to the person or persons, surety or sureties, so entering into the same, and to each of them, a written or printed paper or notice, in the form or to the effect stated in the schedule marked (a) to this act annexed, adapting the same to the particular circumstances of the case; and each and every such justice shall, in such recognizance, state and particularly specify, not only the profession, art, mystery, or trade, of every person so entering into such recognizance, together with their christian name and names, and surnames, but also the parish, township, or place of his or her residence; and, in case such residence shall be in any city, town, or borough, shall also state and particularly specify the name of the street, and number of the house (if any), in which such person shall reside, and, also, whether owner or tenant thereof, or lodger therein.

The words "any recognizance," appear sufficient to embrace all recognizances; but the whole of the statute, and the notice above required, appear to relate only to recognizances to be returned to the general or quarter sessions. Car. C. L. 120.

The 2d, 3d, & 4th sections of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, which have been already noticed, relate to the certifying of recognizances to prosecute or give evidence. See them, ante, 263, 264. And by the 3 Hen. 7, c. 1, the justices shall certify their recognizances for keeping the peace to the next sessions, that the party may be called; and, if he make default, the default shall be recorded, and the recognizance, with the record of the default, shall be sent and certified into the Chancery, King's Bench, or Exchequer.

IV. Forfeiture, Estreat, Discharge, or Respite of Recognizances.

Forfeiture.

If the party fail to comply with the condition of the recognizance, the same will become forfeited, and may be put in force against him.

It is incumbent on persons under recognizance, who, in consequence either of bills not having been found, or of none having been preferred, may not be called upon to answer or give evidence, to see that their appearance is recorded so as to enable the court to order his recognizance to be cancelled, as otherwise such an attendance is no attendance at all. Per Thompson, C. B., R. v. Miller, Jun., 1808, 4 Chit. C. L. 490, 491.

Estreating recognizances.

Estreating Recognizances—R. v. Ridpath, 10 Mod. 152; Fort. 358. Ridpath entered into a recognizance, with sureties, to appear the first day of the term to answer (generally), and in the meantime to be of good behaviour, and not to depart without leave of the court. An information was preferred against him by the attorney-general; who, for some defect in the pleading, entered a noli prosequi, and then exhibited a new information. The court was of opinion that the recognizance extended to all crimes whatsoever that he should be charged with; and that, if it should have relation to any particular crime only, it must be mentioned in the recognizance, which in this case is only to answer generally; that the inconvenience is not so great as is pretended, the bail in this case being bound in a sum certain, and not to stand in the place of the principal, as in civil cases; and that the noli prosequi is neither a bar nor discharge.

Defendant being taken up on the 8th of June, upon an indictment for a libel, entered into a recognizance to appear and plead, within the first eight days of Trinity term, and to try the cause at the sittings after that term. The defendant pleaded not guilty, but did not give notice of trial or make up the record, either for the sittings after Trinity or Michaelmas term, nor were the recognizances respited. The prosecutors gave notice of trial after Trinity and Michaelmas term, but the causes were not tried. The defendant was ready and willing to take his trial on both these occasions. The recognizances were estreated in Hilary term, without any notice to the defendant, or any motion by the prosecutor: held that this estreat was regular. R. v. Clark, 5 B. & A. 728.

R. v. Tomb, 10 Mod. 278. If a recognizance be estreated in the Exchequer, because not punctually complied with, yet if the party appear and take his trial next session, he may compound for a very small matter in the Court of Exchequer; because the effect, though not the exact form of the recognizance, is complied with. The judges of oyer and terminer are the proper judges whether recognizances ought to be estreated or spared; and it is for the advantage of public justice that they should have such power, if upon the circumstances of the case they see fit. And, by parity of reason, it should seem that the justices of the peace in the quarter sessions should have the like power in respect of offences cognizable there. And see post,

As to the course to be pursued in enforcing estreats into the Exchequer from the Court of King's Bench, see R. v. Shackle, M'Clel. & Y. 514, 523; 13 Price, 299.

It seems questionable whether the quarter sessions can now in any case, since September, 1822, send the estreats of forfeited recognizances taken before them into the Exchequer. 13 Price, 299; M'Clel. 101, S. C.

By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 31, reciting, that "the practice of indiscriminately estreating recognizances for the appearance of persons to prosecute or give evidence, or to answer for a common assault, or in the other cases herein-after specified, has been found in many instances productive of hardship to persons who have entered into the same;" it is enacted, "that in every case where any person bound by recognizance for his or her appearance, or for whose appearance any other person shall be so bound to prosecute or give evidence in any case of felony or misdemeanor, or to answer for any common assault, or to articles of the peace, or to abide an order in bastardy, shall therein make default, the officer of the court by whom the estreats are made out shall and is hereby required to prepare a list in writing, specifying the name of every person so making default, and the nature of the offence in respect of which every such person, or his or her surety, was so bound, together with the residence, trade, profession, or calling, of every such person and surety, and shall in such list distinguish the principals from the sureties, and shall state the cause, if known, why each such person has not appeared, and whether by reason of the non-appearance of such person the ends of justice have been defeated or delayed; and every such officer shall and is hereby required, before any such recognizance shall be estreated, to lay such list, if at a court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery in any county besides Middlesex and London, or at a court of great sessions, or at one of the superior courts of the counties palatine, before one of the justices of those courts respectively; if at a court wherein a recorder or other corporate officer is the judge or one of the judges, before such recorder or other corporate officer; and if at a session of the peace, before the chairman or two other justices of the peace who shall have attended such court, who are respectively authorized and required to examine such list, and to make such order touching the estreating or putting in process of any such recognizance as shall appear to them respectively to be just; and it shall not be lawful for the officer of any court to estreat or put in process any such recognizance without the written order of the justice, recorder, corporate officer, chairman, or justices of the peace, before whom respectively such list shall have been laid."

This enactment does not appear to make any alteration in the practice of the sessions, as to moving to respite or discharge recognizances before they have become forfeited, as it only applies to cases of recognizances which have been forfeited; nor does it appear to affect the discretionary power given to the sessions to remit the forfeiture under the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, s. 6, post, 270; Car. Cr. L. 131.

By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, s. 14, it is enacted, "that all and every the clerk and clerks of the peace, and all town clerks, within that part of the United Kingdom called England, do and shall, on or before the second Monday after the morrow of All Souls, yearly in every year, make and deliver into the Court of Exchequer, a true and perfect duplicate, on certificate, of all such fines, issues, amerciements, forfeited recognizances, and sum or sums of money, and other forfeitures whatsoever paid in lieu or satisfaction of them, or any of them, as shall be contained in the several rolls or copies which shall be so sent out to the sheriff for the purpose of levying as aforesaid, and which shall have been set, lost, imposed, or forfeited, in any of the said sessions of the peace, which shall be held before Michaelmas in each year, to the intent that the sheriffs, on their appraisals in the said Court of Exchequer, may be charged in their accounts with the monies levied and received by him or them respectively upon such writs or otherwise, and that all parties entitled to any such fines, recognizances, or other forfeitures, or any portion or portions thereof, may be at liberty to claim the same before the foreign apposer of the said Court of Exchequer, according to the ancient course and practice of the said court."

But by the fifth section of the same statute, it is enacted, that if the person shall give security to the sheriff or officer, to appear at the next general or quarter sessions, to abide the decision of the court, and pay such sum and such expenses as shall be ordered, the sheriff shall discharge him out of custody; and, in case he does not appear, similar writs may issue against his sureties; and see this and the sixth section, post, 269, 270.

The duplicate of fines, &c. and forfeited recognizances required to be delivered into the Exchequer by the clerk of the peace under the above fourteenth section, must be delivered in on oath. Exp. Hodgson, 1 Man. & Ry. M. C. 346.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 37, the justices are to insert in any following roll all fines, forfeited recognizances, &c. which have not been duly levied, and the sheriff shall detain the writs, which are to continue in force.

That statute also provides, that when a sheriff or other officer goes out of office, he shall deliver such rolls and writs to his successor, who is to execute them.

And by the third section of that statute, (which repeals the seventh section of the 3 Geo. IV. c. 45,) it is enacted, "that in all cases where the party incurring or subject to any fine, issue, amerciament, forfeited recognizance, † sum or sums of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them, or any of them, shall reside, or shall have fled or removed from or out of the jurisdiction of the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, in which any such fine, issue, amerciament, forfeited recognizance, sum or sums of money to be paid in lieu or satisfaction of them, or any of them, shall have been incurred, imposed, or forfeited, or become due, it shall be lawful for such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, and he is hereby authorized and required to issue his warrant, together with a copy of the writ; directed to the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer acting for the county, riding, city, borough, or place, in which such person shall then reside or be, or in which any goods or chattels, or other property, shall be found, requiring such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer to execute such writ, and every such last-mentioned sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, is hereby authorized and required to act in all respects under such warrant, in the same manner as if the original writ had been delivered to him by order of the court of the general or quarter sessions of the county, riding, city, borough, or place, for which such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer shall act; and the said sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, is hereby required, within thirty days after the receipt of such warrant, to return to the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, from whom he shall have received the same, what he shall have done in the execution of such process, and whether the party shall have given good and sufficient security to appeal at the ensuing general or quarter sessions to be held for the county, riding, city, borough, or place, from which the writ issued, and in case a levy shall have been made, to pay over all monies received in pursuance of the warrant to the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, from whom he shall have received the same."

By other sections of this statute, the sheriffs and clerks of the peace are directed to make returns to the treasury.

Discharging Recognizances in Exchequer—Recognizances estreated into the Exchequer may be discharged or compounded by the court, according to the equity and circumstances of the case. Re Pellew, M'Clel. 111; 13 Price, 299, S. C. And, by 4 Geo. III. c. 10, in case recognizances shall be estreated, where the offence is not attended with aggravated circumstances, it is enacted as follows: "Whereas many recognizances have been estreated into his majesty's Court of Exchequer against persons for not appearing as parties or witnesses in his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, or at the assizes and general quarter sessions, or other courts of record, in that part of Great Britain called England, or for not prosecuting indictments there, or otherwise not performing the conditions in such recognizances contained, many of which neglects of duty have happened by the inattention of ignorant people, some of whom are imprisoned, and a great number of others liable to be so, by the process constantly issued against them out of the Courts of Exchequer, and directed to the sheriffs, though no other prosecution be subsisting but merely for such forfeitures of their recognizances, from which there are no easy means at present, for poor persons especially, to procure any discharge: for remedy whereof it is enacted, that from and after the 5th day of May, 1764, it shall be lawful for the barons of his majesty's Court of Exchequer, upon affidavit and petition to be presented to them by or on the behalf of the person or persons imprisoned, or liable to be imprisoned, on the forfeiture of any such recognizances, to discharge such person or persons, by order from the said barons, without any quæritus to be sued out for that purpose; for which order no more than 1*l.* 1*s.* shall be taken by the officer appointed to give out the same: provided that no discharge shall be given on such petitions where any debt is due to the crown, other than by the recognizances so prayed to be discharged; nor in any cases of defrauding his majesty's revenue by contraband trade, or assaulting his majesty's officers of the customs or excise in the execution of their duty, or any person or persons lawfully assisting them therein."

Proviso.

The Court of Exchequer has jurisdiction to respite and stay process on estreated recognizances; and they will do so on application, in order to give the cognizors an opportunity of trying a question of law, respecting the subject-matter of the conviction, although the forfeiture import the breach of a duty imposed by competent authority, under an act of Parliament. Re Fridlington, 9 Price, 658.

Infancy is no ground for discharging a forfeited recognizance. Exp. Williams, M'Clel. 493; 13 Price, 670; ante, 264.

A defendant having been committed to prison on a forfeited recognizance, his wife and family becoming burthensome to the parish is not a sufficient ground to discharge him. R. v. Staucher, 3 Price, 261.

Reg. v. Drummond, 11 Mod. 200. Lord Drummond stood bound by recognizance to appear in the Court of King's Bench the first day of the term; and Sir Simon Harcourt, excusing his non-appearance by reason of sickness, moved that his recognizance might be discharged, the attorney-general having orders, and, being in court, consenting thereto. But Holt, C. J., said, notwithstanding such consent, Lord Drummond not appearing in person, the court could not discharge the recognizance, but said they could respite it till the next term; which was done accordingly.

The statutes 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 37, do not oust the Court of Exchequer of its jurisdiction, where forfeited recognizances have been actually estreated into it from an inferior jurisdiction. Exp. Pellew, M'Clel. 111; 13 Price, 299, S. C.

Discharging, &c., by the Sessions—By the 3 Geo. Sect. 6 enacts, "that the court of general or quarter sessions, before whom any person so committed to gaol or bound to appear shall be brought, is hereby authorized and required to inquire into the circumstances of the case, and shall, at its discretion, be empowered to order the discharge of the whole of the forfeited recognizance, or sum of money paid or to be paid in lieu or satisfaction thereof, or any part thereof; and such order shall be made in the form or to the effect of the schedule marked (C) (b) to this act annexed, and shall be signed by the clerk of the peace; which said order shall be a discharge to such sheriff, bailiff, or officer, on the passing of his accounts at the Exchequer, or before any auditor, or other proper officer duly authorized to pass the same; and, in all cases where the party shall have been lodged in the common gaol by such sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, the justices of the peace so assembled are hereby empowered either to remand such party to the custody of the sheriff, bailiff, or other officer, or, upon the release of such party from the whole of such forfeited recognizance, to order such party to be discharged from custody; and such order shall be a full and sufficient discharge to the said sheriff, bailiff, or officer, on the passing of his accounts at the Exchequer, or before any auditor, or other proper officer duly authorized to pass the same; and it shall and may be lawful to and for the said court of general or quarter sessions to award such costs, charges, and expenses, to be paid by either party to the other, as to the said court shall seem just and reasonable."

If a recognizance be estreated at the quarter sessions, and a writ issue to the sheriff to levy under the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, and the sheriff levy the amount, the quarter sessions have not the power to mitigate the amount, although the money has been actually levied; and the party cannot compel the sheriff to pay back the difference. *Haynes v. RESCOUS is an ancient French word, coming from rescower, that is, recuperare, to recover; and signifies a forcible setting at liberty, against law, a person arrested by the process or course of law. 1 Inst. 160. What a rescous is.

Rescue is a common-law felony, if the party rescued be a convicted felon. R. v. Harwell, R. & R. C. C. 458. It is a misdemeanor, if the party rescued be convicted of a misdemeanor. 1 Hale, 607.

It seems that it is necessary that the rescuer should have knowledge that the person is under arrest for a criminal offence, if he be in the custody of a private person: but if he be in the custody of an officer, there at his peril he is to take notice of it. 2 Hale, 606.

But it is said, that to rescue a felon taken on a general warrant, to answer what shall be objected against him, no cause being expressed in the warrant, is not felony. 1 Hale, 578.

Nor unless a felony hath been really done. Hale's Sum. 116.

A hindrance of a person to be arrested, that has committed felony, is a misdemeanor, but no felony: but if the party be arrested, and then rescued, if the arrest were for felony, the rescuer is a felon; if for treason, a traitor; if for trespass, fineable. Hale's Sum. 116; 2 Haw. c. 21, s. 7; R. & R. C. C. 458. Hindrance of arrest.

As to rescuing a distress, see Distress, Vol. I.; what amounts to, see Knowles v. Blake, 3 M. & P. 214; 5 Bing. 499, S. C.

Although a prison-breaker may be arraigned for that offence, before he be arraigned for the crime for which he was imprisoned, yet he who rescues one imprisoned for felony, cannot, according to the better opinion, be arraigned for such offence, as for a felony, till the principal offender be attainted; but he may be immediately proceeded against for a misprision, if the king pleases. 2 Haw. c. 21, s. 7. When it shall be tried.

Therefore, if the principal die before the attainder, he shall be fined and imprisoned. Hale's Sum. 116.

Also, if the principal be found not guilty, or guilty of a crime not capital, the rescuer ought to be discharged of felony: but he may be fined for the misdemeanor. 1 Hale, 598, 599. See Accessary, Vol. I.

An indictment of rescous must set forth the nature and cause of the imprisonment, and the special circumstances of the fact in question. 2 Haw. c. 21, s. 5. Indictment for.

Upon an indictment at Exeter Summer Assizes, 1795, for an assault and rescue, it appeared that the sheriff's officers having apprehended a man by virtue of a writ against him, a mob collected, and endeavoured by violence to rescue the prisoner. In the course of the scuffle, which was at ten o'clock at night, one of the bailiffs, having been violently assaulted, struck one of the assailants, a woman, and, as it was thought for some time, had killed her; whereupon, and before her recovery was ascertained, the constable was sent for, and charged with the custody of the bailiff who had struck the woman. The bailiffs, on the other hand, gave the constable notice of their authority, and represented the violence which had been previously offered to them; notwithstanding which, he proceeded to take them into custody upon the charge of murder, and at first offered to take care also of their prisoner, who, however, was soon rescued by the surrounding mob: and the woman having recovered, the bailiffs were released by the constable the next morning. Heath, J., was clearly of opinion that the constable and his assistant were guilty of the assault and rescue, and directed the jury accordingly; who, however, acquitted the defendants. 1 East's P. C. 305.

Assaults on peace officers, or to prevent the arrest of offenders, punishable with hard labour.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25, it is enacted, "That where any person shall be charged with and convicted of any of the following offences as misdemeanors; that is to say, of any assault with intent to commit felony, of any assault upon any peace-officer, or revenue-officer, in the due execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in and for such officer; of any assault upon any person with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of the party so assaulting, or of any other person, for any offence for which he or they may be liable by law to be apprehended or detained; or of any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages; in any such case the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years, and may also (if it shall so think fit) fine the offender, and require him to find sureties for keeping the peace."

I. What is a Riot, Rout, or Unlawful Assembly.

WHEN three persons or more shall assemble themselves together, with an intent mutually to assist one another against any who shall oppose them in the execution of some enterprise of a private nature, with force or violence, against the peace, or to the manifest terror of the people, whether the act intended were of itself lawful or unlawful; and if they only meet to such a purpose or intent, although they shall after depart of their own accord, without doing any thing, this is an unlawful assembly.

What is an unlawful assembly.

If after their first meeting they shall move forward towards the execution of any such act, whether they put their intended purpose in execution or not, this, according to the general opinion, is a rout.

What a rout.

And if they execute such a thing indeed, then it is a riot. (a) 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 1; Dalt. c. 136, p. 310, 311.

What a riot.

Three Persons or more—And, therefore, if the jury do acquit all but two, and find them guilty, the verdict is void, unless they be indicted together with other rioters unknown, because it finds them guilty of an offence whereof it is impossible that they should be guilty; for there can be no riot where there are no more persons than two. 2 Haw. c. 47, s. 8.

How many to constitute.

(a) See form, No. 2, post. p. 301.

RIOT, ROUT,
&c.
Who.

R. v. Scott and Hans, 3 Burr. 1262. Six persons were indicted; whereof two died before trial, two were acquitted, and two convicted. It was moved in arrest of judgment, for that two only could not be found guilty of a riot, unless they were indicted together with other persons unknown; which was not the case here; for it doth not appear that any others were guilty besides these two; here is no finding as to the two dead persons.—By Lord Mansfield. Six were indicted. Two of them are acquitted. Two are dead untried. The jury have found the other two guilty of a riot; consequently, it must have been with one or both of those who have not been tried; as it could not otherwise have been a riot.

Note.—In 1 Haw. p. 156, 157, 158, (folio edition,) the words more than three persons are three times over inserted instead of three persons or more; which is only remarked as an instance, that, in a variety of matter, it is impossible for the mind of man to be always equally attentive.

Women.
Infants.

Women are punishable as rioters; but infants, under the age of discretion, are not persons within the aforesaid description, punishable as rioters. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 14.

The nature of the assembly.

Assemble Themselves together—It seems agreed, that if a number of persons, being met together at a fair, or market, or church aisle, or on any other lawful and innocent occasion, happen, on a sudden quarrel, to fall together by the ears, they are not guilty of a riot, but of a sudden affray only, of which none are guilty but those who actually engage in it; because the design of their meeting was innocent and lawful, and the subsequent breach of the peace happened unexpectedly, without any previous intention concerning it. Yet it is said, that if persons, innocently assembled together, do afterwards, upon a dispute happening to arise among them, form themselves into parties, with promises of mutual assistance, and then make an affray, they are guilty of a riot; because, upon their confederating together with an intention to break the peace, they may as properly be said to be assembled together for that purpose from the time of such confederacy, as if their first coming together had been on such a design. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 3.

An assembly of a man's friends for the defence of his person against those who threaten to beat him, if he go to such a market, &c. is unlawful; for he who is in fear of such insults must provide for his safety by demanding the surety of the peace against the persons by whom he is threatened, and not make use of such violent methods, which cannot but be attended with the danger of raising tumults and disorders, to the disturbance of the public peace. But an assembly of a man's friends at his own house, for the defence of the possession of it against such as threaten to make an unlawful entry, or for the defence of his person against such as threaten to beat him in his house, is indulged by law; for a man's house is looked upon as his castle. He is not, however, to arm himself and assemble his friends in defence of his close. Per Heath, J., R. v. the Bishop of Bangor, Shrewsbury Sum. Ass. 1796. See 1 Russ. 362, and see the authorities there cited.

And the law is, that if any person encourages, or promotes, or takes part in riots, whether by words, signs, or gestures, or by wearing the badge or ensign of the rioters, he is himself to be considered a rioter; for in this case all are principals. Per Mansfield, C. J., in Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Campb. 370.

In the Execution of some Enterprise of a Private Nature—It also seems agreed that the injury or grievance complained of and intended to be revenged or remedied by such an assembly must relate to some private quarrel only; as the inclosing of lands, in which the inhabitants of a town claim a right of common, or gaining the possession of tenements, the title whereof is in dispute, or such like matters relating to the interest or disputes of particular persons, and no way concerning the public; for, wherever the intention of such an assembly is to redress public grievances, as to pull down inclosures in general, or reform religion, and the like, it is high treason. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 6.

Violence necessary.

Against the Peace, or to the Terror of the People—It seems to be clearly agreed that in every riot there must be some such circumstances, either of actual force or violence, or at least of an apparent tendency thereto, as are naturally apt to strike a terror into the people, as the show of armour, threatening speeches, or turbulent gestures; for every such offence must be laid to be done in terrorem populi. And from hence it clearly follows that assemblies at wakes, or other festival times, or meetings for exercise of common sports or diversions, as bull-baiting, wrestling, and such like, are not riotous. (b) 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 5; see 1 M. & Ry. Mag. C. 106, note. As to prize-fighting, see R. v. Billingham and others, 4 D. & R. M. C. 127; ante, Fighting, Vol. II.

But it is not necessary, in order to constitute this crime, that personal violence should have been committed. Per Mansfield, C. J., in Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Campb. 369.

From the same ground also it seems to follow that it is possible for three persons or more to assemble together with an intention to execute a wrongful act, and also actually to perform their intended enterprise, without being rioters: as if a man assemble a meet company, to carry away a piece of timber or other thing, whereto he pretends a right, that cannot be carried without a great number, if the number be not more than are needful for such purpose, although another man hath better right to the thing so carried away, and that this act be wrong and unlawful, yet it is of itself no riot, except there be withal threatening words used, or other disturbance of the peace. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 5; Lamb. 178; Dalt. c. 137.

Much more may any person, in a peaceable manner, assemble a meet company to do any lawful thing, or to remove or cast down any common nuisance: thus, every private man, to whose house or land any nuisance shall be erected, made, or done, may in peaceable manner assemble a meet company, with necessary tools, and may remove, pull, or cast down such nuisance, and that before any prejudice received thereby; and for that purpose, if need be, may also enter into another man's ground. Thus, a man erected a wear across a common river, where people have a common passage with their boats, and divers did assemble with spades, crows of iron, and other things necessary to remove the said wear, and make a trench in his land, that did erect the wear, to turn the water, so as they might the better take up the said wear, and they did remove the same nuisance; this was holden neither any forcible entry, nor yet any riot. Dalt. c. 137.

But in the cases aforesaid, if in removing any such nuisance the persons so assembled shall use any threatening words, (as to say, they will do it though they die for it, or such like words,) or shall use any other behaviour, in apparent disturbance of the peace, then it seemeth to be a riot; and therefore, where there is cause to remove any such nuisance, or to do any like act, it is the safest not to assemble any multitude of people, but only to send one or two persons, or if a greater number, yet no more than are needful, and only with meet tools, to remove, pull, or cast down the same, and that such persons tend their business only, without disturbance of the peace, or threatening speeches. Dalt. c. 137.

Whether the Act intended were of itself lawful or unlawful—It hath been generally holden that it is no way material, whether the act intended to be done by such an assembly be of itself lawful or unlawful: from whence it follows, that if three or more persons assist a man to make a forcible entry into lands, to which one of them has a good right of entry, or if the like number in a violent and tumultuous manner join together in removing a nuisance, or other thing which may lawfully be done in a peaceable manner, they are as properly rioters as if the act intended to be done by them were never so unlawful. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 7; Dalt. c. 137.

Legality of intended act.

(b) But see in 2 Chit. Crim. L. 494, an indictment said to have been drawn in the year 1797 by a very eminent pleader, for the purpose of suppressing an ancient custom of kicking about foot-balls on a Shrove Tuesday, at Kingston-upon-Thames.

III. Injuries by Rioters, Punishment, &c.

Injuries by rioters.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 8, it is enacted, "that if any persons, riotously and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace, shall unlawfully and with force demolish, pull down, or destroy, or begin to demolish, pull down, or destroy, any church or chapel, or any chapel for the religious worship of persons dissenting from the united Church of England and Ireland, duly registered or recorded, or any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hop-oast, barn, or granary, or any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, or any machinery, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture, or in any branch thereof, or any steam-engine, or other engine, for sinking, draining, or working any mine, or any staith, building, or erection, used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggon-way, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

Repeal of former acts.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the 9 Geo. III. c. 29, 52 Geo. III. c. 130, and 56 Geo. III. c. 125, and so much of the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 5, as relates to any rioters demolishing or pulling down, or beginning to demolish or pull down, any of the buildings therein mentioned.

Liability of hundred.

As to remedies against the hundred, in case of damage done by rioters, see the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31; Hundred, Vol. III.

It is not a "beginning to demolish" a house within the meaning of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 8, unless the jury be satisfied that the ultimate object of the rioters was to demolish the house; and that, if they had carried their intention into full effect, they would, in point of fact, have demolished it. R. v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 237.

IV. How Riots may be restrained by a Private Person.

How restrained by a private person.

By the common law, any private person may lawfully endeavour to suppress a riot, by staying those whom he shall see engaged therein from executing their purpose, and also by stopping others whom he shall see coming to join them. However, it seems extremely hazardous for private persons to proceed to these extremities; and such violent methods seem only proper against such riots as savour of rebellion. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 11.

In the riots of 1780, however, this matter was much misunderstood, and a general persuasion prevailed that no indifferent person could interpose without the authority of a magistrate; in consequence of which much mischief was done, which might otherwise have been prevented. So, there is a great difference between the right of a private person in cases of intended felony and of breach of the peace: it is lawful for a private person to do any thing to prevent the perpetration of a felony. Vide per Heath, J., 2 B. & P. 264; ante, Arrest, Vol. I. p. 257.

V. How Restrained by a Constable or other Peace Officer.

By the common law, the sheriff, constable, and other peace-officers, may and ought to do all that in them lies, towards the suppressing of a riot, and may command all other persons to assist therein. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 11.

The 1 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 1, after reciting that "whereas doubts having arisen whether any person or persons can be compelled to act as special constables, except in any actual tumult, riot, or felony: and whereas it is expedient that justices of the peace should have the power of compelling certain persons to act as special constables, not only in case of actual tumult, riot, or felony, but also on the reasonable apprehension thereof, for the prevention of the same," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, in all cases where it shall be made to appear to any two or more justices of the peace, acting for any county, city, division, riding, or place, by the information on oath of five respectable householders of such county, city, division, riding, or place, that any tumult, riot, or felony has taken place, or is likely to take place, and may reasonably be apprehended, such justices may and are hereby authorized to call upon, nominate, and appoint, by precept in writing under their hands, any householders or other persons (not legally exempt from serving the office of constable), residing within their respective divisions, or the neighbourhood thereof, to act as special constables, for such time and in such manner as to the said justices shall seem fit and necessary for the preservation of the public peace, and for the prevention or suppression of any tumult, riot, or felony; and the said justices are hereby empowered to administer to such person so appointed the usual oaths administered by law to all special constables."

Sect. 2. "That in case any person (not legally exempted as aforesaid), so called upon, nominated, and appointed by such justices as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to take upon themselves the office, and to act as such special constable, such person so neglecting or refusing shall be liable to such and the same fines, penalties, and punishments, as persons refusing to take upon themselves the office of constable are now by law subject to."

who are compelled to act, under the same penalties for refusal as constables.

Sect. 3. "That it shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace, assembled at the general or quarter sessions holden for any county, city, division, riding, or place, where special constables shall have been called out as aforesaid, to order and direct such reasonable allowances for trouble and expenses, to be made to any person or persons so called out by authority of this act, as to the said justices shall seem fit, which allowance the said justices may order the treasurer of such county, city, division, riding, or place, to pay to such persons as the said justices shall direct; and such treasurer shall, and he is hereby authorized and required, forthwith to pay the sum or sums of money so ordered and directed to be paid, to the person empowered to receive the same, and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

Justices at sessions to give allowance to said special constables.

Sect. 4. "That the court before which any indictments may be tried under the provisions of this act, shall have the power to award reasonable costs of trial to such persons as may prefer the said indictments, and may order the treasurer of such county, city, division, riding, or place, wherein such indictment shall be tried, to pay the sum or sums of money so ordered, to such persons as the said court shall direct; and such treasurer shall, and he is hereby authorized and required forthwith to pay the sum or sums of money, so ordered and directed to be paid, to the persons empowered to receive the same; and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

Courts may allow costs.

Sect. 5, makes it a public act.

VI. How Restrained by one Justice.

By the common law, a justice of the peace has power to restrain rioters; and see 4 D. & R. M. C. 127.

By the 34 Edw. III. c. 1, the justices of the peace shall have power to restrain rioters, and to arrest and chastise them according to their offence; and cause them to be imprisoned and duly punished according to the law and custom of the realm, and according to that which to them shall seem best to do, by their discretions and good advisement.

HOW RE-STRAINED BY

And this statute hath been liberally construed for the advancement of justice; for it hath been resolved, that if a justice find persons riotously assembled, he alone, without staying for his companions, hath not only power to arrest the offenders and bind them to their good behaviour, or imprison them if they do not offer good bail; but that he may also authorize others to arrest them by a bare verbal command, without other warrant; and that by force thereof, the person so commanded may pursue and arrest the offenders in his absence as well as presence. Also it is said that, after a riot is over, any one justice may send his warrant to arrest any person who was concerned in it, and also that he may send him to gaol till he shall find sureties for his good behaviour. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 16.

But it seems to be agreed that no one justice hath any power by force of this statute either to record a riot upon his own view, or to take an inquisition thereof after it is over. Also, if one justice, proceeding upon this statute, shall arrest an innocent person as a rioter, it seemeth that he is liable to an action of trespass, and that the party arrested may justify the rescuing himself, because no single justice is by this statute made a judge of the said offence. But if a riot shall be committed by persons armed in an unusual manner, contrary to the statute of Northampton, 2 Edw. III. c. 3, and any one justice acting ex-officio, in pursuance of the statute, seize the armour, and imprison the offender, and make a record of the whole matter, such a record cannot be traversed, because it is made by one acting in a judicial capacity. And for the same reason, if a justice proceeding on the statute of the 15 Rich. II., against forcible entries and detainers, shall upon his own view record a riot, which shall be committed in the making of any such forcible entry or detainer, a riot so recorded cannot be traversed. Also, if a justice acting as a judge by any statute whatsoever empowering him so to do, make a record upon his view of a riot committed in his presence, such record shall not be traversed; for the law gives such uncontrollable credit to all matters of record made by any judge of record as such, that it will never admit of an averment against the truth thereof. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 17.

1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 5.

But if the rioters are above the number of twelve, the offence is greatly enhanced, and the power of one justice very much enlarged, by the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 5, commonly called the Riot Act, and intitled, "An Act for Preventing Tumults and Riotous Assemblies, and for the more speedy and effectual Punishing the Rioters." Sect. 1, after reciting that, "whereas of late many rebellious riots and tumults have been in divers parts of this kingdom, to the disturbance of the public peace, and the endangering of his majesty's person and government, and the same are yet continued and fomented by persons disaffected to his majesty, presuming so to do, for that the punishments provided by the laws now in being are not adequate to such heinous offences; and by such rioters his majesty and his administration have been most maliciously and falsely traduced, with an intent to raise divisions, and to alienate the affections of the people from his majesty: therefore, for the preventing and suppressing of such riots and tumults, and for the more speedy and effectual punishing the offenders therein:" enacts, "that if any persons, to the number of twelve or more, being unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled together, to the disturbance of the public peace, at any time after the last day of July, in the year of our Lord 1715, and being required or commanded by any one or more justice or justices of the peace, or by the sheriff of the county, or his under-sheriff, or by the mayor, bailiff or bailiffs, or other head officer, or justice of the peace of any city or town corporate, where such assembly shall be, by proclamation to be made in the king's name, in the form hereinafter directed, to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, shall, to the number of twelve or more (notwithstanding such proclamation made), unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously remain or continue together by the space of one hour after such command or request made by proclamation, that then such continuing together to the shall be adjudged felons without benefit of clergy.

Sect. 2. "That the order and form of the proclamation that shall be made by the authority of this act, shall be as hereafter followeth, (that is to say) the justice of the peace, or other person authorized by this act to make the said proclamation shall, among the said rioters, or as near to them as he can safely come, with a loud voice command, or cause to be commanded, silence to be, while proclamation is making, and after that, shall openly and with loud voice make or cause to be made proclamation in these words, or like in effect:—

How the proclamation shall be made.

"Our sovereign lord the king chargeth and commandeth all persons, being assembled, immediately to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, upon the pains contained in the act made in the first year of King George, for preventing tumults and riotous assemblies.

The proclamation.

"God save the King."

"And every such justice and justices of the peace, sheriff, under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, and other head-officer aforesaid, within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, are hereby authorized, empowered and required, on notice or knowledge of any such unlawful, riotous, and tumultuous assembly, to resort to the place where such unlawful, riotous, and tumultuous assemblies shall be, of persons to the number of twelve or more, and there to make or cause to be made proclamation in manner aforesaid."

Justices, &c., to resort to the place.

Sect. 3. "That if such persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, or twelve or more of them, after proclamation made in manner aforesaid, shall continue together and not disperse themselves within one hour, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for every justice of the peace, sheriff, or under-sheriff of the county where such assembly shall be, and also to and for every high or petty constable, and other peace-officer within such county, and also to and for every mayor, justice of the peace, sheriff, bailiff, and other head-officer, high or petty constable, and other peace-officer of any city or town corporate where such assembly shall be, and to and for such other person and persons as shall be commanded to be assisting unto any such justice of the peace, sheriff, or under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, or other head-officer aforesaid (who are hereby authorized and empowered to command all his majesty's subjects of age and ability to be assisting to them therein) to seize and apprehend, and they are hereby required to seize and apprehend, such persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously continuing together after proclamation made, as aforesaid, and forthwith to carry the persons so apprehended before one or more of his majesty's justices of the peace of the county or place where such persons shall be so apprehended, in order to their being proceeded against for such their offences according to law; and that if the persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, or any of them, shall happen to be killed, maimed, or hurt, in the dispersing, seizing, or apprehending, or endeavouring to disperse, seize, or apprehend them, by reason of their resisting the persons so dispersing, seizing, or apprehending, or endeavouring to disperse, seize, or apprehend them, that then every such justice of the peace, sheriff, under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, head-officer, high or petty constable, or other peace-officer, and all and singular persons, being aiding and assisting to them, or any of them, shall be free, discharged, and indemnified, as well against the king's majesty, his heirs, and successors, as against all and every other person and persons, of, for, or concerning the killing, maiming, or hurting of any such person or persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, that shall happen to be so killed, maimed, or hurt, as aforesaid."

Persons so assembled, and not dispersing within an hour, to be seized.

And if they make resistance, the persons killing them, &c., to be indemnified.

Sect. 5. "That if any person or persons do, or shall, with force and arms, wilfully and knowingly oppose, obstruct, or in any manner wilfully and knowingly lett, hinder, or hurt, any person or persons that shall begin to proclaim, or go to proclaim, according to the proclamation hereby directed to be made, whereby such proclamation shall not be made, that then every such opposing,

Sect. 8. "That no person or persons shall be prosecuted by virtue of this act, for any offence or offences committed contrary to the same, unless such prosecution be commenced within twelve months after the offence committed."

Sect. 10. "That this act shall extend to all places for religious worship, in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, which are tolerated by law, and where his Majesty King George, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their issue, are prayed for in express words."

VII. How Restrained by Two Justices.

13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

By the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1, if any riot, assembly, or rout of people, against the law be made, the justices, three or two of them at the least, and the sheriff, or under sheriff, shall come with the power of the county, if need be.

2 Hen. 5, c. 8.

And, by the 2 Hen. V. c. 8, s. 2, the king's liege people, being sufficient to travel, shall be assistants to them, upon reasonable warning, to ride with them in aid to resist such riots, routs, and assemblies, on pain of imprisonment, and to make fine and ransom to the king.

If any Riot, Assembly, or Rout of People, against the Law, be made—It is said that the justices are not only empowered hereby to raise the power of the county to assist them in suppressing a riot, which shall happen within their own view or hearing, but also that they may safely do it, upon a credible information given them of a notorious riot happening at a distance, whether there were any such riot in truth or not; for it may be dangerous for them to stay till they can get certain information of the fact: but they seem to be punishable for alarming the country in this manner, without such probable ground for their proceeding as would induce a reasonable man to think it necessary and convenient. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 22.

Assembly—It seems clear from hence, that if the justices, in going towards the place where they have heard that there is a riot, shall meet persons coming from thence riotously arrayed, they may arrest them for being assembled together in such an unlawful manner, and also make a record thereof; for the statute extends to all other unlawful assemblies whatsoever, as well as to riots. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 22.

The King's liege People—Except women, clergymen, persons decrepit, and infants under the age of fifteen.

To Resist such Riots—And also to arrest the rioters, and conduct them to prison.

And shall Arrest them—13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1.

And, if they shall escape, they may take them on a fresh pursuit; but they cannot at another time award any process against them on the record, but ought to send the record into the King's Bench, that process may issue thereon from thence: yet there seems to be no doubt but that they may arrest them for their trespass on the aforesaid statute (34 Edw. III.), in order to compel them to find sureties for their good behaviour. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 24.

And, by the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1, the same justices and sheriff, or under-sheriff, shall have power to record (c) that which they shall find so done in their presence against the law; by which record the offenders shall be convict in the same manner and form as is contained in the statute of forcible entries. (d) 13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

Shall have Power to Record—And this they may do, whether the offenders be in custody at the same time, or have escaped. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 24.

Shall be Convict—And it seemeth to be certain that the record of a riot, expressly mentioned to have happened within the view of the justices by whom it is recorded, is a conviction of so great authority, that it can no way be traversed, however little ground of truth there might be to affirm that any riot at all was committed, or however innocent the parties may be of the fact recorded against them. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 25.

However, it seemeth clear that if, in such a record of a riot, it be contained that the party was guilty therein of a felony, or maim, or rescous, the party shall be concluded thereby as to the riot only, and not as to any of the other matters; because the justices have by this statute a judicial authority over no other offences except riots, routs, and unlawful assemblies. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 26.

And, inasmuch as such a final record is a conviction of the parties, as to all such matters as are properly contained in it, it ought to be certain both as to the time and place of the offence, and the number of persons concerned therein, and the several kinds of weapons made use of by them, and all other circumstances of the fact: for, since the parties are excluded from denying the truth of such record, and have no other remedy to defend themselves against it, but only by advantage of the insufficiency of what is contained in it, they may justly demand the benefit of excepting to it, if it do not expressly show both that they are guilty within the meaning of the statute, and also how far they are guilty, and that the justices have pursued the power so given them by the said statute. From the same ground it seems also to follow, that such a record may be excepted against, if it do not appear to have been made by the sheriff or under-sheriff, in concurrence with the justices. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 26.

And this record ought to remain with one of the justices, and shall not be left amongst the records of the sessions; it being made out of sessions, and not appointed to be certified thither. Dalt. c. 82.

In the same Manner and Form as is contained in the Statute of Forcible Entries—That is, the statute of the 15 Rich. II. c. 2. And thereupon it is said that the offenders, being under the arrest of the justices, and also convicted by a record of their offence, ought immediately to be committed to gaol by the same justices, till they shall make fine and ransom to the king; which can be assessed by no other justices of the peace except those by whom the record of the offence was made. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 28.

HOW RE-STRAINED BY TWO JUSTICES.

And this fine, Mr. Dalton (c. 82) says, the justices shall cause to be estreated into the Exchequer, that so it may be levied to the king's use; and then they are to deliver the offenders again.

But Mr. Hawkins says, that it hath been questioned whether the justices can safely dismiss the offenders upon their paying such a fine as shall be imposed upon them, without some judgment for their imprisonment as well as fine: because it is enacted by the 2 Hen. VIII. c. 8, that such rioters attainted of great and heinous riots shall have one whole year's imprisonment at the least, without being let out of prison by bail or mainprize; and that the rioters attainted of petty riots shall have imprisonment as best shall seem to the king or to his council. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 35.

13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

And, by the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1, if the offenders be departed before the coming of the said justices and sheriff, or under-sheriff, the same justices, three or two of them, shall diligently inquire (e) within a month after such riot, assembly, or rout of people so made, and thereof shall hear and determine according to the law of the land.

The same Justices—It is generally said that any justices of the county may take such an inquiry, whether they dwell near the place where the riot happened, or at a distance, or whether they went to view the riot or not: for the statute ought to be construed as largely as the words will bear in favour of the justices' power in the suppressing of such riots; and therefore those words in the statute, "that the same justices shall inquire," ought to be thus expounded: that the same justices who were before empowered to raise the posse shall inquire, and that is, any justices in the county. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 32.

19 Hen. 7, c. 13.

Shall diligently Inquire—This is, by a jury; in order to which it is enacted by the 19 Hen. VII. c. 13, that the sheriff, on their precept directed to him, shall, on pain of 20*l.*, return twenty-four persons, whereof every of them shall have lands and tenements within the shire to the yearly value of 20*s.* of charter-land or freehold, or 26*s.* 8*d.* of copyhold, or of both, over and above all charges; and he shall return upon every juror in issues, at the first, 20*s.*, and at the second, 40*s.*

Note.—Charter-land had its name from a particular form in the charter or deed, which, ever since the reign of Henry VIII., hath been disused. 1 Inst. 6.

Within a Month—That is, if they do not make inquiry within a month, they are punishable for the neglect. Yet they may inquire after the month; for the lapse of a month doth not determine their authority, but only subjects them to a penalty. 2 Salk. 593.

Shall Hear and Determine according to the Law of the Land—And therefore they may award process under their own teste against those who shall be indicted before them of any of the offences above mentioned, according to the form of this statute; and also may award the like process for the trial of a traverse of such an inquisition; and do all other things in relation thereunto, which are of course incident to all courts of record. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 34.

And the riot being so found by inquisition, the justices must make a record thereof in writing of such their inquiry or presentment found before them; which record also is to remain with one of the justices. Dalt. c. 82.

13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

And, by the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 2, if the truth cannot be found in the manner as is aforesaid, then, within a month then next following, the justices, three or two of them, and the sheriff or under-sheriff, shall certify before the king and his council all the deed and circumstances thereof, which certificate shall be of the like force as the presentment of twelve men; upon which certificate the offender shall be put to answer, and shall be punished according to the discretion of the king and his council.

Sect. 3. And, if they do traverse the matter so certified, the certificate and traverse shall be sent into the King's Bench to be tried.

And, by the 19 Hen. VII. c. 13, if the offence be not found, by reason of any maintenance or embracery of the jurors, then the same justices and sheriff, or under-sheriff, shall, in the same certificate, certify the names of the maintainers and embracers, with their misdemeanors. 19 Hen. 7, c. 13.

Shall Certify—And it seemeth certain that such certificate, being in nature of an indictment at the common law, ought to comprehend the certainty of time, place, and persons, and other material circumstances, both of the riot and maintenance. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 13.

Before the King and his Council—It seems clear, by the council being here distinguished both from the Chancery and King's Bench, that the certificate ought to be made to the privy council board, and not to either of those courts, which, in some statutes relating to judicial proceedings, are taken for the king's council. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 41.

And, by the 2 Hen. V. c. 8, the said justices and other officers shall execute their offices aforesaid at the king's costs, in going and continuing in doing their said offices, by payment thereof to be made by the sheriff, by indentures betwixt the said sheriff and justices, and other officers aforesaid, whereof the sheriff, upon his account in the Exchequer, shall have due allowance. 2 Hen. 5, c. 8.

In order to the defraying of which, the said statute directs the fines of the offenders to be enlarged, and thereout the sheriff may pay the charges of the said justices, and of the jury, that is, for their diet, and the sheriff's fees, and the like. Dalt. c. 82.

Sect. 4. And the justices dwelling nighest in the county where such riot, assembly, or rout shall be, together with the sheriff or under-sheriff, shall do execution of the said statute of the 13 Hen. IV., every one upon pain of 100*l.* to the king.

The Justices Dwelling Nighest—Although these only are liable to this penalty, yet if any others, on notice, shall neglect to supply their default, they are finable at discretion. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 48.

But if any justices, who do not dwell nearest to the place, do actually execute the statute, they excuse all the rest. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 46.

Dwelling Nighest in the County—Therefore, if they dwell nighest, but in another county, they are not in danger of this penalty. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 45.

Shall do Execution of the said Statute—That is, in the whole, and not in part only; as by recording a riot, and committing the parties. 1 Haw. c. 65, s. 50.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 20, and 1 Wil. 4, c. 64, two justices may order the closing of doors of public-houses and beer-houses during riots. See Albhouse, Vol. I. p. 61, 82. Albhouses.

VIII. How by Process out of Chancery.

By the 2 Hen. V. c. 8, if default be found in the two justices, sheriff, or under-sheriff, then, at the instance of the party grieved, a commission shall be issued under the great seal, to inquire as well of the truth of the case for the complainant, as of such default. 2 Hen. 5, c. 8.

And by the 2 Hen. V. c. 9, and 8 Hen. VI. c. 14, rioters shall be taken by writ and proclamation out of chancery, on suggestion of two justices and the sheriff, of the common fame of such riot. 2 Hen. 5, c. 9.
8 Hen. 6, c. 14.

IX. Seditious Meetings and Unlawful Assemblies.

And, for the more effectually preventing such injuries, it is enacted, "that no ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or craft whatsoever, shall unlade on any part of the shore (except on some wharf properly constructed for the purpose) any ballast, stone, slate, gravel, earth, rubbish, wreck, or filth, except at the time of high water, or within two hours before or two hours after high water; and that, for every such purpose, every such ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or craft, shall approach the shore, as far as the tide and the draught of water of such ship, vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or craft will admit, and shall, under no circumstances and in no situation, deposit any of the said matters below low-water mark at neap tides; and that every vessel drawing above eleven feet of water at the stern shall unlade all such materials into some lighter, barge, or boat, as hereinbefore directed, in order that the same may be conveyed as near the shore as possible at the time of high water, as hereinbefore directed."

I. The Offence of.

Two kinds of robbery.

THERE are two kinds of robbery; from the person and from the house: it is the former of these that is treated of under this title; the latter, viz. robbery from the house, belongeth to the titles Larceny and Burglary.

Robbery is a felonious taking of money or goods, to any value, from the person of another, or in his presence, against his will, by violence, or putting him in fear. 2 East's P. C. 707; 4 Bla. Com. 243; 3 Inst. 68.

Felonious.

Felonious—For to make it robbery there must be a felonious intention; and so it ought to be laid in the indictment. 1 Hale, 532; and see fully, as to the felonious intent, Larceny, Vol. III.

A. had set wires, in which game was caught; B., a gamekeeper, found them, and took the game and wires for the use of the lord of the manor. A. demanded them, with menaces, and B. gave them up. The jury found that A. acted under a bonâ fide impression that the game and wires were his property. Held, no robbery. R. v. Hall, 3 C. & P. 409.

Taking.

Taking—The taking must be against the will of the owner, and, to constitute the crime of robbery, the property must be taken from the person either by violence or by putting him in fear; either of these circumstances is sufficient. But no sudden taking of a thing unawares from the person, as by snatching any thing from the head or hand, is sufficient, unless some injury be done to the person, or unless there be some previous struggle for the possession of the thing taken.

If a robber cut a man's girdle in order to get his purse, and the purse thereby fall to the ground, and the robber run off, or be apprehended before he can take it up, this would not be robbery, because the purse was never in the possession of the robber. 1 Hale, 583; 1 Leach, 228. See, further, as to what is a taking, Larceny, Vol. III.

The money or goods.

Money or Goods—At common law, the goods taken must be such as would constitute the crime of larceny; see Larceny, Vol. III.; but the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6, post, 321, extends the taking to any "chattel, money, or valuable security."

The value of the goods is immaterial: 1 Hale, 532. But they must be of some value to the party robbed; and, therefore, where the defendant compelled the prosecutor, by threats, to give her his promissory note for a sum of money, it was holden by the judges not to be robbery, because the note was of no value to the prosecutor. R. v. Phipoe, 2 Leach, 673; see Marran, Vol. III.

OFFENCE OF.

From the Person of Another, or in his Presence].—The goods must be proved to have been taken, either from the person of another or in his presence. R. v. Grey, 2 East's P. C. 708; and see 2 Stra. 1015. If a thief put a man in fear, and then in his presence drive away his cattle, it is robbery. 1 Hale, 533.

From the person of another.

So, if a man, being assaulted by a robber, throw his purse into a bush; or, flying from a robber, let fall his hat; and the robber, in his presence, take up the purse or hat and carry it away, this would be robbery. 1 Hale, 533.

Against his Will].—The goods must be taken against the will of the party robbed. Therefore, where the party robbed concerted and connived at the robbery, and got one of his confederates to procure two strangers to commit it, for the purpose of getting a reward upon the apprehension and conviction of the strangers, the judges held that it was not a robbery, because the property was not taken against the party's will. R. v. M'Danielle et al., Fost. 121. (a)

Against his will.

By Violence].—In a case where a lady was stepping into her carriage, the prisoner snatched at her diamond ear-ring, and separated it from her ear by tearing the ear entirely through, but there was no proof of the ear-ring ever having been seen in his hand, and, upon the lady's arrival at home, it was found amongst the curls of her hair; the judges, on a case reserved, were all of opinion, that there was a sufficient taking from the person to constitute robbery. They thought that it was sufficient, as the ear-ring had been in the possession of the prisoner, separate from the lady's person, though but for a moment, and though he could not retain it, but probably lost it again the same instant. Lapier's case, O. B., May, 1784, 1 Leach, 320.

By violence.

Snatching an article from a man will constitute robbery, if it be so attached

(a) Against the will.] In the case of M'Daniel, Berry, Eagan, and Salmon, who were indicted as accessories before the fact to a robbery committed by Kelly and Ellis on the person of the said Salmon, it appeared that all the prisoners, and one Thomas Blee, in order to procure themselves the rewards given by act of Parliament for apprehending robbers, met at the Bell Inn, in Holborn, and agreed that Blee should procure two persons to commit a robbery on the prisoner Salmon; and that for that purpose they contrived that Blee should inform the persons so to be procured that he would assist them in stealing some linen in Deptford; that in pursuance of this agreement, and with the privity of all the prisoners, Blee procured Ellis and Kelly to go with him to Deptford in order to steal linen, but did not at any time before the robbery inform them of the intended robbery; that they went with Blee to Deptford, and the prisoner Salmon being likewise waiting there, in pursuance of the agreement, they robbed him of the money and goods mentioned in the indictment. This case was argued before all the judges, who were unanimously of opinion that, supposing a robbery to have been committed, all the prisoners were guilty as accessories before, except Salmon, who could not be accessory to the robbing of himself. But, inasmuch as the goods were taken from Salmon in pursuance of the agreement before mentioned, they were of opinion that, in legal construction, he was not robbed at all, since it is of the essence of robbery, that the goods be taken against the will of the owner; although the circumstance of putting in fear is perhaps not necessary to be inserted in the indictment; at least it need not to be strictly proved: for, if a man be knocked down without any previous warning, and thereby rendered insensible, or if he manfully resist and be overpowered without being under any fear at all, it is not the less robbery upon that account. And the prisoners were discharged of the indictment. But afterwards an indictment was found against them, and prosecuted at the expense of the crown, on the representation of the judges, for a conspiracy; in which the principal facts found by the special verdict in the robbery bill were charged. On this indictment they were all convicted; and the court gave judgment, that they be all set in and upon the pillory twice; that they stand committed for seven years, and until they find sureties for their good behaviour for three years afterwards. One of them (Eagan) lost his life in the pillory, through the resentment of the populace, and on that account the others did not stand a second time. But they were all in Newgate very closely confined, in pursuance of their sentence. Fost. 121; 19 How. St. Tr. 814.

OFFENCE OF.

to his person or clothes as to afford resistance. R. v. Mason, R. & R. C. C. 419; 2 R. C. & M. 68. The prosecutor's watch was fastened to a steel chain, which went round his neck; the seal and chain hung from his fob. The prisoner laid hold of the seal and chain, and pulled the watch from the fob, but the steel chain still secured it: upon which the prisoner, by two jerks, broke the steel chain and made off with the watch. Case saved for the opinion of the judges upon the question, whether this was a robbery?—The judges were unanimous that it was, as the prisoner did not get the watch at once, but had to overcome the resistance made by the steel chain, and used actual force.

To constitute the crime of highway robbery, the force used must be force with intent to overpower the party and prevent his resistance, and if the force used is not with that intent, but only to get possession of the property, it is not highway robbery. R. v. Gnosil, 1 C. & P. 304.

or by putting him
in fear.

Or by putting him in Fear—Robbery may also be constituted by putting in fear as well as by force; or perhaps, in strictness, it may be said that fear will supply the place of force; yet it is not necessary that actual fear should either be laid in the indictment or strictly and precisely proved, provided the property be taken with such circumstances of violence or terror, or threatening by word or gesture, as would, in common experience, induce a man to part with it from an apprehension of personal danger; for the law, in odium spoliatoris, will presume fear where there appears to be so reasonable a ground for it. But it is necessary that it be taken against the will of the party. 2 East's P. C. 711; 1 Hale, 533.

A colourable gift, which in truth was extorted by fear, amounts to a taking and trespass in law. As, if a person with a drawn sword, or other circumstances of terror, indicating a felonious intent, beg alms of another, who gives it him through mistrust and apprehension of violence, the offence is the same, notwithstanding the pretence. So it is whether there were any weapon drawn or not; or whether it were an offensive weapon; or whether the person assaulted delivered his money upon the other's command, or afterwards gave it him upon his ceasing to use force, and asking it for alms; for the owner was put in fear by the assault, and there remained a reasonable ground for its continuance. 2 East's P. C. 711; 1 Haw. c. 34, s. 6; Foster, 128.

The same rule holds, although the thing taken were not really within the original contemplation of the robber, nor the object of his pursuit at the time.

Blackham assaulted a woman with intent to commit a rape, and she without any demand from him offered him money, which the prisoner took and put into his pocket, but continued to treat her with violence, to effect his original purpose, till he was interrupted by the approach of another person. This was holden to be robbery by a considerable majority of the judges: for the woman, from violence and terror, occasioned by the prisoner's behaviour, and to redeem her chastity, offered the money, which it was clear she would not have given voluntarily; and the prisoner, by taking it, derived that advantage to himself from his felonious conduct; though his original intent was to commit a rape. R. v. Blackham, T. T. 1787; 2 East's P. C. 711.

During the riots in London, in the year 1780, a boy with a cockade in his hat knocked violently at the door of the prosecutor, Mahon, who thereupon opened it; and the boy said to him, "God bless your honour, remember the poor mob." Mahon told him to go along, on which he said, "Then I will go and fetch my captain." He went; and the mob, to the amount of 100, armed with sticks and whatever they could get, soon after came, headed by the prisoner, Thomas Taplin, on horseback, having his horse led by the same boy. On their coming up, the by-standers said, "You must give them money;" and the boy said, "Now I have brought my captain." Mahon then asked the prisoner, "How much?" who answered, "Half-a-crown, sir." On which Mahon, who had before only intended to give a shilling, gave the prisoner the half-crown. This was holden to be a robbery. Taplin's case, O. B. June, 1780, cor. Nares, J., East's P. C. 712.

Another case of the like sort occurred, upon the trial of some of the rioters in the year 1780. The indictment was for robbing the prosecutor, Daking, in his dwelling-house; into which Daking swore that the prisoner, William Brown, and another man entered; and being asked by him what they wanted, Brown having a drawn sword in his hand, said with an oath, "Put one shilling into my hat, or I have a party that can destroy your house presently:" on which the prosecutor gave him a shilling. Another witness present swore, that the prisoner also used the expression, that "if he (Daking) would keep the blood within his mouth, he must give the shilling." The offence was holden to be robbery. Brown's case, O. B. June, 1780, cor. Nares, J.; 2 East's P. C. 731.

In Simons's case, it appeared that the prisoners took a bushel and a half of wheat, worth 8s., and obliged the owner to take 13¹/₄d. for it, threatening to kill her if she refused; this was holden to be a robbery by all the judges, on a conference. R. v. Simons, Cornwall Lent Assizes, 1783, 2 East's P. C. 712.

So, in Spencer's case, the prosecutor, Anderton, having in his possession corn belonging to other persons, the prisoner came to him, together with a mob marching in military order; and one of the mob said, that if he would not sell they would take it away; the prisoner said, that they would give 30s. a load, and if he would not take that, they would take the corn away, on which the prosecutor sold that for 30s. which was worth 38s.: this was holden to be robbery; and the prisoner was convicted and executed. Spencer's case, York Summer Assizes, 1783, cor. Buller, J., 2 East's P. C. 712.

No case, however, has gone further than that of James and Ezekiel Astley, who were indicted for robbing Jonathan Grundy. It appeared that the prisoners and a person unknown went to a public-house near Birmingham, during the time of the late riots, which was three or four hundred yards from Mr. G.'s house, early in the morning, where one of them said that they were going up to Mr. G.'s house, "and if he did not turn out the whack, his house would be down by two o'clock in the morning;" on which the stranger observed that he himself would do it; that he was the head of the mob, and had three or four hundred men at command at any time; with other like discourse. They all departed towards Mr. G.'s house; but before they arrived there they saw his servant at a little distance from it, whom they accosted, James Astley telling him he was come as a friend to let Mr. G. know that this man (the stranger) was the head of the mob, and the first man who had entered all the places which were destroyed at Birmingham. They then, seeing Mr. G. come out of his house, pulled off their hats, and shouted "Church and King." Mr. G. did the same, advancing towards the prisoners in much alarm, when the stranger accosted him, saying, "I am come out of friendship to you, Mr. G., to let you know your house is marked to come down to-morrow morning at two o'clock. I am the head of the mob: they are two thousand strong in Birmingham. I must have something to make my men drink. I can bring two or three hundred in an hour's time, or keep them back." Mr. G. said, "As to something to drink, you shall have anything you have a mind for." The stranger said, "I must have money." Mr. G. pulled out half-a-crown from his pocket, and offered it to him; but the stranger refused it, and turned away with expressions of contempt. Mr. G. then asked what he wanted; the stranger replied, he must have twenty guineas; and on Mr. G. saying that he had not so much in his house, the other told him, that if he did not give him something handsome for his men to drink, his house should come down. Mr. G. said, that he might have nine or ten guineas, which the stranger asked to see: and as Mr. G. was taking his purse out of his pocket, James Astley told him he might depend upon it that the other man was at the head of the mob, and the like sort of discourse which had passed before concerning his power; particularly, that he was the first man who had entered every house that had been destroyed. Mr. G. was so struck with that expression, that he immediately took the money out of his purse (nine guineas and a half), which he gave to the stranger, who counted it, and demanded to have something to drink. They all then went into Mr. G.'s house, where they had liquor, and in going away assured him that he should be protected. Mr. G. said that he was greatly alarmed, but not for his person; that no injury was threatened to his person; that when he delivered his money his apprehension was, that if he had refused so to do, the prisoners would have gone to Birmingham, and have returned with other persons, and pulled down his house and plundered it before he could have removed his wife, who was in the house, in great agitation, as the prisoners had threatened, and in the same manner as, different houses in Birmingham had been before pulled down. It appeared that the prisoners had a small share of the money afterwards. It was objected on their behalf, that there was no evidence of robbery, inasmuch as the prosecutor did not deliver his money from any immediate fear of danger to himself or his property, but from an apprehension of future injury to his house by pulling it down. And the counsel for the crown admitting it to be a new case, Grose, J. proposed to have a special verdict found; but, on account of the prisoners' situation, it was agreed that the truth of the evidence should be left to the jury, and if they should find the prisoners guilty, the judgment should be respited, and the facts submitted to the judges for their opinion, whether the evidence amounted to robbery. The jury found the prisoners guilty; saying that they were satisfied that Mr. Grundy did not deliver his money from any apprehension of danger to his life or person, but from an apprehension that, if he refused, his house would at some future time be pulled down, as the prisoners and the stranger threatened, in the same manner as other houses in Birmingham had been before. In Michaelmas term, 1792, a majority of the judges held this to be robbery. R. v. J. Astley and E. Astley, Stafford Summer Assizes, 1792, cor. Grose, J., 2 East's P. C. 729.

But, in R. v. Wood and Knewland, who, under pretence of an auction, got a woman into a house, and compelled her, by threats of carrying her before a magistrate and to prison, for not paying for a lot pretended to have been bid for by her, to pay them 1s. through fear of prison, and for the purpose of obtaining her liberty, but without fear of any other personal violence—this was holden to be duress, and not robbery. Ashhurst, J., in delivering the opinion of the judges, observed, that there was no reason for such a degree of terror in this case as to induce the prosecutrix to part with her money: she might have known that, having done no wrong, if she had been taken to prison, the law would have taken her under its protection, and set her free; and that the law did not allow the fear of being sent to prison to be a sufficient ground of terror to constitute a robbery.

Degree of fear.

Circumstances from which the court and jury may presume such a degree of apprehension of danger as would induce the prosecutor to part with his property, are sufficient to constitute fear. Fost. 128. Therefore, if a man knock another down, and steal from him his property whilst he is insensible on the ground, this is robbery. Fost. 128. A stage-coach having frequently been robbed on a particular road, J. N. went in it for the purpose of apprehending the robber. The robber met the coach, presented a pistol, and demanded money of the passengers; J. N. accordingly delivered his money, but immediately afterwards jumped out of the coach, and, with the assistance of others, secured the robber: and this was holden to be robbery. Fost. 129. So, where the defendant tore a lady's ear through, in snatching an ear-ring from it, the judges held it to be robbery. R. v. Lapiet, 1 Leach, 320; ante, 315.

But merely snatching property from a person unawares, and running away with it, will not be robbery, R. v. Steward, 2 East's P. C. 702; R. v. Horner, id., 703; R. v. Baker, 1 Leach, 290; R. v. Macauley, id., 287; because fear cannot, in fact, be presumed in such a case.

Fear of loss of character by threats.

The cases of robbery in which the property has been obtained by means of a fear being excited of injury to the character of the party robbed, appear to be confined to insinuations against, or threats to destroy, the character of the party pillaged, by accusing him of sodomitical practices. 2 Rus. 1009. The fears unavoidably excited by these means have, on several occasions, been determined by the judges to be sufficient to constitute the crime of robbery. The bare idea of being thought addicted to so odious and detestable a crime is, of itself, sufficient to deprive the injured person of all the comforts and advantages of society; a punishment more terrible, both in apprehension and reality, than even death itself. The law, therefore, considers the fear of losing character by such an imputation as equal to the fear of losing life itself, or of sustaining personal injury. Per Ashhurst, J., in delivering the opinion of the judges in R. v. James Knewland and Nathaniel Wood, O. B. Feb. Sess. 1796; 2 Leach, 730.

In the case of Thomas Jones alias Evans, the prisoner was convicted at the O. B. June Sess., 1776, of a robbery, in extorting money by threatening to charge the prosecutor with sodomy, the prosecutor swearing that he was so alarmed by the idea, that he had neither courage nor strength to call out for assistance, and that the violence with which he had been detained in the street by the prisoner, had put him in fear for the safety of his person. R. v. Jones alias Evans, 1 Leach, 139; 2 East's P. C. 714, S. C.

Robert Harrold was afterwards convicted for a similar robbery, with the approbation of the judges. 2 East's P. C. 715.

This matter was afterwards most deliberately considered in Donolly's case, who was tried at the O. B. Feb. Sess., 1779, for a highway robbery. It appeared, that as the prosecutor (the Hon. C. Fielding), a young gentleman, was passing through Soho Square, between six and seven o'clock in the evening, he met the prisoner, whom he had never seen before. The prisoner desired that he would give him a present. The prosecutor asked, for what? The prisoner answered, "You had better comply, or I will take you before a magistrate, and accuse you of an attempt to commit an unnatural crime." The prosecutor then gave him half-a-guinea, which the prisoner said was not sufficient; but Mr. F. had no more in his pocket. Two days after, in the evening, the prosecutor again met the prisoner in Oxford Street, who made use of the same threats as before, telling the prosecutor that he knew what passed in Soho Square, and, unless he would give him more money, he would take him before a magistrate, and accuse him of the same attempt; adding, that it would go hard with him, unless he could prove an alibi. The prosecutor then went into an adjoining shop, whither the prisoner followed him, and stayed at the outside of the door. The prosecutor took a guinea out of his pocket, and gave it to the shopkeeper, desiring him to give it to the man at the door, which was done, and the prisoner then departed. The prosecutor then deposed, that he was exceedingly alarmed on both occasions, and under that alarm gave the money; that he was not aware what were the consequences of such a charge, but apprehended it might cost him his life. The jury were desired to consider, 1st, whether, upon the evidence, they were satisfied that the prosecutor delivered his money through fear, and under an apprehension that his life was in danger; or, 2dly, if they did not think that the prosecutor apprehended his life was in danger, whether the money were not obtained by means of the prisoner's threats, and against the will of the prosecutor; for, if it were, even in that case, though he were not in fear of his life, the crime would amount to robbery. The jury found the prisoner guilty; and said they were satisfied that the prosecutor delivered his money through fear, and under an apprehension that his life was in danger. There being some difference of opinion among the judges on this case, they directed it to be argued before them, which was done on the 29th April, 1779, at Lord C. J. De Grey's house, present all the judges; when, after very full consideration, they at length all agreed that the case amounted to robbery. R. v. Donolly, O. B. Feb. 1779, cor. Buller, J., 2 East's P. C. 715; 1 Leach, 193.

In the May Old Bailey Sessions following, 1779, Sess. Pap., No. 5, p. 3; 2 East's P. C. 726; Willes, J., in giving judgment (after noticing the definition of robbery by Lord Hale and others to the same effect), observed, that the following ingredients were necessary to constitute that offence:—1. A felonious intent, or animus furandi. 2. Some degree of violence or putting in fear. 3. A taking from the person of another. He observed, that he should confine himself to show that the prisoner's offence came within the above description, as the judges did not mean to draw the line as to what should or should not constitute robbery, and therefore they declined giving an answer to the cases put by the prisoner's counsel, urging that every case must depend upon its own conviction; but that the facts, in this case, warranted them in saying, as to the first point, that there was a felonious intention in the prisoner to rob the prosecutor. Upon the second point, that the putting in fear was not necessary to be laid in the indictment; so that the facts were charged to be done violently and against the will of the party. Nor was the circumstance of actual fear necessary to be proved; but that the law, in odium spoliatoris, would presume it. In like manner, it had been often holden that actual violence was not necessary, but that constructive violence was sufficient; for, where such a terror was impressed on the mind as did not leave the party a free agent, and, in order to get rid of that terror, he delivered his money, it was robbery. It was also clear that no actual danger was necessary; for a man might commit robbery without having any offensive weapon; and though a tinder-box or candlestick were used. For when a villain came and demanded a man's money, no one knew to what length he would proceed. That here the situation of the prosecutor was that of a young gentleman accosted at night in the street by a stranger, whom he had never before seen, and must have suspected to be a villain, who demanded a present. Even that seemed sufficient; but the stranger went on and told him that he had better comply, &c. That was a threat of a personal injury, for he had every thing to fear in being dragged through the streets as a culprit charged with an unnatural crime. That, therefore, was a reasonable fear; which might operate in constantem, as well as in meticulosum virum. It had, he said, been urged on behalf of the prisoner, that this was a fraudulent extorting, and not a taking by violence. But, in many cases, fraud would supply the want of violence; as in the case of burglary, where breaking was necessary to be laid in the indictment, and yet getting admission into a house under colour of law or pretence of taking a lodging or business had been often holden sufficient evidence of the breaking into the house. But the judges, he observed, did not entirely determine this case on that ground, but were of opinion, that there was proof of a constructive violence, which they thought was sufficient. As to the third point, that there was clearly a taking from the person; though a taking in the presence of the party would have been sufficient. After citing the above-mentioned cases of Jones, Brown, and Harrold, he observed, that in those cases there was this difference from the present, that there was some actual violence proved, as taking by the collar or arm; but that the judges all held that that did not make any material distinction, but that sufficient was proved in this case for the jury to find the prisoner guilty of robbery.

In the October sessions following, John Staples was convicted of a similar offence, and executed. Staples' case, O. B., 1779.

David Hickman was indicted for robbing John Millard, in St. James's Palace, of two guineas. He obtained the money from the prosecutor by charging him with a similar crime as in the foregoing cases; and by threatening, that if he did not make him satisfaction, he would bring a serjeant and a file of men to take him up before a magistrate. The prosecutor swore that he parted with his money for fear of losing his character, and that he had no other fear. The jury found the prisoner guilty; but as some on the bench thought that this case differed from that of Donolly, it was reserved for the opinion of the judges; who, in November, 1783, were all of opinion that it was robbery. Ashurst, J., afterwards, Old Bailey, Feb. 1784, 1 Leach, 279, delivered their opinion, that this did not materially differ from the case of Donolly; for that the true definition of robbery is the stealing or taking from the person or in his presence, property of any amount, with such a degree of force or terror, as to induce the party unwillingly to part with his property; and that, whether the terror arose from real or expected violence to the person, or from a sense of injury to the character, the law made no kind of difference: for, to most men, the idea of losing their fame and reputation was equally, if not more terrific, than the dread of personal injury. That the principal ingredient in robbery was a man's being forced to part with his property. And that the judges were unanimously of opinion, that, upon the principles of law and the authority of former decisions, a threat to accuse a man of having committed the greatest of all crimes was a sufficient force to constitute the crime of robbery by putting in fear. Hickman's case, Old Bailey, July, 1783, 2 East's P. C. 728.

Obtaining money by threatening to charge a man with an unnatural crime, and to carry him before a magistrate, is a robbery, if there is any constraint on his person; and if the prisoners call a coach to carry the party before a magistrate, and the prosecutor get into it, such is a constraint upon his person. R. v. Thomas Cannon and Another, R. & R. C. C. 146.

Fear of loss of character and service on a charge of sodomitical practices is sufficient to constitute robbery, though the party had no fear of being taken into custody or of punishment. R. v. Egerton, R. & R. C. C. R. 375.

But parting with property upon the charge of an unnatural crime, will not make the taking a robbery, if it is parted with, not from fear of loss of character, but for the purpose of prosecuting. R. v. Fuller, id. 408.

It is equally a robbery to extort money from a person by threatening to accuse him of an unnatural crime, whether the party so threatened has been guilty of such crime or not. R. v. Gardner, 1 C. & P. 79.

If the property be not taken by actual violence, and the owner only delivers it in consequence of prior threats, such delivery must be enforced by terror actually felt at the time, to constitute the crime; otherwise there is neither actual nor constructive violence in the taking, and, consequently, no robbery. 2 East's P. C. 733.

It is not enough that the fear arise after the property is taken. Harman, being on horseback, desired Halfpenny to open a gap for him; and while he was so doing, Harman took the opportunity, unperceived, to pick his pocket of his purse. Halfpenny, turning round, and seeing the purse in Harman's hand, demanded it of him, who then menaced Halfpenny (in the manner before-mentioned), and went away with the purse. On an indictment for robbery, the prisoner was holden guilty of simple larceny only; the property being obtained by stealth, and not by violence or putting in fear; the words of menace being used after the taking. Harman's case, Hil. 17 Jac. 2; Roll. Rep. 154; 1 Hale, 534.

In the case of Jackson and Shipley, Nottingham Spr. Ass. 1802, before Mr. Baron Graham, it was decided on a case reserved, that to constitute robbery by taking money from another upon a threat to charge him with an unnatural crime, the money must be taken immediately upon the threat made, and not after the parties have separated, and time for the prosecutor to deliberate and procure assistance, and especially after he had consulted a friend, who was even present at the time when the money was paid, though the prosecutor parted with his money from fear of losing his character. R. v. Jackson and Shipley, 1 East's P. C., Add. XXI.; and see R. v. Reeve, 2 Leach, 616.

But, now, the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 7, declares it to be robbery, if any person shall accuse, or threaten to accuse, any other person of any infamous crime, as thereafter defined, with a view or intent to extort or gain from him, and shall, by intimidating him by such accusation or threat, extort or gain from him any chattel, money, or valuable security.

And sect. 9, declares, that the abominable crime of buggery, committed either with mankind or with beast, and every assault with intent to commit the said abominable crime, and every attempt or endeavour to commit the said abominable crime, and every solicitation, persuasion, promise, or threat offered or made to any person to commit or permit the said abominable crime, shall be deemed to be an infamous crime within the meaning of that act. Ante, Larceny, Vol. III.

Under the 4 Geo. IV. c. 54, s. 3, which made it felony to threaten to accuse a person of an infamous crime with a view to extort money, a charge of making overtures to commit sodomy was held not to be an infamous crime within the act, and that such overtures would not subject the party making them to an infamous crime, or prevent his being a witness. R. v. Hickman, R. & M. C. C. 34. But this is remedied by the above clause, which defines the nature of an infamous crime.

II. Indictment for Robbery.

The venue must be laid in the county where the crime actually took place. 2 Leach, 634. See, as to the venue in robbing the mail, ante, Post-Office, p. 187; see also, as to the venue in cases where the place of committing the offence is doubtful, Indictment, p. 330, 331.

The putting in fear need not be laid in the indictment, so that the fact be charged to be done violently and against the will of the party. R. v. Donolly, ante, p. 319; Post. 128; 1 Hale, 534.

Where no force, there must be terror in fact.

Fear after the taking not sufficient.

Except in threats to accuse of unnatural crimes.

[IV.]

The term violently is not absolutely requisite, so that it otherwise appear violence was used. 2 East's P. C. 783.

The assault must be laid to have been feloniously made. 2 Leach, 564.

Where the indictment stated that the robbery was in a field near the king's highway, and it was not proved that it was near any highway, it was considered that the allegation of the robbery being in a field near the highway was immaterial, for the 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 2, took away clergy, let the robbery be where it might. R. v. Wardle, R. & R. C. C. 9. And so, where the indictment charged that the prisoner robbed A. B. in the dwelling-house of J. S., and the robbery was proved, and that it was in the house, but whose house it did not appear, this was held immaterial. R. v. Pye, R. & R. C. C. 9, 10, n.

As to the mode of describing the goods, and the ownership thereof, see Indictment, Vol. III. p. 348; Larceny, Vol. III.

The indictment need not conclude, against the form of the statute, unless, perhaps, the robbery be of some security or chattel not the subject of larceny at common law.

On the trial, should it appear that any of the circumstances of robbery are wanting, but the taking is proved, the defendant may be acquitted of the aggravated offence, and found guilty of simple larceny. Rep. temp. Hardw. 115. Com. Rep. 478; 2 Str. 1014.

If the property be once taken, the offence will not be purged by the robber delivering it back to the owner. 1 Hale, 533; 1 Haw. c. 34, s. 2; R. v. Peat, 1 Leach, 228.

III. Punishment for Robbery.

Robbery is generally inflicted with the heaviest punishment. See 3 Last. 68; 2 Hale, c. 48.

Robbery from the person, death.

Assaults with intent to commit robbery, and re-mands accompanied with menaces or force.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6, it is enacted, "that if any person shall rob any other person of any chattel, money, or valuable security, every such offender, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon; and if any person shall steal any such property from the person of another, or shall assault any other person with intent to rob him, or shall with menaces or by force demand any such property of any other person with intent to steal the same, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years, and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped (if the court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment."

See the general clauses of this act, affecting all its provisions, title Larceny, Vol. III.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the 23 Hen. VIII. c. 1, 3 W. & M. c. 9, and so much of the 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, as relates to housebreaking, robbing, horse-stealing, and sacrilege, and to the allowance of the benefit of clergy in any case therein mentioned: so far the repeals go to robbery.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, robbery in the navy shall be punished with death, or otherwise, as a court-martial, on consideration of the circumstances, shall find meet.

IV. Principal and Accessary.

All that come in company to rob are principals, though one actually do it. Hale's Sum. 72.

If a gang of poachers attack a gamekeeper, and leave him senseless on the ground, and one of them return and steal his money, &c., that one only can be convicted of the robbery, as it was not in pursuance of any common intent. R. v. Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 392.

As to accessories in general, see Accessory, Vol. I.

V. Rewards.

As to rewards for apprehending robbers, see, ante, Reward, p. 275, 276.

VI. Laying Hue and Cry on a Robbery.

How hue and cry shall be made, see Hue and Cry, Vol. III.

Hue and cry.

VII. What shall be done with the Goods of the Person Robbed.

If the person robbed do not prosecute the robber; unless his goods be waived in flight, or seized by the king's officers, or lord of the manor, he shall not have them restored. Kel. 49. Restitution of goods taken by robbery.

But if they be not waived in flight, nor seized by the king's officers or the lord of the manor, he may take his goods again wherever he finds them, without the formality of restitution being awarded, if they be not sold in open market; and this, also, although he do not prosecute the robber. Kel. 49.

But if he shall prosecute the robber to conviction, he shall have restitution, although they have been waived, and seized, and even sold in open market. Kel. 48. See further, Larceny (Restitution) Vol. III.

VIII. Assaults with Intent to Rob.

This offence has already been noticed, under title Assault, Vol. I. p. 277. Assaults to rob.
It is provided against by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6.

IX. Demanding Money, &c. with Intent to Rob.

This offence will be found treated of under title Threats, post. It is provided against by the statute, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6, 7. Threats to rob.

X. Liability of Hundred.

It seems, the hundred are now no longer liable in cases of robbery, but only for damages done by rioters. See the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, ante, Larceny, Vol. III., repealing all the prior acts relative to such liability, and see the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31, rendering the hundred liable for damages by rioters, Hundred, Vol. III. Liability of hundred.

Indictment for sacrilege.

(a) Catharine Rourke was tried and convicted on the now repealed 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, s. 10, before Bayley, J., at Kingston Spring Assizes, 1819, of sacrilege, in stealing an iron pot, value 6*s.*, and a snatch-block, value 4*s.*, the property of the churchwardens. The block was to raise weights in case the bells wanted repairing, and the pot for charcoal to air the scults. These articles had been kept in the church for years, and were not brought in for the repairs which were then in progress. The learned judge, doubting whether these were such goods as were entitled to the protection of the church, forbore passing the sentence, and submitted the point to the consideration of the judges. In Easter Term, 1819, the judges met, and were unanimously of opinion that a capital sentence ought to be passed upon the prisoner; as the protection of the place was not confined to what was used for divine service, but to what was kept to keep the church in proper order; and they thought that the protection continued, though the church was repairing. The judges thought the violation of the sanctity of the place was the thing the statute meant to prevent. R. & R. C. C. 386.

Where a schoolmaster, in correcting his scholar, happens to occasion his death, if on such correction he be so barbarous as to exceed all bounds of moderation, he is at least guilty of manslaughter; and if he make use of an instrument improper for correction, and apparently endangering the scholar's life, as an iron bar, a sword, or kick him to the ground, and then stamp on his belly, and kill him, he is guilty of murder. 1 Haw. c. 29, s. 5.

[22 Geo. II. c. 33; 31 Geo. II. c. 10; 44 Geo. III. c. 13.]

By the 31 Geo. II. c. 10, s. 28, no listed seaman shall be taken out of his majesty's service by any process other than for some criminal matter, unless affidavit be first made that the debt or damage amounts to 20*l*. In what cases they may be arrested.

ARREST.
COURT MAR-TIAL.Seaman arrested by civil or criminal process.

Sect. 22. But the plaintiff may, on notice first given to the defendant, enter a common appearance, and proceed to judgment and outlawry, and have execution other than against his body.

And in order to prevent the practice of obtaining the liberation of seamen by means of improperly suing out civil or criminal process, it is enacted, by the 44 Geo. III. c. 13, s. 1, that petty officers or seamen arrested by sheriffs or by other officers, and thereby taken out of his majesty's sea service, or from out of any ship appointed for receiving volunteers and impressed men, or from the custody of any officer in his majesty's sea service, shall be by such sheriff, &c., kept in custody after being entitled to be discharged from any process, and be conveyed to the commander-in-chief, or some commissioned officer authorized to raise seamen, or to some principal officer employed in regulating the service of raising men for the fleet, whichever shall be at or nearest the place where such petty officer, &c. shall happen to be, to serve on board his majesty's fleet. And the sheriff, gaoler, or other officer, shall be paid by the treasurer of the navy, upon producing a certificate for conducting such seaman, at the rate of 2s. per mile.

Sheriff, &c., conducting such seaman, &c., how to be paid.Transfer of such seaman, &c., to be certified.Remedy against
for neglect.

Sect. 2. The transfer of such seaman from one sheriff, &c. to another, by virtue of habeas corpus, or otherwise, shall be certified upon the back of the process, by the party in whose custody they shall be, who shall state that such petty officer, &c. is liable to be kept in the service, or as the case may be.

Sect. 3. If any sheriff, &c. shall neglect or refuse to conduct or convey such seaman to any distance not exceeding eighty miles, for the space of two days; or to any distance not exceeding twenty miles, for the space of three days; and so at the rate of forty miles a day after the time that such petty officer, &c. ought to be so conducted, but shall wilfully or negligently keep him in custody for any space of time over and above the time above specified, without so conducting him, such sheriff, &c. shall be liable to an action of trespass at the suit of such petty officer, &c. or seaman.

Sheriff, &c., suffering an escape.

Sect. 4. If any sheriff, &c. shall wilfully or negligently suffer any such seaman to escape, he shall be liable to the penalty of 100*l.*, recoverable in any of the courts of record at Westminster; one moiety thereof to the king, and the other to the party suing.

Limitation of action; and costs.

Sect. 5. And any action by virtue of this act must be brought within three calendar months after the fact; and if the plaintiff fail in such action, the defendant shall have treble costs.

What offences
may punish.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 4, no court martial may punish or try any offence committed by any seaman in his majesty's service, which shall not be committed on the main sea, or in great rivers beneath the bridges, or in a haven or creek within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; except in the case of spies, or of mutiny and desertion, or disobedience, or of offences committed on land in foreign countries.

Purser making false entry.

A purser in the navy is liable, by the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, to be tried by a court martial for fraudulently and unlawfully charging blankets against seamen to whom none had been issued, and of making, in order to such charge, certain false entries in one of the ship's books, that being within the 36th article of war, an offence not capital, committed by a person in the fleet, not before mentioned in the act, and for which no punishment is thereby directed to be inflicted. Mann v. Owen, 9 B. & C. 595.

II. Exercising Trades.

[22 Geo. II. c. 44; 3 Geo. III. c. 8.]

Where they may exercise trades.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 44, and 3 Geo. III. c. 8, seamen who have been employed in the king's service since the accession of King George the Second, and not deserted, may set up and exercise such trade as they are apt for, in any town or place of Great Britain or Ireland, without molestation (except in Oxford or Cambridge); and if any person be sued thereupon, and the plaintiff be cast, such person shall have double costs. See, also, now the 54 Geo. III. c. 96; Apprentices, Vol. I. p. 156.

SWEARING.
FALSE NAMES,
&c.

III. Swearing, &c.

[1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 25; 19 Geo. II. c. 21.]

By the 19 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 5, a seaman, instead of being committed to the house of correction for default of paying the penalty for swearing, shall be put in the stocks for one hour for every single offence, and for any number of offences of which he shall be convicted at one and the same time, two hours.

Convicted of swearing.

By the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 25, s. 1 & 2, the treasurer, controller, surveyor, clerk of the acts, or any of the commissioners of the navy, may punish seamen and others making disturbances in the yards or offices, and may bind them to their good behaviour and to appear at the next assizes, or general quarter sessions, to be prosecuted for such offence.

Sect. 3 of that act, after reciting the expediency of extending the provisions of the 55 Geo. one John Williams to personate, and falsely to assume the name and character of Thomas Jacobs, a person entitled to a certain allowance of money, for services done on board certain ships of our said lord the king, in order to receive such allowance of money, due and payable for and on account of the services of the said Thomas Jacobs, as aforesaid; and that the said John Williams, by the procurement of the said Martha Potts, otherwise called Martha Dangreen as aforesaid, and then and there, with force and arms, feloniously, willingly, and knowingly, did personate, and falsely assume the name and character of the said Thomas Jacobs, a person entitled to a certain allowance of money, for services done on board certain ships of our said lord the king, in order to receive such allowance of money due and payable for and on account of the services of the said Thomas Jacobs as aforesaid, with intent to defraud the commissioners and governors of the Royal Hospital for seamen at Greenwich, in the county of Kent, against the form of the statute, &c., and against the peace, &c.

The thirteenth count charged, that the said John Williams, late of, &c., afterwards, to wit, on the said 1st of May, in the year aforesaid, with force and arms, at Greenwich aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, feloniously, willingly, and knowingly did personate and falsely assume the name and character of one Thomas Jacobs, a person entitled to a certain allowance of money, for services done on board certain ships of our said lord the king, in order to receive such allowance of money due and payable for and on account of the services of the said Thomas Jacobs as aforesaid, with intent to defraud the commissioners and governors of the Royal Hospital for Seamen at Greenwich, in the county of Kent; and that the said Martha Potts, otherwise called Martha Dangreen, then and there, to wit, at the time of committing the felony aforesaid, with force and arms, feloniously, wilfully, and knowingly was present, aiding, abetting, assisting, comforting, and maintaining the said John Williams to do and commit the felony aforesaid, in form aforesaid; and so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said John Williams and the said Martha Potts, otherwise called Martha Dangreen, the felony aforesaid, in manner and form aforesaid, feloniously, willingly, and knowingly did do and commit, against the form of the statute, &c., and against the peace, &c. There being no evidence of previous procurement, the jury acquitted the prisoner on the first count and all the other counts in the indictment except the thirteenth, on which they found the prisoner guilty, she being present and asserting that John Williams was Thomas Jacobs. The learned judge respited the judgment to take the opinion of the judges upon this count, doubting whether it was a good one, as the act makes no provision as to aiders, abettors, assisters, comforters, and maintainers, in that part which relates to personating seamen, though, in a subsequent part, as to forging letters of attorney, &c., it provides against those who shall willingly act or assist therein, or with respect to uttering and publishing, against those who shall aid and assist. The learned judge also doubted whether the doctrine of a principal in the second degree (which seemed to be the idea of this count) could apply to this case; because principals in the second degree, and principals in the first degree, may be charged jointly as doing the act; whereas it appeared to the learned judge difficult to allege that a man and a woman jointly personated one man." J. W. had been convicted of personating J. at a former assizes, and the record of his conviction was produced to prove that fact, on this indictment. The judges unanimously held the conviction right.

II. c. 36, s. 1, that it shall not be lawful for any master or commander of any ship or vessel bound to parts beyond the seas [and by the 31 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 1, the same is extended to masters of vessels trading coastwise], to carry any seaman or mariner, except his apprentice or apprentices, to sea, from any port or place where he or they were entered or shipped, to proceed on any voyage to parts beyond the seas, without first coming to an agreement or contract with such seaman or mariner for their wages, which agreement or agreements shall be made in writing, declaring what wages each seaman or mariner is to have respectively during the whole voyage, or for so long time as he or they shall ship themselves for; and also to express in the said agreement or contract the voyage for which such seaman or mariner was shipped, to perform the same; on pain that the master shall forfeit 5*l.* for every such seaman or mariner, to the use of Greenwich Hospital, to be recovered on the oath of one witness, before one justice, who shall issue his warrant to bring such master or commander before him; to be levied by distress; and if no distress can be found, to be committed to gaol till he shall pay the same.

By the 31 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 9, in case of vessels trading coastwise, where the contract for wages shall be by the voyage, and not by the month or other stated time, the penalties shall be ascertained in manner following: viz. if the length of the voyage exceed a lunar month, the forfeiture of one month's pay shall be deemed a forfeiture of a sum of money bearing the same proportion to the whole wages as a lunar month shall bear to the whole time spent in the voyage; and in like manner the forfeiture of two days' pay, &c., as two days shall bear to the whole time of the voyage; and if the whole voyage shall not exceed one lunar month, or shall not exceed two days, the said forfeiture shall be deemed a forfeiture of the whole wages.

Justices may commit deserters to the house of correction, &c.

By the 2 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 4, if the mariner desert or absent himself after he hath signed the agreement, on application to any justice, from the master, owner, or commander, or other person having charge or command of the ship, such justice may cause him to be apprehended; and if he shall refuse to proceed on the voyage, without sufficient reason to the satisfaction of the justice, the said justice shall commit him to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour not exceeding thirty days, nor less than fourteen days.

And by the 2 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 6, and 31 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 4, if any mariner, not entering into the king's service, shall leave the ship before he shall have a discharge in writing by the master, he shall forfeit one month's pay, to be recovered and disposed of as hereafter is mentioned.

By the 31 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 3, if any mariner (in the coasting trade), after he shall have entered into such agreement, shall neglect or refuse to proceed on the intended voyage for which he shall have entered, or upon which such ship shall be destined to proceed, he shall forfeit to the owner all wages due at the time of such refusal; and on complaint to any justice by the master, commander, or owner, or other person having charge or command of the ship, he shall issue his warrant to apprehend such mariner; and if he shall refuse to proceed on the voyage agreed upon, or on which the ship shall be destined to proceed, within the time contracted for, without sufficient reason, to the satisfaction of the justice, the justice shall commit him to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for not exceeding thirty days, nor less than fourteen days.

By sect. 10. This act not to extend to vessels under one hundred tons, or not going to open sea.

And by the 45 Geo. III. c. 81, if, upon being so apprehended, the seaman or mariner (in coasting trade) shall not give sufficient reason for the refusal, to the satisfaction of the justice, he shall commit him (as in the 31 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 3, specified).

By the 37 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 1, to prevent the desertion of seamen from merchant ships, every seaman, mariner, or other person, who shall desert during the voyage, either out or home, from any British merchant ship trading to or from his majesty's colonies in the West Indies, shall, over and above all punishments, penalties, and forfeitures, to which he is now subject, forfeit all the wages he may be entitled to from the master or owner of the ship on board of which he shall enter immediately after such desertion.

Sect. 2. And every master or commander of any such ship, who shall engage any such person, knowing him to have deserted from any other ship, shall forfeit 100*l*.

Sect. 3. No such master or commander shall hire, or procure to be hired, any seaman, or other person, in any port in the said colonies, at more than double the monthly wages such person contracted for when he entered on board, being in the same degree, unless authorized by the governor, chief magistrate, collector, or controller of such port, in writing, under his hand; and all agreements contrary thereto shall be void, and the person hiring or procuring, &c. any seaman, &c. contrary to the intent and meaning of this act, shall forfeit 100*l*.

Sect. 4. And the master of every such ship shall have on board, at the time the same is cleared out from Great Britain, one apprentice, under seventeen years of age, and duly indented for three years, for every one hundred tons' admeasurement of such ship, according to the certificate of registry; and such indenture shall be duly enrolled at the custom-house of the port within one month after the date of execution thereof; and such apprentices shall be exempt from serving in his majesty's navy for that term; and every owner or master neglecting to enrol such indenture in manner aforesaid, shall forfeit 10*l*, to be paid one moiety by the owner, and the other moiety by the master, and to be recovered as hereinafter mentioned.

Sect. 5 relates to the masters giving in lists of those who have died during the voyage.

Sect. 9 enacts, "that the penalties and forfeitures given by this act shall be paid and applied in manner following; that is to say, one-third part thereof for and towards the support of Greenwich Hospital; one other third part thereof for and towards the support of the seaman's hospital at the port to which the ship or vessel in respect of which the forfeiture shall arise belongs; but in case there shall be no seaman's hospital at the port to which such ship or vessel belongs, then to and for the use and benefit of the old and disabled seamen of the same port and their families, to be distributed at the discretion of the persons having the direction of the merchant seamen's fund at such port, or in case there shall be no such establishment there, by the magistrates or overseers of the poor of such port; and the other third part thereof to and for the person or persons who shall inform and sue for the same; and that such penalty shall be recovered by bill, plaint, or information, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; or such of them as do not exceed the sum of 20*l*, upon information, on the oath of one or more witnesses, before any one or more of his majesty's justice or justices of the peace in any part of the kingdom of Great Britain, who shall not reside more than ten miles from the place of abode of the person or persons complained of, which justice and justices is and are hereby authorized and required to issue out his or their warrant or warrants to bring before him or them every person charged with any offence under this act; and in case he or she shall refuse or neglect to pay such penalties or forfeitures, as aforesaid, to issue his or their warrant or warrants to levy the same by distress and sale of the offender's goods, and in case no distress can be found, to commit the offender or offenders to the common gaol of the city, town, or place within the jurisdiction of such respective justice or justices, there to remain for the space of three calendar months, or until he or they shall pay the same."

There are several other provisions and regulations made by the 37 Geo. III. c. 73, relating to seamen in the merchants' service; but being no way connected with the office of a justice of the peace, it is quite foreign to this work to insert them here.

Search-Warrant.

[7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 63.]

THE 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, (the Larceny Consolidation Act,) s. 63, enacts, "that if any credible witness shall prove, upon oath before a justice of the peace, a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his possession, or on his premises, any property whatsoever, on or with respect to which any such offence (a) shall have been committed, the justice may grant a warrant to search for such property, as in the case of stolen goods; and any person, to whom any property shall be offered to be sold, pawned, or delivered, if he shall have reasonable cause to suspect that any such offence has been committed on or with respect to such property, is hereby authorized, and, if in his power, is required to apprehend and forthwith to carry before a justice of the peace the party offering the same, together with such property, to be dealt with according to law."

As to felonies, this new enactment makes no alteration in the law; but as to misdemeanors, it much extends the authority of the magistrate.

Other statutes.

There are other statutes relative to coining, having in possession naval and military stores, and to the taking of idle and disorderly persons, in order to recruit the land forces and marines, containing powers to issue search-warrants; and under the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 8, a justice may order the trunks, bundles, &c. of vagrants to be inspected; and by sect. 13, he may grant his warrant to search lodging-houses, &c. suspected to conceal vagrants. See the respective titles.

Apprehension of offenders.

As to the apprehension of the offenders themselves, see Arrest, Vol. I., post, Warrant, and the general provisions of the statutes, under titles Larceny and Malicious Injuries, Vol. III.

General warrants condemned.

Although it hath been usual for justices to grant general warrants, to search all suspected places for stolen goods, and there is a precedent in Dalton, requiring the constable to search all such suspected places as he and the party complaining shall think convenient; yet such practice is generally condemned by the best authorities. Thus, Lord Hale, in his Summary of Pleas of the Crown, says, a general warrant to search all places for felonies or stolen goods, is not good. Hale's Sum. 93. Mr. Hawkins says: "I do not find any good authority, that a justice can justify sending a general warrant, to search all suspected houses in general for stolen goods: because such warrant seems to be illegal on the very face of it; for it would be extremely hard to leave it to the discretion of a common officer, to arrest what persons, and search what houses, he thinks fit; and if a justice cannot legally grant a blank warrant for the arrest of a single person, leaving it to the party to fill up, surely he cannot grant such a general warrant, which might have the effect of an hundred blank warrants." 2 Haw. c. 13, s. 10, 17. Again, Lord Hale, in his History of the Pleas of the Crown, expresseth himself thus: "I do take it, that a general warrant to search in all suspected places is not good, but only to search in such particular places, where the party assigns before the justice his suspicion, and the probable causes thereof; for these warrants are judicial acts, and must be granted upon examination of the fact." 2 Hale, 150. "And therefore I take those general warrants dormant, which are many times made before any felony committed, are not justifiable, for it makes the party to be in effect the judge; and therefore searches made by pretence of such general warrants give no more power to the officer or party, than what they may do by law without them." 2 Hale, 150.

Warrant not to be granted upon bare surmise.

Likewise, upon a bare surmise, a justice cannot make a warrant to break any man's house, to search for a felon, or for stolen goods; for the justices, being created by act of Parliament, have no such authority granted to them by any act of Parliament; and it would be full of inconvenience that it should be in the power of any justice of the peace, being a judge of record, upon a bare suggestion, to break the house of any person, of what state, quality, or degree soever, either in the day or night, upon such surmises. 4 Inst. 177.

But may, on oath of suspicion.

But in the case of a complaint, and oath made of goods stolen, and that the party suspects that goods are in such house, and shows the cause of his suspicion, the justice of peace may grant a warrant to search in those suspected places mentioned in his warrant, and to attach the goods, and the party in whose custody they are found, and bring them before him, or some other justice of peace, to give an account how he came by them, and farther to abide such order as to law shall appertain. Vide Dalt. c. 169, p. 403; 2 Hale, 113, 150; 2 Wils. 291; and see the express provisions of the above 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 63.

However, a positive oath that a felony is actually committed, is not necessary to justify a magistrate in granting his warrant to search the premises and apprehend the person of a party suspected of felony. Elsee v. Smith, 1 D. & R. 97, in error; et per Abbott, C. J.:—"There are many cases in which a cautious man might not choose to swear that his property is stolen, and, nevertheless, he might have great reason to suspect a particular party, and the magistrate would be well warranted in granting his search-warrant. Suppose the case of a horse, which has been lost by its owner, and it is found in the possession of another person; the owner, in that case, might not like to take upon himself to swear that the horse has been stolen, for it might have strayed; but when he finds his horse concealed in the stable of another person, he may very naturally conclude it must have been stolen, from the circumstance of the concealment; and, therefore, he may very conscientiously swear he suspects it to have been stolen. If, under such circumstances, the magistrate is not authorized in issuing his search-warrant, it might happen, in many cases, that felonies would go undetected."

Lord Hale says, "It is fit that these warrants to search do express that search be made in the day-time; and though I will not say that they are unlawful without such restriction, yet they are very inconvenient without it; for many times, under pretence of searches made in the night, robberies and burglaries have been committed; and at best it creates great disturbances." 2 Hale, 150.

But, in cases not of probable suspicion only, but of positive proof thereof, it is right to execute the warrant in the night-time, lest the offenders and goods also be gone before morning. Barl. Search-War.

Furthermore, such warrant ought to be directed to a constable, or other public officer, and not to any private person; though it is fit the party complaining should be present and assistant, because he knows his goods. 2 Hale, 150.

It should also command, that the goods found, together with the party in whose custody they are taken, be brought before some justice of the peace, to the end that, upon further examination of the fact, the goods and the prisoner may be disposed of as the law directs. 2 Hale, 150.

So much for granting a search-warrant; next touching the execution of it. Execution of

As regards the power of constables to act in any place within the jurisdiction of the justices who grant the warrant, see the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 6, tit. Arrest. Vol. 1. p.

Whether the stolen goods are in a suspected house or not, the officer and his assistants in the day-time may enter, the doors being open, to make search, and it is justifiable by the warrant. 2 Hale, 151; see further, Search-Warrant, post.

If the door be shut, and, upon demand, it be refused to be opened by them within, if the stolen goods be in the house, the officer may break open the door. 2 Hale, 151.

If the goods be not in the house, yet it seems the officer is excused that breaks open the door to search, because he searched by warrant, and could not know whether the goods were there till search made: but it seems that the party that made the suggestion is punishable in such case; for, as to him, the breaking of the door is, in eventa, lawful or unlawful,—to wit, lawful, if the goods are there; unlawful, if not there. 2 Hale, 151.

The officer must strictly observe the directions of the warrant, and if he be directed to seize only stolen sugar, and seize tea, he will be a trespasser. 2 B. & P. 158; 2 M. & S. 261.

So, a warrant, under the Vagrant Act, to search all suspected houses, for idle and disorderly persons, is strictly confined to persons of that description, and the officer will not be justified if he attempt to execute it in any other places than those intended by the statute. 1 Leach, 208.

A warrant directing a search in a particular house only, would not justify a search in another.

Where a constable, having a warrant to search for specific articles alleged to have been stolen, found and took away those, and certain others supposed to have been also stolen, but which were not mentioned in the warrant, and not likely to be of use in substantiating the charge of stealing the goods that were specified, it was held that the constable was a trespasser. Crozier v. Cundey, 6 B. & C. 232.

SEARCH-WARRANT.

Where officers went with a search-warrant, and, at the desire of the party, gave it to him for his perusal, and he would not return it, it was held that they had a right to take it from him, and even to coerce his person to obtain the possession of it, provided they used no more violence than was necessary. R. v. Milton, 3 C. & P. 31.

Return of the warrant.

As to general search-warrants, see ante, 354.

On the return of the warrant executed, the justice hath these things to do.

As touching the goods brought before him, if it appears they were not stolen, they are to be restored to the possessor; if it appear they were stolen, they are not to be delivered to the proprietor, but deposited in the hand of the sheriff or constable, to the end the party robbed may proceed, by indicting and convicting the offender, to have restitution. 2 Hale, 151.

As touching the party that had the custody of the goods, if they were not stolen, then he is to be discharged; if stolen, but not by him, but by another, that sold or delivered them to him, if it appear that he was ignorant that they were stolen, he may be discharged as an offender, and bound over to give evidence as a witness against him that sold them; if it appear he was knowing they were stolen, he must be committed or bound over to answer the felony. 2 Hale, 152.

Before noticing the various laws and regulations relative to Servants, it is important to observe, that magistrates have not, as has frequently been supposed, any peculiar jurisdiction over domestic servants; such jurisdiction is confined to servants in husbandry, manufacturers, journeymen, artificers, and labourers, and other such class of servants. See R. v. Inhabitants of Hulcot, 6 T. R. 583, post, 360; Branwell v. Penneck, 1 M. & R. M. C. 109; 7 B. & Cres. S. C.; Lancaster v. Greaves, 9 B. & Cres. 628; *Hardy v. I. Who are to serve.

BY the common law, no one is compellable to serve another.

As to who may be compelled to be Apprentices, see Apprentice, Vol. I. p. 158. What sort of persons are compellable to serve by the year in husbandry.

The 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 7, enacts, "that every person between the age of twelve years and the age of sixty years, not being lawfully retained, nor apprentice with any fisherman or mariner hunting the seas; nor being in service with any kidder or carrier of any corn, grain, or meal, for provision of the city of London, nor with any husbandman in husbandry, nor in any city, town corporate, or market-town, in any of the arts or sciences limited or appointed by this estatute to have or take apprentices; nor being retained by the year, or half the year at the least, for the digging, seeking, finding, getting, melting, fining, working, trying, making of any silver, tin, lead, iron, copper, stone, sea-coal, stone-coal, moor coal, or chark-coal; nor being occupied in or about the making of any glass; nor being a gentleman born; nor being a student or scholar in any of the universities, or in any school; nor having lands, tenements, rents, or hereditaments, for term of life, or of one estate of inheritance of the clear yearly value of 40s.; nor being worth in goods and chattels to the value of 10l.; nor having a father or mother then living, or other ancestor whose heir-apparent he is, then having lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the yearly value of 10l. or above, or goods or chattels of the value of 40l.; nor being a necessary or convenient officer or servant lawfully retained as is aforesaid; nor having a convenient farm or holding whereupon he may or shall employ his labour; nor being otherwise lawfully retained according to the true meaning of this estatute: shall . . . be compelled to be retained to serve in husbandry by the year with any person that keepeth husbandry, and will require any such person so to serve within the same shire where he shall be so required."

Sect. 24. "That two justices of peace, the mayor or other head officer of any city, borough, or town corporate, and two aldermen, or two other discreet burgesses of the same city, borough, or town corporate, if there be no aldermen, shall and may, by virtue hereof, appoint any such woman as is of the age of twelve years, and under the age of forty years and unmarried, and forth of service, as they shall think meet to serve, to be retained or serve by the year, or by the week or day, for such wages, and in such reasonable sort and manner as they shall think meet; and if any such woman shall refuse so to serve, then it shall be lawful for the said justices of peace, mayor, or head officers, to commit such woman to ward, until she shall be bounden to serve as is aforesaid."

Women compellable to serve that be above twelve and under forty years old, unmarried, and forth of service.

An infant of twelve years of age shall be bound by his covenant to serve in husbandry. 2 F. N. B. 168.

Infant hiring.

A woman of such age shall also be bound to serve in husbandry by her covenant.

If a man take an infant or other out of another's service, he shall be punished, although the infant or other were not retained.

An infant, by his covenant, shall be bound to serve in husbandry, although he may spend 40s., or twelve marks, by the year.

II. Contract of Service, and putting an end to.

[5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 5, 6; 55 Geo. III. c. 184.]

In writing.

The contract of service need not in general be in writing.

Stamp-duty.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, a memorandum or agreement for the hire of any labourer, artificer, manufacturer, or menial servant, is exempt from stamp-duty. See R. v. St. Paul's, Bedford, 6 T. R. 452.

Term of service.

If a person retain a servant generally, without expressing any time, the law shall construe it to be for one year, for that retainer is according to law. 2 Inst. 42; Burr. S. C. 299, 513; 4 Bing. 389.

And so of clerks and servants in general; and the service, except of domestic servants, cannot be put an end to before the end of the current year. Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 389; 2 C. & P. 607, S. C.; Huttman v. Bullnois, 2 C. & P. 510; Aitkin v. Acton, cor. Tenterden, at Westminster, 16th April, 1830; unless upon some ground of misconduct on the part of either party. Id.

By the retainer, the servant is in service presently by the law, although he cometh not into his master's service in deed: for the retainer is the proper inchoation of the service. Bro. Ab. Labourers, pl. 9, c. 11; Dalt. c. 58, p. 140.

By express agreement, either in writing or otherwise, the hiring may be for more or less than a year.

A hiring at 6s. per week for the winter, and 9s. per week for the summer, is not a yearly hiring. 6 B. & C. 77. And as to quarterly payments being evidence of a quarterly hiring, see 5 Bing. 132.

By the general understanding on the subject, and without an express agreement or understanding to the contrary, it should seem that domestic servants, who are hired by the year, are subject to be dismissed or to depart at any time on a month's notice, given by either, or a month's pay by the master. See Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235; 6 T. R. 326.

But this does not apply to a person in the situation of a clerk of an army-agent, or the like, receiving a yearly salary. Beeston v. Collyer, 4 Bing. 389; 2 C. & P. 607, S. C.

And in a late case it seems to have been considered, that if a clerk be engaged at a salary of 100l. a year, and, having received his wages up to a certain time, and served some time longer, then leave the service before the year expires, without due cause, and without any notice, he was not entitled to recover any wages up to the time of his quitting; and at all events it was considered he was liable to a cross action for leaving the service without notice. Huttman v. Bullnois, 2 C. & P. 510.

A quarter's warning to be given to husbandry servants.

By the 5 Eliz. c. 4, s. 5, 6, (many of the provisions of which are repealed by the 49 Geo. III. c. 109, see Apprentices, Vol. I.) no person which shall retain any servant shall put away his said servant, and no person retained according to this statute (a) shall depart before the end of his term, unless it be for some reasonable cause, to be allowed before one justice, or mayor or other chief officer, of the town corporate wherein the master inhabiteth, to whom the party grieved shall complain: and no master shall put away any such servant at the end of his term, nor shall any such servant depart at the end of his term, without one quarter's warning, on pain hereafter ensuing.

Putting an end to service for misconduct.

In all cases (except apprenticeships in general, Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460; 2 D. & R. 465, S. C.), if either party be guilty of misconduct towards the other, or, in other words, if he break the contract of hiring, the other may put an end thereto and the service. But he must, it should seem, put an end thereto within a reasonable time after the misconduct, and not waive the right to put an end to it by any delay.

(a) But the power of the justices under this act is confined to servants employed in husbandry. R. v. Inhabitants of Hulcot, 6 T. R. 583.

As to what shall amount to sufficient misconduct for this purpose, must depend on the particular circumstances of each case.

In the case of Spain v. Arnott, Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., at N. P., held, that if a servant hired for a year refuse to obey his master's orders, the master is justified in dismissing him before the end of the year, and the servant cannot recover any wages. Spain v. Arnott, 2 Stark. N. P. 256. This was an action brought by the plaintiff to recover wages for his service from Michaelmas to July. The plaintiff was a yearly servant to the defendant, who was a farmer. The plaintiff usually breakfasted at five o'clock in the morning, and dined at two. One day the master ordered the servant to go with the horses to the marsh, which was a mile off, before dinner, dinner being then ready. The plaintiff said, that he had done his due, and would not go till he had had his dinner: the defendant told him to go about his business, and the plaintiff went accordingly, without offering any submission, or to obey his master's orders. On the part of the defendant, it was contended, that the action was not maintainable, since the contract was a year's service in husbandry, which had not been performed. Scarlett, for the plaintiff, contended that, if the master had had any reason to complain of the conduct of the servant, he ought to have complained to a magistrate, for relief. That the master could not, by turning the servant away before the completion of the year, dissolve the contract, and bereave him of his wages; it would be exceedingly hard if he could, for then he might put an end to the contract on the very last day. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J.: "If the contract be for a year's service, the year must be completed before the servant is entitled to be paid. If the plaintiff persisted in refusing to obey his master's orders, I think he was warranted in turning him away. He might have obtained relief by applying to a magistrate; but he was not bound to pursue that course, the relation between master and servant, and the laws by which that relation is regulated, existed long before that statute. There is no contract between the parties, except that which the law makes for them; and it may be hard upon the servant, but it would be exceedingly inconvenient if the servant were to be permitted to set himself up to control his master in his domestic regulations, such as the time of dinner. After a refusal on the part of the servant to perform his work, the master is not bound to keep him on, as a burdensome and useless servant, to the end of the year. In the present instance, it might be very inconvenient for the master to change the hour of dinner: the question really comes to this—whether the master or the servant is to have the superior authority?"—A juror was afterwards withdrawn by consent.

PUTTING AN
Disobeying orders.

Being absent when wanted, sleeping from home at night without his master's leave, &c., is a sufficient cause for dismissal, and the servant will only be entitled to such wages as are due at the time of his discharge. Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Exp. 235.

Absence.

Where a clerk and traveller, hired by the year, assaulted his employer's maid servant, with intent to take liberties with her against her consent, it was held to be a good cause of immediate dismissal, Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 206; and it seems also, from that case, that a servant dismissed for such or the like cause is not entitled to proportionate wages, even for the time he has actually served. Id.

Assaulting female servant.

In the case of R. v. Brampton, Cald. 11, the principal question was, whether a maid servant hired for a year could be discharged by her master three weeks before the end of the year (she being with child), by his own authority, without the intervention of a magistrate, so as to prevent her gaining a settlement. By Ld. Mansfield, J. C.: "The question is, has the master done right or wrong in discharging his servant for this cause? I think he did not do wrong. Shall the master be bound to keep her in his house? To do so would be contra bonos mores; and, in a family where there are young persons, both scandalous and dangerous." Willes, J., said, that "This case differs from those of R. v. Richmond, Burr. S. C. 740, and R. v. Islip, 1 Str. 423 (see Poor, Settlement by Service, Vol. IV.), where the cause of the discharge of the servant by the master was not reasonable. Here, if the master had daughters, it would not be fit that he should keep such a servant, though I think he could not avail himself of the authority of a magistrate, the jurisdiction of justices being confined to cases in husbandry." (a)

Where the master discharged a yearly servant on account of a supposed criminal intimacy with a servant girl, who had previously left the service big with child, the Court of King's Bench seemed clear, that if the criminality had really existed, the case would have come within the principle of the above case of R. v. Brampton. R. v. Welford, Cald. 57.

But, in R. v. Westmeon, Cald. 129, it was said by Ld. Mansfield, C. J., that the servant being the father of a bastard child, prior to the master's hiring him, and the crime not committed when in his own house, the master shall not discharge him under this pretence: it is not a debauching of his servant, or turning his house as it were into a brothel.

When a magistrate discharges a labouring or other such servant from the service of his master, it must appear on the face of the order itself to be a case within the jurisdiction of the magistrate. R. v. Hulcott, 6 T. R. 583.

It does not appear to be settled whether the insanity of a servant be a good cause for discharging him. In R. v. Sutton, 5 T. R. 659, Ld. Kenyon, C. J., appeared to be of opinion that insanity was not a legal cause for discharging a servant; but this opinion being cited and relied upon in a subsequent case (R. v. Inh. of Hulcott, 6 T. R. 587), his lordship said, "I am not prepared to go that length; in that case there had been no application to a magistrate to discharge, and I think that the master could not of his own authority discharge the servant for that cause."

A servant's marrying is no reasonable cause for discharge, for it is not a misdeemeanor, and nothing else is a cause. Com. Dig. tit. "Justices of Peace," (B. b. 3). Sed quare as to nothing else being a cause. See supra.

If a woman who is a servant shall marry, yet she must serve out her time, and her husband cannot take her out of her master's service. Dalt. c. 58; Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 6.

If a married man and his wife do bind themselves to serve, they shall be compelled to serve according to their covenant or agreement. Dalt. c. 58.

If a servant retained for a year happen within the time of his service to fall sick, or to be hurt or disabled by the act of God, or in doing his master's business

(a) Upon which case Mr. Caldecott observes, that all that seems established by this case is, that a master may, without the intervention of a magistrate, dismiss his servant for moral turpitude, even though it be not such for which the servant may be prosecuted at common law. Whether he may or not for any other species of misconduct or general misbehaviour, though there are authorities to show that he cannot, seems, from this case, not to be fully and absolutely settled. By the general practice throughout the kingdom, and particularly in large towns, this power, however warranted, is exercised by masters; certainly, this question has not of late years been brought before the court for argument, except in the case of Burrow v. Sayer, T. R. 27 G. 2. But at the sittings at Westminster, 1773, it arose before Ld. Mansfield. A wet-nurse retained for the year, was discharged by her mistress, who tendered her her wages in proportion to the time she had served: this was refused, and the action brought for the whole year. It was proved, on behalf of the defendant, that the plaintiff had been frequently insolent to her mistress, the defendant's wife; and was subject to violent fits of passion, in which she had several times frightened, and once awakened her mistress while sleeping, before her recovery. It was also proved, that these fits of passion must be injurious to her milk; and it was insisted, that all these circumstances amounted to reasonable cause, and even created a necessity, of discharging the plaintiff. But, per Ld. Mansfield, "No person can be judge in his own cause; and this first principle could never be meant to be overturned by any law or usage whatsoever;" and though it was stated as the general usage or practice in London, Westminster, and the environs, to dismiss servants with a month's wages, it was disregarded by the court, and the servant had a verdict for the whole year. Temple v. Prescott. But see, ante, 360—post, 463, as to this latter doctrine.

ness, yet the master must not, therefore, put such servant away, nor abate any part of his wages for such time. Dalt. c. 58, p. 141; see further, 2 H. Bla. 606; R. v. Winter, Dalt. Cald. 298. WAGES OF DOMESTICS, &c.

Sickness does not put an end to the service on the part of the servant, neither does it authorize the master to put him away. Per Le Blanc, J., R. v. Sudbrooke, 1 Smith's Rep. 59.

In the case of domestic servants, however, there appears no objection to the master's putting an end to the service on giving the usual month's notice, or a month's pay.

As to the liability to pay the doctor's bill, see post, 364.

III. Wages of Domestic Servants and others.

The amount of wages of domestic servants, clerks, and others, is regulated by the contract entered into by them.

Wages of domestics and others.

"It is clearly agreed that if a person retain a servant and agree to pay him so much by the day, month, or year, that the servant may have an action against the master on the contract, or against his executors, and that every such retainer will be presumed to be in consideration of wages, unless the contrary appear." Bac. Ab. Master & Servant, (n.); 9 Co. 88, a. b.; 2 Roll. Rep. 269.

But if there be no express or implied agreement for wages, as if the servant merely came on trial, or the like, he can claim none.

And in Alfred v. Fitzjames, 3 Esp. 3, it was held that a servant who comes over from the West Indies, where he has been a slave, and who continues in the service of his master in England, is not entitled to wages without an express agreement; and see 2 C. & P. 231; Stra. 728; 1 Esp. R. 188.

So, if A. agrees to serve B. as an apothecary's assistant at such salary as C. should think reasonable, and it appear that no application had been made to C. to fix any salary, A. cannot recover any thing for his services in an action for work and labour. Owen v. Bowen, 4 C. & P., C. N. P. 93; and see 1 M. & S. 290; 5 Tam. 302; Stra. 728; 1 Esp. 188.

A domestic servant, hired in the general way, is entitled to his wages up to the time he serves, though he do not continue in the service, either from misconduct or otherwise, during the whole year. See Cutler v. Powell, 6 T. R. 326; for such is the general understanding on the subject.

BUT this does not apply to clerks and other servants, who must in general serve, or be ready and offer to serve, during the whole time of their engagement, whether by the year or otherwise; and if they do not, they are not entitled to wages not accrued due during the time of service, for an entire contract cannot be apportioned. See Huttman v. Bullnois, 2 C. & P. 510; per Ld. Ellenborough, 2 Stark. 256; ante, 360; and the case of Atkin v. Acton, 4 C. & P. 208, ante, 360; and see 6 T. R. 623, 626, as to death.

And if such clerk or servant be improperly dismissed before the end of the year or other time of his hiring, he may, on showing his readiness to complete the service, recover wages for the full time of his hiring, on pleadings properly framed. See Gandall v. Pontigny, 4 Camp. 375; 1 Stark. 198, S. C.; Archard v. Horner, 3 C. & P. 349.

In R. v. Whittlebury, 6 T. R. 467, Lawrence, J., says, "No money is due from the master to the servant until the completion of the year or the end of the service."

In Dalt. c. 58, p. 141, Com. Dig. Justices, B. 63, it is said, that if a servant (id est, a labourer, &c.) of his own accord shall depart from his master before his time expire, he shall lose all his wages. But if he depart with the consent of his master, he shall have his wages for the time he served.

A servant of any description, when discharged for misconduct (as to which see, ante, 360, 362), is not entitled to any wages from the day of his discharge. See Robinson v. Hindman, 3 Esp. 235.

But if a domestic servant has not been guilty of misconduct, and the master discharges him without warning, the servant, in that case, will be entitled to a

WAGES OF ARTIFICERS, &c. month's wages beyond the wages due for the period of actual service. Admitted per Ld. Kenyon, C. J., S. C., 2 Selw. N. P. 1032.

Sickness.

A servant incapacitated from actual service during part of the time of his living, by sickness, is still entitled to wages during that period. Ante, 362, 363.

But a master is not bound to provide a domestic servant with medical attendance and medicines during sickness; but if a servant fall sick, and the master call in his own medical man to attend such servant, the master will be liable, and cannot deduct the charges for such medical attendance out of the servant's wages, unless there be a special contract between the master and servant to that effect. Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80; and see Newby v. Wiltshire, 2 Esp. 739; Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 247; Watling v. Walters, 1 C. & P. 132; sed vide Scarman v. Castell, 1 Esp. 91.

Breakages.

Against the claim for wages, the master cannot, without an express agreement to that effect, set off the value of goods lost or broken by the servant's carelessness, however gross. See 4 Camp. 134. The master's remedy, in such case, would be by cross action.

Clothes.

A servant, engaged at 30 guineas a year and a suit of clothes, was provided with a livery suit on his entering into the service. He was wrongfully turned away in the year: held, he could not maintain trover for the suit of clothes. 3 C. & P. 470; and see id., 349.

Presumed payment.

If a servant has left his service for a considerable time, without claiming wages, the presumption is, that all his wages have been paid. Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80.

And in a case cited in 4 C. & P. 81, n., tried some time back at Guildhall, which was an action by a workman at a sugar-refiner's, a witness proved that the plaintiff had worked there for more than two years. But Abbott, C.J., said, that he should direct the jury to presume that men employed in that way were regularly paid every Saturday night, unless some evidence was given on the part of the plaintiff to satisfy the jury that the plaintiff had, in point of fact, never been paid; and, as no such evidence was produced, the plaintiff was nonsuited.

How disputes relating to

By the 13 Geo. I. c. 23, for the better regulation of woollen manufactures, and for preventing disputes among the persons concerned therein, and for limiting a time for prosecuting for the forfeiture appointed by an act of the 12th year of his majesty's reign, in case of payment of the workmen's wages in any other manner than in money, sect. 5, it is enacted, that all disputes and demands relating to work, wages, or damages between any clothier or maker of woollen goods, or goods mixed with wool, and any weaver or other person or persons employed in such manufactures, shall be heard and determined by two or more justices of the peace for the county, division, or place where such dispute or demand shall arise, who are hereby required and authorized, upon complaint to them made, to summon the parties, and to hear and examine upon oath, and adjudge such satisfaction, and to give such costs and damages to the party aggrieved, as in their discretion shall seem reasonable, and to issue their warrant or warrants to levy such costs and damages by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person or persons, who shall refuse, for the space of ten days, to pay such costs and damages by them so adjudged; and for want of a sufficient distress, to commit the party to the county gaol or house of correction, for any time not exceeding the space of three months, or until satisfaction shall be made by the party so offending. See the enactment in full, ante, p. 372.

In the case of R. v. Heywood and another, 1 M. & S. 624, it was determined that this sect. 5 of the 13 Geo. I. c. 23, for settling "disputes between clothiers or makers of woollen goods, and weavers, or persons employed in such manufactures," does not relate to demands against clothiers by the owner of a scribbling and carding-mill, for work done by him for the clothiers, in teasing, scribbling, carding, and stubbing the wool at his mill: therefore, the court refused a mandamus to two justices to hear and examine such demands. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., said, "the penal provisions of this statute show that it is not applicable to the adjustment of debts between parties of equal rank in trade. 'Wages,' is the emphatical word denominating the character of the person who is authorized to apply, and all the words seem to express the relation between master and servant." This view of the statute is confirmed by reference to other statutes on the same subject, especially the 14 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 14, ante, 375.

The 13 Geo. I. c. 23, s. 6, provides, that it shall be lawful for any person aggrieved by any order of such justices, to appeal to the justices of peace at the next general quarter sessions to be holden for the county, division, or place where such order shall be made, giving six days' notice in writing of such appeal; and the justices in their quarter sessions are hereby authorized and required to hear and determine the matter of such appeal; and to make such order, and to award such costs and damages as to them in their discretion shall seem reasonable; and to levy, by their order or warrants, such costs and damages so awarded, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of any person or persons who shall refuse to obey the same; and, for want of sufficient distress, to commit the party to the county gaol or house of correction, for any time not exceeding three calendar months, or until such satisfaction shall be made by the parties offending; and such award or order of the justices at the quarter sessions shall be final; nor shall the proceedings of any justice or justices out of sessions, or of the justices in their sessions, in pursuance of this act, be liable to be removed by certiorari or other form or process of law. SECT. 2. Sect. 16. "That every penalty or punishment directed by, or other provision contained in the said recited act, in respect to the said materials, so far as the said recited act is not varied by this act, and all the provisions in this act contained in respect to the said materials, shall extend and be applicable to any tool or tools, and implement or implements, with which any person or persons shall be entrusted for making, working up, or manufacturing, the said materials, and also to any drug or drugs, ingredient or ingredients, with which any person or persons shall be entrusted, for the purpose of dyeing, preparing, or manufacturing such of the aforesaid materials as are usually dyed, prepared, or manufactured, in the same manner as if the said tools and implements, drugs and ingredients, were particularly mentioned, both in the said recited act and in the preceding provisions of this act."

By 17 Geo. Sect. 15. "That it shall be lawful for the owner or owners of any such materials, from time to time, as occasion shall require, to demand entrance, and enter, at all seasonable hours in the day-time, into the shops or outhouses of any person or persons employed by him or them to work up any of the said materials, or other place or places where the work shall be carried on, and there to inspect the state and condition of such materials; and in case of refusal, by any such person or persons so employed, to permit such entrance or inspection, he, she, or they so refusing, shall forfeit and pay such sum of money, not exceeding 40s., nor less than 10s., as the justices before whom he, she, or they shall be convicted, shall think proper, to be recovered and applied in the same manner as is by this act directed for the misdemeanor of being in the possession of any such materials, without being able to account satisfactorily for such possession."

Materials not used to be returned.

Sect. 7. "That so much of the said recited act as allows twenty-one days after the preparing, working up, or manufacturing the said materials, for returning so much of the said materials as shall not be used in such preparing, working up, or manufacturing, and declares that the punishment for not so returning the said materials within the said time, shall be the same as under the said act is directed for purloining or embezzling, shall be repealed; and only eight days shall be allowed for returning the said materials in manner aforesaid; and the punishment for not returning them within the said eight days shall be the same as is by this act directed to be inflicted for purloining or embezzling."

Power of the justices.

Sect. 10. "That it shall and may be lawful for any two justices of the peace of any county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, upon complaint made to them, upon oath, by any one credible person, or (being of the people called Quakers) upon solemn affirmation, that there is cause to suspect that any such purloined or embezzled materials, whether mixed or unmixed, wrought or unwrought, are concealed in any dwelling-house, outhouse, yard, garden, or other place or places, by virtue of a warrant under their hands and seals, to cause every such dwelling-house, outhouse, yard, garden, or place, to be searched in the day-time; and if any such materials, suspected to be purloined or embezzled, shall be found therein, to cause the same, and the person or persons in whose house, outhouse, yard, garden, or other place, the same shall be found, to be brought before any two justices of the peace for the same county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place; and if the said person or persons shall not give an account, to the satisfaction of such justices, how he, she, or they came by the same, then the said person or persons so offending, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished in manner hereinafter mentioned, although no proof shall be given to whom such materials belong."

Peace-officers may apprehend suspected persons.

Sect. 11. "That every peace-officer, constable, headborough, or tithing-man, in every county, city, town corporate, or other place, where there shall be officers, and every beadle within his ward, parish, or district, and every watchman, during such time only as he is on his duty, shall and may apprehend, or cause to be apprehended, all and every person or persons who may reasonably be suspected of having or carrying, or any ways conveying, at any time after sunset and before sunrise, any of such materials suspected to be purloined or embezzled, and the same, together with such person or persons, as soon as conveniently may be, convey or carry before any two justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, within which the suspected person or persons shall be apprehended; and if the person or persons so apprehended in conveying any such materials, shall not produce the party or parties duly entitled to dispose thereof, from whom he, she, or they bought or received the same, or some other credible witness, to testify upon oath, or (being of the people called Quakers) upon solemn affirmation, to the sale or delivery of the said materials (which oath or affirmation respectively such justices are hereby empowered to administer), or shall not give an account, to the satisfaction of such justices, how he, she, or they came by the same; then the said person or persons so apprehended shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished in manner hereinafter mentioned, although no proof shall be given to whom such materials belong."

Sec. 12. "That in either of the two cases last before mentioned, when any person or persons, who shall be brought before any two justices of the peace, shall request of such justices to appoint a reasonable time to produce the person or persons duly entitled to sell or dispose of the same, of or from whom he, she, or they bought or received the same, or some one or more credible witness or witnesses to prove the sale or delivery thereof; then, and in such case, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, and they are hereby authorized and required to appoint such reasonable time as aforesaid, and to issue out a summons to the constable or other peace-officer of the parish or place where such person or persons, or such witness or witnesses, shall respectively reside, requiring him, her, or them, to appear before two or more justices, at such time and place as shall be so appointed by such justices, in order to be examined and give evidence on oath, or (being of the people called Quakers) solemn affirmation, of the several matters aforesaid; but such person or persons, at the time of making such request, shall enter into a recognizance, with or without surety or sureties, as such justices shall think proper, for his, her, or their appearance before them, at the time so to be set, or, for want of such recognizance as aforesaid, shall be committed until the time that shall be set or appointed by the said justices for the appearance of such party or parties, witness or witnesses; and if, at such appointed time, such person or persons shall be convicted of any of the offences aforesaid, then, and in such case, he, she, or they, shall suffer such punishment as is hereinbefore directed to be inflicted on persons guilty of such offences."

Sec. 13. "That where any person or persons shall be convicted of a misdemeanor in either of the two cases last before-mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for the justices before whom the conviction shall be, to cause the said materials so found or seized as aforesaid, to be deposited in the hands of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the place where such materials shall be found or seized, or in any other convenient place, for any time not exceeding thirty days; and, in the meantime, to order the said churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or one of them, to insert an advertisement in some one or more of the public newspapers usually published or circulated in or near such place, or otherwise to cause notice to be given by some public crier, and by fixing on the church or chapel door notice describing such materials, and where the same are so deposited, to the end that persons having lost such materials, or any reputable person or persons in their behalf, may come and claim the same: and in case any person or persons can prove his, her, or their property in the said materials upon oath, or (being of the people called Quakers) upon his, her, or their solemn affirmation, to the satisfaction of any two justices of the peace for such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, then such justices shall order restitution of such materials to the owner or owners thereof, after paying the reasonable charges of removing, depositing, and giving public notice of the same; but if, before the end of the said thirty days, no person or persons shall come and prove his, her, or their property in such materials, nor any reputable person or persons on his, her, or their behalf, then the said justices shall order and direct the same to be sold for the best price that can reasonably be had, and after deducting such charges as aforesaid, together with the charges of sale, one moiety of the money arising from such sale shall be given to the person or persons, or either of them, who shall apprehend or prosecute the offender or offenders guilty of either of the misdemeanors aforesaid, as the said justices shall appoint; and the other moiety thereof, either to and amongst the poor of the parish, town, or place, where the conviction shall be, or to such public charity or charities as the justices convicting shall appoint."

county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, to issue his warrant for apprehending and bringing before any two or more justices of the peace of the same county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, the person or persons charged with such offence; and the justices before whom such person or persons shall be brought, are hereby authorized and required to hear and determine the matter of such complaint, and to proceed to judgment and conviction thereupon."

Conviction.

Sect. 21. "That in respect to all offences which . . . shall be committed against the said recited act of the twenty-second of George the Second, so much of the said act of the twenty-third of George the Second as prescribes a form of conviction for offences against the said act of the twenty-second of George the Second, shall be repealed; and that . . . the justices before whom any offender shall be convicted of any offence, either against the said act of the twenty-second of George the Second, or varied by this act, or against this act, shall cause the conviction to be certified to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace to be held in and for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, where such conviction was made, to be filed with the records of such sessions; and such conviction shall and may be drawn up and written on parchment, and certified in the following form of words, as far as the name of the person and the nature of the case will admit of; that is to say,

"Middlesex [or } Be it remembered, that on the . . . day of . . . in any other place, as } the year of our Lord . . . , A. B. was convicted before the said county of, or, for the city, liberty, town, or place aforesaid, in the said county [as the case shall be] of . . .]. [Here specify the offence, and when and where the same was committed.] Given under our hands and seals, the day and year first above written."

It has been said, that it will not be sufficient merely to follow this form of conviction, there being a discretionary punishment as to some of the offences included in this act. See Evans, Col. Stat., Part VI., Class XXXI., Vol. 8, p. 217. (1.) Sed query.

It has also been observed, where there is a discretion as to the duration of imprisonment to be suffered for want of distress, as in cases depending upon sect. 4, the general practice of the sessions has been to require such imprisonment to appear on the face of the conviction, and it seems to be necessary that it should so appear. Upon a conviction under that section, it may be proper, after stating the offence, to proceed as follows:—"And we do adjudge, that for the said offence, being his first offence, the said John Smith hath forfeited the sum of 40*l.*, which we direct shall be applied as follows; that is to say, that, in the first place, the sum of 5*l.*, being the expense of the prosecution, shall be paid to A. B.; that, in the next place, the sum of 15*l.* shall be paid to C. D., being the party injured by the said offence, as a satisfaction for the same; and that afterwards the sum of 10*l.* shall be paid to S. S., who informed us of the said offence; and that the sum of 10*l.*, being the remainder of the said penalty, shall be paid to the overseers of the poor of the town of M. aforesaid, where the said conviction is, to be distributed to and amongst the poor of the said town; and that, in case the said penalty shall not be paid on this conviction, the said J. S. shall be committed to the house of correction at . . . , in the said county, for six months, unless the said penalty shall be sooner paid." Id. Burn, J., 24 ed., Vol. V.

Appeal.

By the 17 Geo. III. c. 56, s. 20, it is enacted, "that if any person shall think himself or herself aggrieved by the order or judgment of any justices before whom he or she shall have been convicted of any of the offences in the said acts of the twelfth year of the reign of King George the First, and the twenty-second year of the reign of King George the Second, or in this act, such person may appeal, and the said justices are hereby required to make known to such person, at the time of such conviction, his or her right to appeal, to the next general or general quarter-sessions of the peace to be holden for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, where such conviction shall have been made (such person, at the time of such conviction, giving to such justices notice in writing of his or her intention to appeal, and also entering into a recognizance, at the time of such notice, with sufficient sureties, conditioned to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of, and pay such costs as shall be awarded by, the justices at such sessions); but if the person giving such notice of appeal shall not, at the time of giving such notice, enter into such recognizance as aforesaid, then the justices, to whom such notice of appeal shall have been given, shall and may commit such person or persons to the house of correction, or other public prison, of such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, there to remain until the said next general or general quarter-sessions of the peace to be holden in and for such place, unless such recognizance shall be sooner entered into; and the said justices before whom such conviction shall have been made, or any other two or more justices of the same county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, are hereby empowered and required to take, and the justices at such sessions are hereby authorized and required, upon due proof made of such notice of appeal, either by the acknowledgment of the justices to whom the same shall have been given, or otherwise, to hear and determine the matter of the said appeal, and to award such costs as to them shall appear just and reasonable, to be paid by either party: and if, upon the hearing of such appeal, the judgment of the justices before whom the appellant shall have been convicted shall be affirmed, such appellant shall, within forty-eight hours next after the same shall be so affirmed, suffer such corporal punishment as shall have been directed to be inflicted upon him or her for the offence whereof he or she shall have been convicted, or shall immediately pay the sum which he or she shall have been adjudged to forfeit, together with such costs as the justices in the said sessions shall award to be paid by him or her, for defraying the expenses sustained by the defendant or defendants in such appeal; or, in default of making such payment, shall be committed to the common gaol, or house of correction, in the same manner, and for the same time, to be computed from the affirmance of such conviction, as shall be directed by the original judgment of conviction, unless the person or persons so convicted shall have been imprisoned under the original conviction, in which case the time for which such person or persons shall have been so confined shall be included in the order of confirmation."

Upon a conviction by two justices for an offence against the stat. 17 Geo. III. c. 56, if the justices at the time of such conviction make known to the person convicted his right to appeal, and he declines appealing, they need not proceed to inform him of the necessary steps to be taken by him in order to appeal. *R. v. This section takes away the writ of certiorari only from offences for the first time created by 22 Geo. II. c. 27, and does not apply to those created by 12 Geo. I. c. 34, and extended to the silk and cotton trades by 22 Geo. II. c. 27. This was decided in the case of R. v. Rogers, 5 B. & A. 773, where a rule had been granted for a certiorari to remove an order of sessions, confirming a warrant of distress, signed by two justices, for enforcing the payment of wages, from Thomas Kay to William Rogers, for work done by the latter in the silk manufacture and the cotton manufacture. The wages for which the warrant issued, had been previously paid in goods, which payment the justices altogether disallowed. The sessions, on appeal, considered the point of law so doubtful, that they confirmed the order, subject to a special case. The question was, whether the certiorari was taken away. Et per Bayley, J., "By the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, a variety of specific offences were created; and that having been done, by the last clause the provisions of the 12 Geo. I. c. 34, were extended to the silk and cotton trade. Now, I think that the best construction we can give to the 17 Geo. III. c. 56, s. 22, on which the question turns, will be to hold, that it extends only to the offences created for the first time by the 22 Geo. II. c. 27. If so, the writ of certiorari, in the present case, is not taken away." And the writ was granted.

False reeling of yarn.

By the 14 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 1, so much of the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, as relates to the punishment for reeling false and short yarn is repealed.

Sect. 2. "That, from and after the passing of this act, if any person or persons shall reel false or short yarn, and shall be thereof lawfully convicted by the oath of the owner of such yarn, or in case such owner is one of the people called Quakers, then upon the solemn affirmation of such owner, or of any other credible witness or witnesses, or by the confession of the person or persons charged with such offence, before any one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place where such offence shall be committed, or where the person or persons so charged shall reside or inhabit (which oath such justice or justices is and are hereby empowered and required to administer), shall, for the first offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20s., nor less than 5s.; and for the second offence, any sum not exceeding 5*l.*, nor less than 40s.; and for the third and every other offence, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices of the peace to commit the person or persons so convicted to the house of correction, or other public prison of such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, there to be kept to hard labour for the space of one calendar month, and also to order the person or persons so convicted to be once publicly whipped at the nearest market-town to where the offence was committed, and upon a market day; all which penalties and forfeitures shall go to the party aggrieved."

Sect. 3. "That the justice or justices before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall cause the said conviction to be made out in the manner and form following; that is to say,

Form of conviction.

"Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , A. B. is convicted before me, , [or, us], of his majesty's justices of the peace for , [specifying the offence, and the time and place when and where the same was committed, and also specifying that it is the first, second, or third offence, against this act, as the case shall be.] Given under my hand and seal [or, our hands and seals], the day and year aforesaid."

Which conviction the said justice or justices shall cause to be fairly wrote on parchment, and returned to the next general quarter-sessions of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place where such conviction was made, to be filed by the clerk of the peace, and remain and be kept among the records of such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place."

Appeal.

Sect. 5. "That if any person or persons, who shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall be desirous of appealing to the next general or quarter-sessions of the peace to be holden for the county, riding, city, or place, wherein the cause of complaint shall arise, such person may, at the time of such conviction, enter into a sufficient recognizance conditioned to try such appeal, abide the order of, and pay such costs as shall be adjudged by the justices at such sessions; and the said justices, at such sessions, shall and are hereby authorized and required to take cognizance of such appeal, and may affirm such conviction, and award such costs, as they the said justices shall think proper; and in case the same are not paid, according to the order of the said justices, such costs may be recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person who ought to pay the same, by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place where such person shall be or reside; and if no goods and chattels belonging to such person can be found, sufficient to pay the costs, and the charges of making such distress, the said justices may cause the person to be committed to the common gaol of such county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for the space of three calendar months; and the determination of the said sessions shall be final, binding, and conclusive, to all intents and purposes: and no order made concerning any of the matters aforesaid, or any other proceedings to be had touching the conviction or convictions of any offender against this act, shall be quashed or vacated for want of form, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

By the Oath of the Owner of the Yarn—This is a singular instance of a conviction on the oath of a person doubly interested,—namely, both as owner of the goods, and as entitled to the whole forfeiture.

(He shall for the first Offence)—The word he is wanting in the act, to make up the sense.

May affirm such conviction—By the word affirm being mentioned, and not the word quash also, it may be doubted whether the sessions hath hereby sufficient power given to quash the conviction.

By the 15 Geo. III. c. 15, "that from and after the passing of this act, the several pecuniary penalties inflicted by the said act upon persons who shall be convicted of reeling false or short yarn, together with the costs and charges attending such prosecutions, shall (in case the same are not paid according to the order of the justice or justices before whom such person or persons shall be so convicted) be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant or warrants under the hand and seal, or hands and seals, of the justice or justices before whom such offender or offenders shall be so convicted, together with the costs and charges of making such distress and sale; and if no goods and chattels belonging to such offender or offenders can be found sufficient to answer the said penalties, together with the costs and charges of such distress and sale, then such justice or justices shall and may cause such offender or offenders to be committed to the common gaol, or house of correction, of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, where such offence shall be committed, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for the space of one calendar month, unless such penalties and forfeitures, and the reasonable charges of such distress and sale, shall be sooner paid and satisfied."

With respect to the several counties of York, Lancaster, and Chester, additional regulations are made by the 17 Geo. III. c. 11, which enacts that committees of the manufacturers from time to time shall appoint inspectors, who shall examine the reels and yarn, and cause offenders to be convicted; and for the expenses thereof, a fund shall be established out of the drawbacks of the duty on soap allowed to the manufacturers for soap consumed in the woollen manufactures. Which regulations, being of considerable length, and only concerning the said three counties, it is thought sufficient to refer to the statute itself.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 52, the 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, relative to the powers of justices in determining complaints between masters and servants, is extended "to all persons engaged, whether as masters, servants, apprentices, or otherwise, in the several manufactures, trades, and occupations," mentioned in the 17 Geo. III. c. 56, ante, 385, &c. relative to silk, &c.

Wages to be paid in money.

By the 19 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1, "all lace merchants and dealers in lace, and all other persons who shall employ any person or persons in the making of bone or thread lace, or who shall buy any bone or thread lace of the maker or makers thereof, shall and are hereby required to pay such person or persons for their labour, and for all the lace so bought of them, in money only, and not with goods, or by way of truck, or in any other manner whatsoever, either in the whole or in part; any usage or custom to the contrary hereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 2. "That, if any lace merchant or dealer in lace, or other person, shall . . . pay any person or persons employed in making bone or thread lace, in the whole or in part, for their labour, or for the purpose of any bone or thread lace, with goods, or by way of truck, or in any other manner than with money only, every such lace-merchant, dealer in lace, or other person, so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 10*l.*, to be levied and recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, by warrant under the hand and seal of any one justice of the peace, within the county, city, or place, where such offence shall be committed; rendering the overplus, if any, to the owner or owners of such goods and chattels, after deducting the reasonable charges of such warrant, distress, and sale; and such forfeitures, when recovered, shall be paid to the party or parties aggrieved; and for want of sufficient distress, such justice shall, and is hereby authorized and required, to commit the offender to the common gaol, prison, or house of correction, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for the space of six calendar months, unless such penalty, and the charges attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid and satisfied."

Appeal.

Sect. 4. "That, if any person shall think himself or herself aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of this act, it shall and may be lawful for any such person to appeal to the justices of the peace at any general quarter sessions to be holden for the county, city, or place, where the act, order, or proceeding, appealed against shall be made or done, within six calendar months next after the making or doing thereof, the person appealing first giving fourteen days' previous notice to the person or persons in whose favour

Sect. 4. By construction of law upon the 5 Eliz. c. 4, the justices had a power of compelling the payment of the wages which they had rated and assessed; but that statute being deficient in two material points, to wit, in extending only to such wages as should be rated, and to servants in husbandry only; and moreover there being therein (as hath been observed) no power to admit the servant's oath in evidence: therefore, by the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, after reciting, that "whereas the laws now in being, for the better regulation of servants, and for the payment of wages to them, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, are insufficient and defective;" for remedy whereof it is enacted, that after the 25th March, 1747, "all complaints, differences, and disputes, which shall happen and arise between masters or mistresses, and servants in husbandry, who shall be hired for one year, or longer, or which shall happen or arise between masters and mistresses, and artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner, shall be heard and determined (a) by one or more justice or justices of the peace of the county, riding, city, liberty, town corporate, or place, where such master or mistress shall inhabit, (b) although no rate or assessment of wages has been made that year by the justices of the peace of the shire, riding, or liberty, or by the mayor, bailiff, or other head officers, where such complaints shall be made, or where such differences or disputes shall arise; which said justice or justices is and are hereby empowered to examine upon oath, (c) any such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or other labourer, or any other witness or witnesses, touching any such complaint, difference, or dispute, and to make such order (d) for payment of so much wages to such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or other labourer, as to such justice or justices shall seem just and reasonable, provided that the sum in question do not exceed 10*l.* with regard to any servant, nor 5*l.* with regard to any artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or labourer; and in case of refusal or non-payment of any sums so ordered, by the space of one-and-twenty days next after such determination, (e) such justice and justices shall and may issue forth and the 20 Geo 2. c. 19 does not give power to servants to summon masters for wages

By the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 2, it is enacted, "that it shall and may be law-ful to and for such justice or justices, upon application or complaint (b) made, upon oath, by any master, mistress, or employer, against any such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or labourer, touching or concerning any misdemeanor, miscarriage, or ill-behaviour, in such his or her service or employment (which oath such justice or justices is and are hereby empowered to administer) to hear, examine, and determine the same; and to punish the offender by commitment (c) to the house of correction, there to remain and be corrected, (d) and held to hard labour for a reasonable time, not exceeding one calendar month, or otherwise by abating some part of his or her wages, or by discharging such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or labourer, from his, her, or their service or employment: and in like man-ner also it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices, upon any complaint or application, upon oath, by any such servant, (e) artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or other labourer, against such master, mistress, or employer, touching or concerning any misuse, refusal of necessary provision, cruelty, or other ill-treatment of, to, or towards such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or other labourer, and to summon (f) such master, mistress, or employer to appear before such justice or justices, at a reasonable time to be prefixed in such summons; and such justice or justices shall and may examine into the matter of such complaint, whether such master, mis-tress, or employer shall appear or not; proof being made, upon oath, of his or her being duly summoned; and upon proof thereof made, upon oath, to his or their satisfaction, to discharge (g) such servant, artificer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, or other labourer, of and from his said service and employment; which discharge shall be given under the hand and seal or hands and seals of such justice or justices gratis."

Sect. 6. "That no writ of certiorari, or other process, shall issue or be issuable to remove any proceedings whatsoever, had in pursuance of this act, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

By the 27 Geo. II. c. 6, s. 1, the seventh section of the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, is repealed.

Sect. 2. "That . . . all the provisions and regulations in the said act mentioned and contained, relating to servants in husbandry, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers, shall extend to such tinnerns and miners as are or shall be employed in the stannaries in the counties of Devon and Cornwall respectively, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the said provisions and regulations were herein particularly repeated and set forth; any law, statute, usage, privilege, or jurisdiction whatsoever, to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. "That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to hinder or restrain any person from applying to the stannary courts, or to the warden, vice-warden, or stewards of the stannaries, in relation to any of the matters hereinbefore mentioned, in the same manner as such person might have done before the making of this act."

Meaning of Words "other Labourers"—It was formerly supposed, that the words in the statute 20 Geo. II. c. 19, "and other labourers," meant only labourers in any of the enumerated trades; but in the case of Lowther v. the Earl of Radnor and Eyre, 8 East, 113, they received a more enlarged construction. To an action of trespass for taking the plaintiff's goods, the defendants, who were justices of the peace for the county of Wilts, justified under this statute; and, on the trial, a special case was reserved for the opinion of the Court of King's Bench. On the 27th of November, 1804, the defendants made this order:—"Wilts, to wit. To T. Lawes, one of the tithing-men, &c. Whereas J. Sopp, of, &c. labourer, hath complained unto J. T. B., one of the justices, &c., that G. Lowther, Esq., of, &c., refused to pay unto him, the said Sopp, 4*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* for wages justly due to him for work and labour done by the said J. Sopp and by T. Franklin, in the service of the said G. Lowther, by digging and steaning part of a well at, &c. The order then stated that Mr. Lowther was summoned to answer the complaint, but that he did not appear, and that the defendants, as justices, examined, at the time and place appointed, into the complaint, and adjudged it to be true, and ordered Mr. Lowther to pay the money to J. Sopp. Mr. Lowther appealed to the Wiltshire quarter-sessions against this order, where the order was affirmed. After this, the two defendants made a warrant of distress against Mr. Lowther, stating all the above facts, under which the plaintiff's goods were taken. The case also stated, that "steaning a well" means lining it with stones and mortar. That Sopp had, on other occasions, been employed by the plaintiff as a labourer in husbandry. That the work was performed under a contract between the plaintiff and Sopp, by which the latter undertook to dig the well of a sufficient depth to supply the plaintiff's cattle with water, and for which, when it was deep enough to give a supply of water, he was to receive 2*s.* per foot. That, in the execution of the work, Sopp was to employ whom he pleased to assist him, but the money was to be paid to Sopp alone. And that Sopp had before done other work for the plaintiff, for which he was paid by the piece, and not by the day. For the plaintiff, it was contended, 1*st*, that the justices had no jurisdiction to make the original order; 2ndly, if they had, that they exceeded their jurisdiction, by ordering the money, which had been earned by Sopp and Franklin, to be paid to Sopp alone; 3rdly, that the plaintiff was not precluded from bringing his action by having appealed to the sessions. In the course of the argument, the court seemed to think that the second point was answered by the facts of the case, the contract having been made by Sopp alone, who was at liberty to employ any one under him: but they gave a decided opinion on the third point, that, if there were no original jurisdiction in the magistrates making the order, the appeal would not give it. On the principal question, however, the court took time to consider of their opinion, which was afterwards delivered by Lord Ellenborough, C. J.:—"The question arising on this special case depends on the terms of the complaint made to the magistrates, as recited in the order of the 27th of November, 1804; and how far the terms of that complaint bring the complainant within the provisions of the 20 Geo. II. c. 19. This complaint must be taken to be true in the terms of it; no evidence appearing to have been laid before the magistrates to contradict or vary it, and they having adjudged the same to be true. By this it appears that Sopp was a labourer; for he is described as 'J. Sopp, of Shrewton, labourer;' and that his demand was for wages due to him for work and labour done by himself and another person, T. Franklin; by which must be understood, that Sopp was employed to do the work either by the day or the piece, and that Franklin assisted Sopp in the work, under the retainer of Sopp, and not of Mr. Lowther; a common practice with labourers, as well in husbandry as in other business. Is Sopp then such a labourer as is by the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, subjected to the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace; and, of course, entitled to the benefit of that jurisdiction, to recover his wages, being under 5*l.*, by their summary process? The 20 Geo. II. c. 19, begins by reciting, that 'the laws now in being for the better regulation of servants, and for the payment of wages to them, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, are insufficient and defective,' and for remedy enacts, that all complaints, differences, and disputes, which shall happen and arise between masters or mistresses, and servants in husbandry, who shall be hired for one year or longer, or which shall happen or arise between masters and mistresses and artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers, employed for any certain time or in any other manner, shall be heard or determined by one or more justice or justices, although no rate or assessment of wages has been made that year by the justices. The 31 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 3, recites the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, and that doubts had arisen whether the words, 'any labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner,' extend to servants in husbandry hired for a less time than a year; and, for obviating the said doubts, enacts, that the said act and every clause and matter therein contained shall extend to all servants employed in husbandry, though hired for a less time than a year. In the argument of this case, it was contended that Sopp did not come within the meaning of the act of Parliament, 20 Geo. II. c. 19, because he was not a servant in husbandry, not a servant or labourer in any of the trades, callings, or employments enumerated in that act; and that the words used in the act "other labourers employed for any certain time or in any other manner," meant labourers in any of the enumerated trades only, and not labourers generally. With the first part of the argument, that he is not to be taken as a servant in husbandry, we agree; because he is not stated to be so in the order or complaint; and we cannot intend any thing to give the justices jurisdiction beyond what appears in the order. R. v. The Inhabitants of Hulcott, 6 T. R. 583. But we cannot accede to the latter part of the argument, that the operation of the statute is to be confined to labourers in the several enumerated employments. The most obvious construction is not so to confine it; and no case has been stated where the construction has been so confined. The mischief recited in the preamble of the act is general, viz. that the laws in being for the better regulation of servants, and the payment of wages to them, and to artificers, handicraftsmen, and labourers, are insufficient. The remedy provided by the act is, that all differences between masters or mistresses and servants in husbandry, who shall be hired for a year or longer (these words certainly restrain the operation of the remedy, as to servants, to those in husbandry only, and to such as are hired for a year or longer; the act then proceeds), or (differences) which shall happen or arise between masters and mistresses and artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, and other labourers employed for any certain time, or in any other manner. Now, unless these words, "other labourers," mean to comprehend a different description of persons from those before particularly mentioned, it is difficult to account for their insertion at all; but applying them to other labourers in any other trade or business, the sense will be perfect, and each word will have its meaning. But it may be said, that if such an extensive construction be put on these last words of the sentence, the former part, specifying certain trades, becomes nugatory. That, however, will not follow; for artificers, handicraftsmen, miners, &c., do not necessarily or properly fall under the denomination of labourers; there being, as I take it, a known distinction between a journeyman in any art, trade, or mystery, or other workmen employed in the different branches of it, and a labourer. It does not appear to us to be an objection to this construction, that by other acts of Parliament, passed subsequent to the 20 Geo. II., workmen or labourers in other particular trades or manufactures, or labourers generally, are subjected to certain regulations, which appear to clash with some of the provisions of this act; as the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, s. 9, for regulating certain manufactures therein mentioned; and the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, for better regulating apprentices and persons working under contract; and other statutes which may be pointed out. The true answer seems to be, that, at the time of passing one act, the legislature has not always had every other act containing provisions bearing on the same subject brought under its consideration. The act now under our consideration appears to have had for its object the affording to certain servants and workmen, and to labourers in general, a speedy, easy, and cheap mode of recovering their wages, when they amount to a small sum; and to masters an easy method of correcting trifling misdemeanors and ill behaviour in their workmen and labourers. These benefits are by the words of the act extended to servants in husbandry, to workmen in different branches of trade, and to other labourers employed for any certain time or in any other manner. The latter words are as general as may be; and we cannot find any reason in law or policy to say that they do not comprehend the case of Sopp, as stated in the order of the two magistrates. For these reasons, we are of opinion, on the questions submitted to us by the special case, that the justices making the original order had jurisdiction to make that order; and of course that the quarter sessions had jurisdiction to make the order on the appeal." And judgment was given for the defendants.

The decision of the court in the above case of Lowther v. Earl of Radnor proceeded on the facts laid before the justice, and the facts there stated in the information showed the relation of master and servant. In a later case, where A. had contracted with B. to build a wall for a certain price within a certain time, and having performed part of the work refused to complete it, this was held not to be a case of master and servant within the 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, s. 3, post, and that the magistrate had no jurisdiction. Lancaster v. Greaves, 9 B. & C. 628.

So, where A. contracted with B. to weave for him certain pieces of silks at certain prices, agreed on between them, it was held, on a commitment stating such a contract, that A. was not a servant within the 4 Geo. IV. c. 3 & 4, s. 3, and that the magistrates had no jurisdiction over him. Hardy v. Ryle, 9 B. & C. 603.

And in another case it was held that a person whose name is added to that of the regular officer in a warrant, under a fi. fa., by the plaintiff's attorney, and who is employed to watch the goods after they have been taken by the officer, is not a labourer within the jurisdiction of the justices under the 20 Geo. II. c. 19. Bramwell v. Penneck, 1 M. & R. M. C. 109; 7 B. & C. 536.

In a late case it was held, that where a magistrate, in his adjudication on this act, avers a complaint made on oath, and an examination on oath, it is not competent, in replevin for taking the plaintiff's goods, for the plaintiff to plead, in bar of a cognisance made under a warrant of distress and sale founded on that adjudication, that the servant did not duly make oath before the magistrate that the sum claimed was justly due to him for wages. Nor can he plead that the sum claimed was not due. Wilson v. Weller, 1 B. & B. 57; 3 Moore, 294; 8 Tenn. 521, S. C. And, in the same case, Richardson, J., said, that where a magistrate has competent jurisdiction, and adjudges, and, on refusal to pay, issues a warrant of distress and sale, the goods taken under it are not replevisable.

LABOURERS,
MINERS, &c.

By the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 4, after recing that "whereas it frequently happens that artificers, calico-printers, handicraftsmen, miners, colliers, keelmen, pitmen, glassmen, potters, labourers, and others, who contract with persons for certain terms, do leave their respective services before the terms of their contracts are fulfilled; to the great disappointment and loss of the persons with whom they so contract:" for remedy thereof it is enacted, "that . . . if any artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, shall contract with any person whomsoever for any time or times whatsoever, and shall absent himself from his service before the term of his contract shall be completed, or be guilty of any other misdemeanor, that then, and in every such case, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the county or place where any such artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, shall be found, and such justice is hereby authorized and empowered, upon complaint (a) thereof made upon oath to him by the person with whom such artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, shall have so contracted, or by his or her steward or agent, which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer, to issue his warrant (b) for the apprehending every such artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, and to examine into the nature of the complaint; and if it shall appear to such justice that any such artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, shall not have fulfilled such contract, or hath been guilty of any misdemeanor, it shall and may be lawful for such justice to commit (c) (d) every such person to the house of correction for the county or place where such justices † shall reside (e), for any time not exceeding three months, nor less than one month."

Justices empowered to grant warrants against artificers and others not fulfilling their contract, or being guilty of any misdemeanor,

† Sic.

A commitment in execution by a magistrate (on this act or any other act) must state that the party has been convicted: setting forth that he was charged on oath with the offence, is not sufficient. R. v. Cooper, 6 T. R. 509; and see Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 78; R. v. Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 575. In the case of R. v. Rhodes, 4 T. Rep. 220, it was objected that the warrant of commitment did not include a conviction, but only stated that the offender was charged before the justice with being a rogue and vagabond; and it did not proceed, as it ought to have done, to adjudge the defendant to be guilty of the offence charged; and it was held bad; see also Commitment, Vol. I.

The 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, after reciting, in s. 1, the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, and the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, enacts (s. 3) "that if any servant in husbandry or any artificer, calico-printer, handicraftsman, miner, collier, keelman, pitman, glassman, potter, labourer, or other person, shall contract with any person or persons whom-

Sect. 5 enacts, that every justice or justices of the peace before whom any complaint shall be made in pursuance of the said recited act, 20 Geo. II. c. 19, or the 31 Geo. Justices may order payment of wages within such time as they may think fit, upon complaint made, pursuant to 20 Geo. 2, c. 19, 21 Geo. 2, c. 11.

Order final.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 52, the provisions of this act of 4 Geo. IV. are extended to the servants named in the 17 Geo. III. c. 10, s. 56.

As to who are servants within the meaning of the 4 Geo. IV. c. 34, s. 3, see, ante, p. 402, 403. The act extends only to cases where the relation of master and servant exclusively exists; and therefore where A. had contracted with B. to build a wall for a certain price, within a certain time, and having performed a part of the work, refused to complete it, this was held not to be within the statute, and that a magistrate who acted upon the complaint of B. and convicted and committed A. to prison, was liable to an action for false imprisonment. Lancaster v. Greaves, 9 B. & C. 628; and see other cases, ante, p. 402 to 405.

The 6 Geo. III. c. 26, s. 5, provides, "that if any person shall think himself aggrieved by such determination, order, or warrant, of any justice of the peace as aforesaid, except an order of commitment, every such person may appeal to the next general quarter-sessions of the peace to be held for the county or place where such determination or order shall be made; such person giving six days' notice of his intention of bringing such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, to such justice of the peace and the parties concerned, and entering into a recognizance within three days after such notice, before some justice of the peace for such county or place, with sufficient surety, conditioned to try such appeal at, and abide the order or judgment of, and pay such costs as shall be awarded by, the justices at such quarter sessions; which said justices, at their said sessions, upon due proof of such notice being given, and of entering into such recognizance as aforesaid, shall and are hereby directed to proceed in, hear, and determine, the causes and matters of all such appeals; and shall give such relief and costs to the parties appealing or appealed against, as they, in their discretion, shall judge proper and reasonable; and their judgments and orders therein shall be final and conclusive to all parties concerned."

Persons aggrieved by the order of a justice (except in cases of commitment), may appeal; giving notice to the justice, and entering into recognisances, &c.

Justices at the quarter-sessions empowered to determine the appeal, and award costs.

Sect. 6. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to the stannaries in the counties of Devon and Cornwall, or to impeach or lessen the jurisdiction of the chamberlain of the city of London, or of any other court within the said city, touching apprentices."

No appeal lies to the sessions against a record of conviction and commitment in execution (which, under this act, appear to be one and the same thing) for three months, of a collier for absenting himself from his master's service. R. v. the Justices of Staffordshire, 12 East, 572. Who the employer.

The employer is the person on whose farm the employment is, and not the bailiff, though the contract of hiring may have been made personally with the bailiff. R. v. Hoseason, 14 East, 605. The defendant, a magistrate, having heard a complaint referred to him in his judicial character by the bailiff of his own farm against one G. Battersby, a labourer in husbandry, who had been employed upon the farm by the bailiff, and was charged by him for misconduct in his business and refusal to perform his work, had sentenced Battersby to be committed to the house of correction, there "to be corrected," and kept to hard labour for one calendar month," whereupon a criminal information was moved for against the defendant, grounded upon special circumstances of alleged misconduct, as well in respect of the general complexion of the case, as having been guilty of particular oppression in giving that judgment. In the course of the discussion, a question arose whether, if the defendant committed Battersby to the house of correction at all, he was not bound to sentence him also to be there corrected, by which was understood to be corporally corrected by whipping, as had, in fact, been done. [See the 20 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 2, and the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, for the better regulating apprentices and persons working under contract.] The court, upon consideration of the two statutes, were of opinion, that if the commitment in question (which was for one calendar month) were intended by the magistrate to be made under the 20 Geo. II., the correction thereby directed (by which they understood corporal punishment by whipping, and which they considered the sentence in question to import by the commitment to the house of correction, there to be corrected) was a necessary part of the judgment. But that, under the latter statute, which enabled the justice to commit the offender to the house of correction for any time not exceeding three months, nor less than one month, bodily correction was no part of the sentence; and they thought that the punishment inflicted by the two acts could not be blended together, as they appeared to be by the precedent in Burn's Justice, which they said was incorrect in that respect. But though the court thought that the sentence pronounced by the defendant in this case was legal in the form of it under the 20 Geo. II., yet Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in delivering their opinion upon that point, strongly expressed his disapprobation of the conduct of the defendant for sitting in judgment as a magistrate upon the imputed misconduct of his own labourer, of which he himself was to be considered as the complainant, though in form the complaint was preferred by his bailiff. It was impossible, he observed, to consider the defendant's bailiff as the employer of the labourer upon the defendant's own farm, with the sense of that word in the act, though the contract of hiring was made personally by the bailiff; and that it was a most abusive interpretation of the law for a man to erect himself as a criminal judge over the servants on his own farm for an offence against himself. However, as the defendant appeared, from the circumstances of the whole case, to have acted in this respect from an error of judgment, rather than from any bad motive; and in the mode of punishment adopted by him, which had been urged in aggravation, as evincing a vindictive motive, was probably misled by the erroneous precedent in Burn's Justice, which appeared to leave him no discretion in ordering corporal punishment, the court finally discharged the rule upon the defendant's payment of all the costs of the application.

Upon comparing the two statutes, viz. 20 Geo. II. c. 19, and 6 Geo. III. c. 25, there appears to be a distinction as to the applicants. In the former act, it is to be on application by any master, mistress, or employer; by the latter act, the complaint is to be by "the person with whom the labourer shall have contracted, or by his steward or agent:" and perhaps the punishment which may be legally affixed, may depend upon the station which the applicant may hold: and it also seems that the words guilty of any misdemeanor, in the 6 Geo. III. c. 25, are much more general than the words "any misdemeanor IN HIS SERVICE," in the 20 Geo. II. c. 19.

LABOURERS,
MINERS, &c.

By the 57 Geo. III. c. 122, s. 1, the provisions of the 12 Geo. I. c. 34, which prohibits the payment of the wages of persons employed in the woollen manufacture in goods, and to secure the payment of every part of their wages in good and lawful money of this kingdom, are extended to labourers employed in working and getting coal in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Provisions of 12
Geo. I. c. 34, extended to labourers in collieries.

But by the 58 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 1, it is enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every person or persons concerned in the trades or occupations, or concerned in the employment of artificers, workmen, or labourers of the description mentioned in the aforesaid acts, or any of them, to pay the wages of their, his, or her workman or workmen, labourer or labourers, artificer or artificers, in a note or notes of the governor and company of the Bank of England, or in a note or notes of any duly licensed banker or bankers, issued under the authority of the statutes for the time being in that behalf made and provided, and according to the provisions of the statutes for the time being for granting and regulating the stamp duties in all cases where his, her, or their labourer or labourers, workman or workmen, artificer or artificers, shall freely and voluntarily consent, and be willing to accept and receive the same in payment or satisfaction of his, her, or their wages, but not otherwise." See, ante, p. 365.

Wages may be
notes if the party
consents.

By the 57 Geo. III. c. 122, s. 2, it is enacted, that all the provisions of the 22 Geo. II. c. 27, to facilitate the labourers in the woollen trade recovering the wages for which they have stipulated, or to which they are entitled, as well as the provisions imposing a penalty on masters paying labourers in goods, are extended to persons employed in collieries, and in working and getting coal, in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in as full and ample a manner as if they had been enumerated in the aforesaid act; and all remedies, penalties, modes of recovery, powers, and privileges, and all other matters and things therein for these purposes contained, are hereby extended to parties concerned in coal works, or connected therewith.

57 Geo. 3, c. 122.
The provisions in 22
Geo. 2, c. 27, applicable to this act.

SECT. 3. The provisions of the acts of the 12 Geo. I., and of the 22 Geo. II., are extended to Scotland and Ireland.

The provisions of recited acts extended to Scotland and Ireland.

XXIII. Assaults on Conspiracy to raise Wages.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25.]

Assaults, in pursuance of a conspiracy to raise wages, punishable with hard labour.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25, it is enacted, that where any person shall be charged with and convicted of any of the following offences as misdemeanors; that is to say, amongst others, ante, of any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages; in any such case, the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and may also (if it shall so think fit) fine the offender, and require him to find sureties for keeping the peace. See this offence fully considered, title, Assaults, Vol. I. p. 278.

XXIV. Assaults on Seamen, &c. to prevent them Working.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 26.]

Assault on any keelman, &c., to prevent him from working, punishable, before two magistrates, with imprisonment not exceeding three months.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 26, it is enacted, that if any person shall unlawfully and with force hinder any seaman, keelman, or caster from working at or exercising his lawful trade, business, or occupation, or shall beat, wound, or use any other violence to him, with intent to deter or hinder him from working at or exercising the same; every such offender may be convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, and imprisoned and kept to hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding three calendar months: provided always, that no person, who shall be punished for any such offence by virtue of this provision, shall be punished for the same offence by virtue of any other law whatsoever. See this provision, and the general clauses and law, more fully collected, title, Assault, Vol. I. p. 283.

See also, as to seamen in general, ante, Seamen.

XXV. Servants Firing Houses.

[6 Anne, c. 31; 14 Geo. III. c. 78.]

By the 6 Anne, c. 31, s. 3, if any menial or other servant, through negligence or carelessness, shall fire or cause to be fired any dwelling-house or out-house, and be convicted thereof by oath of one witness before two justices, he shall forfeit 100*l.* to the churchwardens, to be distributed amongst the sufferers by such fire, as to the said churchwardens shall seem fit; and if he shall not pay the same immediately on conviction, on demand by the churchwardens, he shall be committed by the said justices to some workhouse or house of correction, for eighteen months, there to be kept to hard labour. See title Burning, Vol. I. p. 542, and a form there, p. 545.

Servants firing houses.

By the 14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 84, the same offence is provided against in exactly the same words, and the same penalty is imposed; but the words "common gaol" are added to the words "workhouse or house of correction." But this act is only applicable to offences of this kind in the bills of mortality, &c.

XXVI. Servant Stealing his Master's Goods.

[7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29.]

In title Marriage, Vol. III., full information as to this offence will be found.

It is an indictable offence to incite and solicit a servant to steal his master's goods, though the servant do not steal the goods, and no other act be done, except the soliciting and inciting. This was decided in the case of R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5; et vide Vol. I., p. 292.

Soliciting servant to steal master's goods.

And from the same case it appears that such offence is indictable at the quarter-sessions, as falling in with that class of offences, which, being violations of the law of the land, have a tendency, as it is said, to a breach of the peace, and are therefore cognizable by that jurisdiction. See, ante, Attempts, Vol. I.

Indictable offence.

XXVII. When Master may beat his Servant.

The master is allowed by law, with moderation, to chastise his apprentice for negligence or other misbehaviour, 1 Bla. Com. 428; 1 Haw. c. 29; 1 B. & C. 469; 1 D. & R. M. C. 339, title, Apprentice, Vol. I.; though he cannot delegate that authority to another. 9 Co. 76.

Master beating servant.

But a master has no such power over a domestic servant. 1 B. & C. 469.

And if the master or mistress beat any workman or labourer, it may be a good cause of discharge, on complaint to the justices. Dalt. c. 58, p. 141; F. N. B. 168; 1 Bla. Com. 428.

Where a master, in correcting his servant, happens to occasion his death, it shall be deemed homicide by misadventure; yet if in his correction he be so barbarous as to exceed all bounds of moderation, and thereby occasion the servant's death, it is manslaughter at least; and if he make use of an instrument improper for correction, and apparently endangering the servant's life, it is murder. 1 Haw. c. 29, s. 5; title Mistreatment, Vol. III. p. 245.

And if the workman or labourer shall depart out of his master's service, and the master happen afterwards to lay hold of him, yet the master in this case may not beat or forcibly compel such workman or labourer against his will to return or tarry with him, or do his service; but either he must complain to the justice, for such workman or labourer's departure, or he may have an action of covenant against him. Dalt. c. 121, p. 281, 282.

See, further, title Assault, Vol. I. p. 270.

XXVIII. Master may beat another in Defence of his Servant, or Servant in Defence of Master.

Master beating
fence of servant.

According to some opinions, a master shall not forfeit a recognizance of the peace for beating another in defence of his servant; nor the servant for beating another in defence of his master. 1 Haw. c. 60, s. 24.

But in Leeward v. Basilee, 1 Salk. 407; 1 Ld. Raym. 62; B. N. P. 18, it was held by the court, that a servant may justify an assault in defence of his master, but not a master in defence of his servant; because he might have an action for the loss of his service.

In the case of Tickel v. Read, on an action of assault and battery, the defendant pleaded a special plea in justification, that he assisted his servant, whom the plaintiff was beating. It was contended, that the law will not justify a master interposing on an assault against his servant, by assaulting the person who beats the servant, as it doth a servant in like case interposing for his master; because it is the duty of the servant, who is hired to serve and be assistant to his master's person, but not so the master to his servant. On the other hand, it was contended that the duty of the master and servant is reciprocal; and if the servant owe to the master fidelity and obedience, the master owes to the servant protection and defence; and therefore that the defendant might well justify by this plea. Ld. Mansfield, C. J.: "I cannot say that a master interposing, when his servant is assaulted, is not justifiable, under the circumstances of the case, as well as a servant interposing for his master: it rests on the relation between master and servant." Lofft, 215.

See, further, title Assault, Vol. I. p. 270.

XXIX. When Master answerable for Servant's Acts.

Crimes.

The master is indictable for a nuisance done by his servant, as for throwing dirt in the highways. 1 Ld. Raym. 264.

The proprietor of a newspaper is liable, criminally as well as civilly, for misconduct in the paper, e. g., for the publication of a libel, though he has nothing to do with the publication, and the whole is conducted by his servants. R. v. Walter, 3 Esp. 21; R. v. Alexander, M. & M. C. N. P.; and see, further, title Libel, Vol. III.

But nevertheless it seemeth, that the servant also is indictable in these cases; for Mr. Hawkins says, that a servant is not excused the commission of any crime by the command or coercion of his master. 1 Haw. c. 1, s. 14.

Torts.

If a servant commit a trespass by the command or encouragement of his master, the master shall be guilty of it, though the servant is not thereby excused, for he is only to obey his master in matters that are honest and lawful. 1 Bla. Com. 429.

A master is not liable for the wilful act of his servant, as by driving his master's carriage against another, done without the direction or assent of the master. But he is liable to answer for any damage arising to another from the negligence or unskillfulness of his servant acting in his employ. M Manus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106; Comyn's Rep. 469; 3 Wils 317.

If a servant driving a carriage, in order to effect some purpose of his own, wantonly strike the horses of another person, and produce an accident, the master will not be liable. But if, in order to perform his master's orders, he strikes, but injudiciously, and in order to extricate himself from a difficulty, that will be negligent and careless conduct, for which the master will be liable, being an act done in pursuance of the servant's employment. Per Cur. in Croft v. Alison, 4 B. & A. 590; and see Boucher v. Noidstrom, 1 Tawn. 568.

If horses are hired out to draw a private carriage, but are driven by the servant of the person who let them, he shall be liable for any injury done by them. Sammell v. Wright, 5 Esp. 263.

A person occasionally employed by the defendant as his servant, being sent out by him on his business, took the horse of another person, in whose service he also worked, and, in going, rode over the plaintiff. At the trial, it was left to the jury to say whether or not the horse was taken by the servant with the implied consent or authority of the defendant; and they having found a verdict for the plaintiff, the court refused to grant a new trial. Goodman v. Kennell, 1 M. & P. 241; 3 C. & P. 167. S.C.

The owner of a carriage hired four post-horses and two postillions of a livery-stable keeper for the day, to take him from London to Epsom and back. In returning, the postillions damaged the carriage of C.: held, that the livery-stable keeper, as owner of the horses and master of the postillions, was liable to C. for such damage. Smith v. Lawrence, 2 M. & R. 1; see the case of Laugher v. Pointer, 5 B. & C. 547.

A. and B. are partners in the business of public carriers: by a contract between them, A. finds horses and drivers for certain stages, and B. supplies for the remaining stages. They are, notwithstanding this division of the concern, jointly responsible for the misconduct and negligence of their drivers and servants throughout the whole distance; and it is no defence to B. that the servant by whom an injury is committed was the special servant of A., and hired and paid by A. alone. Weyland v. Elkins, Holt, 227, S. C.; 1 Stark. 272; see Moreton v. Hardern, 4 B. & C. 223; 6 D. & R. 275, S. C.

A master is liable for the contracts of his servants, within the scope of his employment, on the ground of an authority delegated by the master expressly or impliedly to the servant. Bac. Ab., Master and Servant, (K). The responsibility for the act of a domestic servant does not rest on the circumstance of the master being pater familias. The master's assent must in all cases appear either by express evidence thereof, or by the proof of facts, from which the law raises an inference that such assent was given. Chit. Jun., Contr. 58.

If a person, who has been in the habit of paying ready money, gives his servant money to buy meat for the use of the family, and the servant, instead of paying ready money, orders the meat on credit, and embezzle the money, the master is not liable. Stubbing v. Heintz, Peake, 47.

And so, where the master gives the servant money beforehand to pay for goods. Rusby v. Scarlett, 5 Esp. 76, Ellenborough.

But where he authorizes his servant to take up goods, and afterwards gives him money to pay, if the servant embezzle the money, the master is liable for the goods. Id.

When the master of a family is in the habit of paying ready money for articles furnished in certain quantities to his family, if the tradesman suffers other goods of the same sort to be delivered without informing the master, or satisfying himself that they were for his use, when, in fact, they were not, the master shall not be liable. Pearce v. Rogers, 3 Esp. 214; and see Stubbing v. Heinty, Peake, 47.

A master is not liable for spirituous liquors ordered by his butler in the name of the master, unless he had on former occasions paid for goods so ordered, or there is evidence to show that the butler had authority from the master for so doing. Maunder v. Comyers, 2 Stark. 281, Ellenborough.

Where articles are furnished to the use of a master, though the servant was by agreement to provide them, the master is liable to the tradesman who furnished them. Precious v. Abel, 1 Esp. 360.

If a coachman go in his master's livery, and hire horses, which his master afterwards uses, the master is bound to pay for the hire of the horses, although he had previously agreed to pay the coachman a large salary to provide horses; unless the person of whom the horses were hired had some notice that the coachman hired them on his own account, and not for his master. Rimell v. Sampayo, 1 C. & P. 254.

But if a servant employ a tradesman to do any work who has not been employed before by the master, and the tradesman does the work without communication with the master, though the thing to which it was done was the property of the master, he is not liable. Hiscot v. Greenwood, 4 Esp. 174.

See, further, Chit. Jun. Contr. 60.

XXX. Enticing away, &c. a Servant, and Right to his Services.

The remedy now pursued for retaining a servant in the service of another is an action by the old master against the new one, and the servant, or either of them, for damages. But, in order to entitle a man to the action, it is as necessary now as when the 35 Edw. III. st. 1. c. 1 (repealed by the 5 Eliz. c. 4), was in force, that the new master should know of the servant's engagement with the other at the time of his retaining him, or that he should afterwards refuse to restore him upon information or demand. Fawcett v. Beavres et al. 2 Lev. 63; 1 Leon. 240.

The retaining another person's servant during the time he has agreed to serve his present master, as it is an ungentlemanlike, so it is also an illegal act: for every master has, by his contract, purchased for a valuable consideration the service of his domestics for a limited time. The inveigling or hiring his servant, which induces a breach of this contract, is therefore an injury to the master; and for that injury the law has given him a remedy by a special action on the case; and he may also have an action against the servant for the non-performance of his agreement. 3 Bla. Com. 142; F. N. B. 167.

And an action will lie for receiving or continuing to employ the servant of another after notice, without enticing him away. Therefore, where no fault could be imputed to the defendant for taking the party into his service in the first instance, because then he had no notice of such party's prior engagement, yet, as soon as he had notice of that fact, he ought to have discharged him. A person who contracts with another to do certain work for him is the servant of that other till the work is finished, and no other person can employ such servant to the prejudice of the first master: the very act of giving him employment is affording him the means of keeping out of his former service. Blake v. Lanyon, 6 T. R. 221.

Hart v. Aldridge, 1 Cowp. 54. On a special verdict, the jury found that the plaintiff, being a shoemaker, employed a journeyman to make up shoes for him, and retained him by the piece, but not for any certain time. This man being hired by another, and leaving his service, the work being unfinished, the shoemaker brought his action against the person so hiring him for enticing his servant out of his service. The question was, whether this person be a servant of the plaintiff, so that he may maintain an action and recover damages on his being enticed from his service; and whether there be sufficient upon the verdict to entitle the plaintiff to recover. Lord Mansfield, C. J., asked how they defined the word journeyman. It was answered, that they apprehended it to mean no more than a man who was out of his time, and was not master. Lord Mansfield said farther, "Doth not a journeyman imply the particular relation of servant to the man? It is apparently a service. The jury have found expressly that he was hired by the piece; and this is a sufficient retainer. Journeyman, in the original etymology, is a servant for the day, in whose service the master hath certainly an interest. Many servants are taken to work by the piece; if otherwise, they would often be idle. This case lies upon the circumstance of his being found a journeyman; otherwise it might have been that the master took any who pleased to work for him to stay as long as he pleased, and go when he pleased." And Aston, J., said, "Every man is entitled to an action who hath sustained damages by wrong: therefore, if a servant be retained for any special work, and departs from this unfinished, an action will lie against any who seduces him to depart. And the seducer or enticer is much the greater offender." Judgment for the plaintiff.

No action lies for seducing a servant from his master, who had paid the penalty stipulated by his articles for leaving him. Bird v. Randall, 3 Burr. 1345; 1 Bla. R. 373, 387. S. C.

Nor for inducing a servant to leave his master's service at the expiration of the time for which he had hired himself, although he had no previous intention of quitting his master's service. Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 734.

Where negroes, in a state of slavery in a colony of Spain, escaped from their master's plantation, and took refuge and were received on board a British ship of war, whilst she was stationed at an island captured by his majesty's arms from the United States in time of war, and, after notice given to the officers commanding on the station that they were runaway slaves, the officers carried them to and left them at a British colony: held, by the Court of King's Bench, that a British merchant, resident in the colony, who claimed the slaves as his property, could not maintain an action against the officers for harbouring and detaining such negroes, although, by the lex loci from whence they escaped, slavery was permitted and tolerated. Forbes v. Cochrane, 3 D. & R. 679; 2 B. & C. 448, S.C.

See, farther, title Apprentices, Vol. I. p. 175.

A servant while in his master's service may solicit business from his customers for himself, when his service is at an end, and he sets up on his own account. Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732, Kenyon.

When servant may solicit customers.

If a servant, while in the employ of his master, make an invention, that invention belongs to the servant, and not to the master; but semble, that if the master employ a skilful person for the express purpose of inventing, the inventions made by him will so much belong to the master, as to enable him to take out a patent for them. Blossam v. Elsee, 1 C. & P. 558.

XXXI. Characters of Servants.

[32 Geo. III. c. 56.]

By the 32 Geo. III. c. 56, "for Preventing the Counterfeiting of Certificates of the Characters of Servants," after reciting, that "whereas many false and counterfeit characters of servants have either been given personally or in writing by evil-disposed persons, being, or pretending to be, the master, mistress, retainer, or superintendent of such servant, or by persons who have actually retained such servants in their respective service, contrary to truth and justice, and to the peace and security of his majesty's subjects; and whereas the evil herein complained of is not only difficult to be guarded against, but is also of great magnitude, and continually increasing, and no sufficient remedy has hitherto been applied:" it is enacted, "that, from and after the 1st day of July, 1792, if any person or persons shall falsely personate any master or mistress, or the executor, administrator, wife, relation, housekeeper, steward, agent, or servant of any such master or mistress, and shall either personally or in writing give any false, forged, or counterfeited character to any person offering him or herself to be hired as a servant into the service of any person or persons, then, and in such case, every such person or persons so offending shall forfeit and undergo the penalty and punishment hereinafter mentioned and in that behalf provided."

"That, from and after the said 1st day of July, 1792, if any person or persons shall be convicted of any either of the offence or offences aforesaid, by his, her, or their confession, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before two or more justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, where the offence or offences shall have been committed (which oath such justices are hereby empowered and required to administer), every such offender or offenders shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*.; one moiety whereof shall be paid to the person or persons on whose information the party or parties offending shall have been convicted, and the other moiety thereof shall go and be applied for the use of the poor of the parish wherein the offence shall have been committed; and if the party who shall have been so convicted shall not immediately pay the said sum of 20*l*. so forfeited, together with the sum of 10*s*. for the costs and charges attending such conviction, or shall not give notice of appeal, and enter into recognizance in the manner hereinafter mentioned and in that behalf provided, such justices shall and may commit every such offender to the house of correction, or some other prison, of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, in which he or she shall have been convicted, there to remain, and be kept to hard labour, without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding three months, nor less than one month, or until he or she pay the said sum so forfeited, together with such costs and charges, as aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "And whereas it most frequently happens, that no person is present at or privy to the giving of the character of a servant, except the persons by and to whom the same is given;" it is enacted, "that the informer, in any of the cases aforesaid, shall be, and shall be deemed and taken to be, a good and competent witness in law, notwithstanding he shall be entitled to a part of the said penalty where the same shall be levied, as aforesaid."

Sect. 8. "That if any servant or servants, who shall have been guilty of any of the offences aforesaid, shall, before any information has been given or lodged against him, her, or them for such offence, discover and inform against any person or persons concerned with him, her, or them, in any offence against this act, so as such offender or offenders be convicted of such offence in manner aforesaid, every such servant or servants so discovering and informing shall thereupon be discharged and indemnified of, from, and against all penalties and punishments to which, at the time of such information given, he, she, or they might be liable by this act, for or by reason of such his, her, or their own offence or offences."

Sect. 9. "And, for the more easy and speedy conviction of offenders against this act," it is enacted, "that all justices of the peace, before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of any offence against this act, shall and may cause the conviction to be drawn up in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect, as the case shall happen: videlicet,

Sect. 10. "That if any person shall think himself or herself aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of this act, such person may appeal to the justices of the peace at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace to be held for the county or place wherein the cause of complaint shall have arisen; such appellant entering into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, in the sum of 20l. each, conditioned to try such appeal, and abide the order of, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded by such justices at such general or quarter sessions, upon due proof of such notice being given, as aforesaid, and of the entering into such recognizance; which said justices shall hear and finally determine the causes and matters of such appeal in a summary way, and award such costs to the parties appealing or appealed against as they, the said justices, shall think proper, and the determination of such general or quarter sessions shall be final, binding, and conclusive, to all intents and purposes; and no conviction or order made concerning any matters aforesaid, or any other proceedings to be had, touching the conviction or convictions of any offender or offenders against this act, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

Parties aggrieved may appeal to the quarter sessions, where the matter may be finally determined in a summary way, &c.

Proceedings not to be quashed for want of form, or removed by certiorari.

Mr. Christian mentions a case tried at the sittings after Trinity Term, 1792, at Guildhall, against a person who had knowingly given a false character of a man to the plaintiff, who was thereby induced to take him into his service. But this servant soon afterwards robbed his master of property to a great amount, for which he was executed. And the plaintiff recovered damages against the defendant to the extent of his loss. This was an action of great importance to the public, and there can be no doubt but it was founded on strict principles of law and justice. Parley v. Freeman, 1 Bla. Com. 432, Christian's Edit.

Master not bound to give a servant a character, and liability for giving a false character.

In an action on the case, the declaration stated that the plaintiff's wife, having been retained by the defendant as a servant, was dismissed from the said service; that, after she was so dismissed, she had applied to a person of the name of Stewart, for the purpose of being retained and hired as a servant; that Mrs. Stewart was ready and willing to have hired and taken her into her service, if the defendant would have given her a character, and such character was satisfactory; that it was the duty of the defendant by law to have given her such character as she deserved; and then assigned a breach, that the defendant, not regarding such her duty, wholly refused to give her any character whatever; by reason whereof the said Mrs. Stewart refused to hire her into her said service. Plea of not guilty. On opening the pleadings, Ld. Kenyon, C. J., addressing himself to the plaintiff's counsel, said, "Can you make any thing of this action? I have read an abstract of the record; it is impossible to support this action." Upon the plaintiff's counsel replying, that he had no case, his lordship proceeded to observe, "There is no case; there is no foundation in law for this action. What one's real feeling would dictate, is one thing; but can you say that there is a legal obligation on one to give a servant a character at all? You are, indeed, to take care, if you do give a character, to give a true one; but you are not bound to give a character at all. I am confident that this action cannot be maintained." Carrol v. Bird, Sittings at Westm. after T. T. 40 Geo. III.; 3 Esp. 201. S. C. And see Ashover v. Brampton, Cald. 11, ante.

And when a master gives a bad character of a servant, the latter cannot maintain an action against the former, unless the account given be malicious as well as false. B. N. P. 8.

Even though the master make specific charges of fraud. Weatherstone v. Hancock, 1 T. R. 110.

In an action for libel, it appeared that the defendant, with whom the plaintiff had lived as servant, in answer to inquiries respecting her character, wrote a letter imputing misconduct to her whilst in that service, and after she left it; and the defendant also made similar parol statements to two persons that had recommended the plaintiff to her. Held that neither the letter itself nor the parol statements proved malice, and that consequently the letter was a privileged communication, and the plaintiff not entitled to recover. Child v. Afleck, 9 B. & C. 403.

In order to maintain an action against a master for giving a false character of a servant, extraordinary circumstances of express malice must be proved. Per Ld. Mansfield, C. J., Hargrave v. Le Breton, 4 Burr. 2425.

To prove such express malice, evidence that the character given is false, is admissible. Rogers v. Clifton, 3 B. & P. 587; King v. Waring, 5 Esp. 13.

A. having discharged his servant, and hearing that he was about to be engaged by B., wrote a letter to B., and informed him that he had discharged him for misconduct. B., in answer, desired further communication. A. then wrote a second letter to B., stating the grounds on which he had discharged the servant. In an action by the servant against A., for a libel contained in this letter, it was held, that, assuming the letter to be a privileged communication, it was properly left to the jury to consider whether the second letter was written by A. bonâ fide, acting under a belief that he was discharging a duty which he owed to the party who was about to take the plaintiff into his service, or with an intention to injure the servant. Pattison v. Jones, 8 B. & C. 578. Et, per Bayley, J.:—"Generally speaking, any thing said or written by a master when he gives the character of a servant is a privileged communication. But if the supposed libel be not communicated bonâ fide, it does not fall within the protection which the law gives to a privileged communication."

Sessions of the Peace. (b)

Four kinds.

THE term "Session of the Peace" is used to designate a sitting of justices for the execution of those purposes which are confided to them by their commission, and by several acts of Parliament. Of these sessions there are four kinds—petit, special, quarter, and general sessions: the first of which is a mere private meeting of justices, on their own motion; and the second, an assembly summoned for a particular purpose,—as, licensing alehouses, or appointing the overseers of a parish, or the like.

Under this head, we are to treat only of the latter, which are similar in every respect, except as to the time of holding. Petit and special sessions will be noticed in another place, post, Sessions, Petit & Special, p. 484.

A general sessions of the peace is a court of record, holden before two or more justices, whereof one is of the quorum, for execution of the authority given them by the commission of the peace, and certain statutes and acts of Parliament. Dalt. c. 185; Cro. Cir. C. 13. WHAT ARE, &c.

It is a meeting of justices for the execution of their general authority. Lamb. 379.

The sessions cannot be held without the presence of two justices. 1 Bla. Com. 354, n.

The king may grant a commission of the peace for a county, and under such commission the jurisdiction of the justices named in it will extend over the whole of such county; or he may grant it for any particular district or portion of a county, exclusive of the jurisdiction of the justices of the county at large; or he may by charter give the power of acting as justices, to certain officers in towns corporate, cities, and other places. In the latter cases, however, the justices of the county at large in which such district, town corporate, city, or other place, shall happen to be situate, can only be prohibited from interfering by special words in the commission or charter of the inferior jurisdiction, called technically "a non intromittant clause." 4 T. R. 456; et vide title Justices, Vol. III. p. 461 to 463.

According to Mr. Lambard, general and quarter sessions are synonymous terms; for he makes no distinction between them. This, however, is erroneous: for it seems that quarter sessions are a species only of the general sessions, and that such sessions only are properly called general quarter sessions, which are holden in the four quarters of the year, in pursuance of the 2 Hen. V.; and that any other sessions, holden at any other time for the general execution of the justices' authority, which by the said statute they are authorized to hold oftener than at the times therein specified, if need be, may properly be called general sessions, and those holden on a special occasion, for the execution of some particular branch of their authority, may properly be called special sessions. 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 47. Difference between general quarter and special sessions.

I. Time and Place of Holding the Sessions.

By the 36 Edw. III. c. 12, it is ordered, that the justices shall hold their sessions four times in the year, viz. one session within the Utas of the Epiphany, the second within the second week of Midlent, the third betwixt the feasts of Pentecost and of St. John Baptist, the fourth within eight days of St. Michael.

But by the 12 Rich. II. c. 10, the justices shall keep their sessions in every quarter of the year at least; and by three days, if need be: on pain of being punished according to the discretion of the king's council, at the suit of every man that will complain.

This statute did not specify the periods; but in Henry the Fifth's reign an act was passed for that purpose, 2 Hen. V. s. 1, c. 4, which directs, "that the justices of the peace in every shire named of the quorum be resiant within the same shire, except lords named in the commission of the peace; and also except justices of the one bench and of the other, the chief baron of the Exchequer, serjeants at the law, and the king's attorney for the time that the same justices, chief baron, serjeants at the law, and the king's attorney, be intending, and occupied in the king's courts, or otherwise in some other place occupied in the king's service; and make their sessions four times by the year,—that is to say, in the first week after the feast of St. Michael, and in the first week after the Epiphany, and in the first week after the clause of Easter, and in the first week after the translation of St. Thomas the Martyr, and more often, if need be; and that the same justices hold their sessions throughout the realm of England, in the same weeks every year from henceforth."

The strict regular exposition of this statute of 2 Hen. V. is, that if the feast-day fall upon a Sunday, the sessions shall be held in the week following, and not the same week. 2 Hale, 49.

54 Geo. 3, c. 84.

The holding of the Michaelmas quarter sessions was afterwards altered and regulated by the 54 Geo. III. c. 84, which, after reciting, "whereas the time now appointed for holding the quarter sessions for the Michaelmas quarter might be altered, so as to render the attendance at the same more generally convenient than it is at present," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, the quarter sessions for the Michaelmas quarter shall in every year be holden, for every county, riding, division, city, borough, and place, within England and Wales, and for Berwick-upon-Tweed, in the first week after the 11th day of October, instead of at the time now appointed for holding the same; and that all acts, matters, and things done, performed, and transacted at the time appointed by this act, for holding the said Michaelmas quarter sessions, shall be as valid and binding to all intents and purposes as if the same had been done, performed, and transacted at the time heretofore appointed for the holding of such sessions, notwithstanding any former act or acts to the contrary."

Sect. 2. "That nothing in this act shall extend, or be construed to extend, so as to alter or vary the time at which the sessions for London or Middlesex are now holden."

1 Wil. 4, c. 70.

These enactments still remain unrepealed, but the times of holding the general quarter sessions are now pointed out by the recent act of 1 Wil. IV. c. 70, s. 35, which, after reciting, "whereas the general quarter sessions of the peace are now directed to be held in each year in the first week after the eleventh day of October, in the first week after the Epiphany, in the first week after the clause of Easter, and in the first week after the translation of St. Thomas the Martyr; and whereas it will be expedient that the times of holding the general quarter sessions of the peace should be altered in part:" enacts, "that in the year of our Lord 1831, and afterwards, the justices of the peace in every county, riding, or division, for which quarter sessions of the peace by law ought to be held, shall hold their general quarter sessions of the peace in the first week after the eleventh day of October, in the first week after the twenty-eighth day of December, in the first week after the thirty-first day of March, and in the first week after the twenty-fourth day of June; and that all acts, matters, and things done, performed, and transacted at the times appointed by this act for the holding of the general quarter sessions of the peace shall be as valid and binding to all intents and purposes as if the same had been done, performed, and transacted at general quarter sessions of the peace holden at the times by law limited for the holding thereof before the passing of this act."

Are variously
counties.

The quarter sessions are in fact variously holden in several counties, some at one day, and some at another; yet it hath been ruled, that these are each of them good quarter sessions within the several acts that relate to quarter sessions; for those acts, especially the 2 Hen. V., are only directory, and in the affirmative; and therefore, though the sessions are held on another day, according to the general direction of the 12 Rich. II., yet they are quarter sessions. 2 Hale, 50.

And, on the same principle, it has been recently decided, that although the 54 Geo. III. c. 84, provides that the quarter sessions for the Michaelmas quarter shall be holden in the first week after the 11th of October, instead of the time then appointed for holding the same, this act also is only directory, and the Michaelmas quarter sessions may be lawfully holden in another week than that so specified by the statute. R. v. Justices of Leicester, 7 B. & C. 6.

The sessions in London and Middlesex are, it may be seen, excluded from the operation of the 54 Geo. III. c. 84; and the regulations under which they are held are distinct in many respects from those which govern the other parts of the kingdom.

By the 14 Hen. VI. c. 4, it is enacted, that, in Middlesex, the justices shall keep their sessions twice in the year at least, and more often (if need be) for any riot or forcible entry.

And, in consequence of the large population of the districts of London and Middlesex, their sessions are in fact holden eight times of the year; four as quarter sessions, not exactly at the times directed by the statutes, but as near to them as convenience will admit, and the other four as original general sessions, in the intervening periods; and both have equal jurisdiction to try and try indictments, except in cases where, by statute, jurisdiction is given exclusively to the quarter sessions. Burly v. Watson, 2 Bla. Rep. 1051.

In Middlesex, the justices have a commission of oyer and terminer, under which they act at the time when their sessions are holden. The sessions for the liberty of Westminster are only holden four times a year, and under a different commission of the peace from those for Middlesex; yet offences committed within the liberty may be prosecuted and determined at the county sessions; and if a party be bound by recognizance to prefer a bill of indictment, and prosecute for an offence, at the next session of the peace for Westminster, and do in fact prefer a bill at the next sessions for Middlesex, it is holden to be in compliance with the terms of his recognizance. Dick. Sess. by Tulf. p. 26.

It sometimes happeneth that, on the day appointed for holding the sessions, a sufficient number of justices do not appear. And a question arises, what is to be done in such a case? It seemeth to be generally understood that the sessions for that quarter of the year are irrecoverably lost. But the matter seemeth not altogether so desperate. For there are obvious remedies: by the first of which it may be possible to recover the sessions in the very identical week next after any of the respective holydays above mentioned; by the latter, at all events, a session may be held. As to the former case, there cannot be time, indeed, within that week, to summon a sessions de novo; but neither is that absolutely necessary. A session may be holden without a previous summons; and the justices there may adjourn to another day, and issue their precept to the sheriff against the day of adjournment. To which purpose, Mr. Lambard (380) saith thus: "Albeit that the sessions be commonly, and most orderly, summoned by a precept in writing; yet it is not altogether of necessity (for the making of a lawful sessions) to have it so. For if competent justices of the peace do get men to serve, and thereupon do hold a sessions, without any precept before directed, all presentments made before them by twelve lawful men shall be of force in law; but no man shall lose any thing for his default of appearance there, because no man had notice of their sitting." Thus far as to saving the original sessions' week; for how many adjournments soever shall be holden afterwards in that quarter of the year, all shall refer to the first commencement of the sessions; and thereby some processes or recognizances may be saved which may possibly run for appearance at the sessions to be holden in the week next after any of the holydays above mentioned. (a)

(a) In consequence of the unusual pressure of business in the year 1815, the magistrates of Stafford submitted the following queries to the law officers of the crown:—"Whether, either by the commission of the peace or by statute, the justices are empowered to hold a general sessions or an adjournment of the quarter sessions for the trial of prisoners, at such times and places as they may think proper, and for that purpose to summon jurors and compel the attendance of prosecutors and witnesses?"

and, if empowered so to do, whether it would be advisable to hold such sessions?" From the answer given to this, it appears that, where the quarterly meetings of justices are not sufficient for the despatch of business, they may adjourn the sessions to some intermediate day, instead of holding an extra-original session. This course, according to the opinion of the law officers alluded to, is unquestionably legal. See the opinion, 5 Burn's J. 24th ed. tit. Sessions.

But the general (and better) form of such instruments is otherwise. And certainly, though a session shall not be holden within a week after such feast-day, it doth not follow, that therefore it cannot be holden in any of the twelve weeks after. Undoubtedly, any two justices, one whereof is of the quorum, by the words of the commission of the peace, may issue their precept to the sheriff, to summon a session, for the general execution of their authority. And so far is the statute from saying, that if the sessions be not holden in the week next after such respective feasts as aforesaid, such session shall be void, the very same statute directs, that the justices shall hold their sessions more often if need be; and greater need cannot be than when the former meeting of the justices hath been frustrated. 2 Haw. c. 8, s. 41.

From the case of the King v. the Justices of London, 15 East, R. 632, it appears that, if sufficient justices do not appear on the day appointed for holding sessions, the magistrates may, indeed, afterwards hold a general session for general purposes; but it is not so certain that such session would be good as a quarter session, in respect of such matters as are expressly made cognizable at a quarter session only. The cases which have been supposed to prove that such subsequent session would not be good as a quarter session, do not establish that proposition, but merely prove that, where one original session has been actually holden, a second within the quarter cannot be also good as a quarter session. R. v. Polstead, 2 Strange, 1263; R. v. West, Torrington, Burr. S. C. 293.

1 & 2 Geo. 4,

And their jurisdiction was further extended by the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 63, which, after reciting the 28 Geo. III. c. 49, Justices, Vol. III., p. 460, "and whereas doubts have been entertained, whether justices of the peace for counties at large are thereby empowered to act for such counties at large, within any city, town, or other precinct having exclusive jurisdiction, but not being a county of itself," enacts "that it shall and may be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace acting for any county at large, or for any riding or division of a county in which there are several and distinct commissions of the peace, to act as a justice or justices for such county at large, riding, or division, in sessions or otherwise, at any place within any city, town, or other precinct, having exclusive jurisdiction, but not being a county of itself, and situate within, surrounded by, or adjoining to any such county at large, riding, or division; and that all and every such act and acts, matters and things which shall be done, or which may heretofore have been done, by such justice or justices of the peace for the said county at large, riding, or division, within such city, town, or other precinct, shall be as valid and effectual in the law as if the same had been done within the said county, riding, or division, to all intents and purposes whatsoever; provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to give power to the justices of the peace for any county at large, riding, or division, not being justices for such city, town, or other precinct, or any constable or other officer acting under them, to act or intermeddle in any matters or things arising within any such city, town, or precinct, in any manner whatsoever."

9 Geo. 4, c. 43.

This subject has still more recently engaged the attention of the legislature, and on the 15th of July, 1828, "An Act for the better Regulation of Divisions in the several Counties of England and Wales," was passed, by which, after reciting, "whereas by divers acts now in force it is enacted, that certain matters and things, in the same respectively mentioned, shall be transacted and determined within the divisions or limits within which the same shall arise, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling within or near to, or usually acting within, such divisions or limits respectively: and whereas the boundaries of such divisions or limits are in some instances uncertain, and in many have become inconvenient to the inhabitants within the same, from the change or increase of trade or population, or from other causes: and whereas doubts have arisen as to the authority by which such divisions or limits may from time to time be constituted, defined, or altered; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and due provision made for the constituting, defining, and regulating from time to time such divisions or limits, as the convenience of the inhabitants within the same may require:" it is enacted, "that at any time or times after the Michaelmas quarter sessions next following the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace for any county, riding, or division in England or Wales, having a separate commission of the peace, to transmit to the clerk of the peace a statement in writing, signed by such justices, of the parishes, tithings, townships, and places within the same, which, in the opinion of such justices, would form together a convenient and a proper division within and for which special sessions should thenceforward be held; or of any parishes, tithings, townships, or places, which, in the opinion of such justices, ought to be annexed, for the same purposes, to any other division in the said county than those or that of which at the time of making such statement they form part; and that every such statement shall, among other things, set forth within what existing divisions or division, limits or limit, the several parishes, sittings, townships, and places enumerated in the same, are situated or deemed to be; and also whether one or more, and what existing divisions or limits will be altered by such proposed new divisions, or by the change of any place or places from one division to another; and also the names of such justices of the peace as at the date of such statement are usually resident or acting as such within the boundaries of such proposed new division."

Sec. 2. "That at the quarter sessions next following the receipt of every such statement, setting forth such particulars as are above enumerated, and not otherwise, the clerk of the peace shall and he is hereby required to lay the same before such justices of the peace in such sessions assembled; and the justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, having such separate commission of the peace, shall and they are hereby required (except in the cases hereinafter provided for) to proceed, at the quarter sessions next following the laying of such statement before them as aforesaid, to the consideration thereof, and at their discretion to adopt the same wholly or in part, or to reject the same altogether, or to adjourn their determination thereupon to the next or any succeeding quarter sessions."
